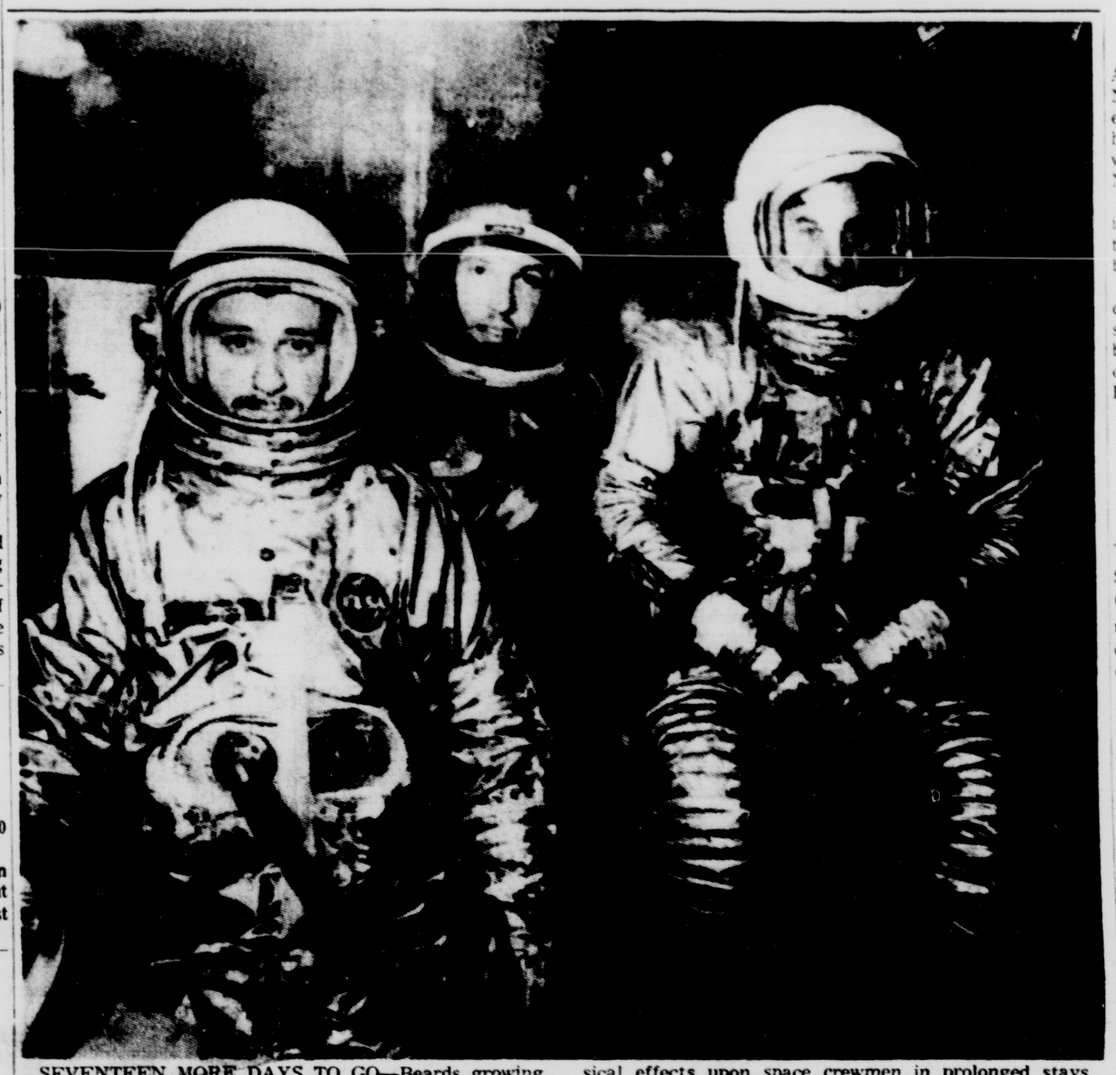
Dynamite Shatters Birmingham Home; Two Other Bombs Found



SEVENTEEN MORE DAYS TO GO—Beards growing behind the face plates of their helmets, three of the fliers in a 34-day space test at Philadelphia aerospace laboratory pass the halfway mark today. Eight Navy and Marine Corps aviators are going through the confinement study to collect and analyze data about physical effects upon space crewmen in prolonged stays in low pressure and pure oxygen breathing conditions. These three, from left, are: Lt. (jg.) William R. McBride of Chadron, O.; Lt. (jg.) Cyrus W. Strickler of Atlanta, Ga.; and Marine Lt. Carl H. Yung of Cincinnati, O. (AP Wirephoto)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A dynamite bomb shattered a Negro home today and two other bombs were disarmed at the homes of Mayor Albert Boutwell and City Councilwoman Nina Miglionico.

Police cars were dispatched immediately to the homes of the eight other council members.

The bomb at Miss Miglionico's house was found on the second step of her front porch by her father when he came out to get the morning paper. Police said he reached inside the bomb and ripped out the timing mechanism.

Police who were dispatched to the mayor's house about a mile away found a bomb at the side of the sprawling brick structure. Officers disarmed it.

There was no warning, no threats of the bombing of the residence of Negro accountant T. L. Crowell across town from the mayor's home.

His son, Weymouth, 13, was treated for a cut hand.

The frightened mother, an elementary school teacher, said he was more frightened than hurt."

It was the first actual bombing in Birmingham since Sept. 24, 1963, when a shrapnel explosive hurled bolts and pieces of metal over a wide area in a quiet Negro neighborhood.

Only a few days before, a bomb killed four Negro children attending Sunday School in the 16th Street Baptist Church. Two other Negroes died in the violent aftermath.

None of the bombings has been solved. Birmingham has had 23 since 1956. All have had racial overtones.

Another American Copter Downed by Viet Cong Fire

By JOHN T. WHEELER

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Communist gunfire downed an American helicopter and killed a U.S. Army gunner on another helicopter in an operation 20 miles west of Saigon today.

Crewmen aboard the downed aircraft were reported safe. The other helicopter had just unloaded Vietnamese rangers and was taking off when its door gunner was hit. The helicopter made it safely back to base.

The Army man was the 316th American killed in combat in Viet Nam since December 1961.

Intelligence reports indicated that 100 to 200 Viet Cong were in the area. There were no immediate reports on the status of the battle.

Two American helicopter crewmen were killed Wednesday, 17 were wounded and four helicopters were shot down in fighting for control of Viet An, a strategic center in the mountains south of the Da Nang air base.

The fighting at Viet An appeared to have died down today. Nine South Vietnamese troops were killed and 20 missing. But U.S. sources said at least 50 Viet Cong also were dead. Two of the downed helicopters were recovered.

A quantity of explosives blew up today in the U.S. Marine ammunition dump at Da Nang air base. No one was injured.

Authorities said they did not know the cause of the explosion but apparently they ruled out sabotage. Personnel and vehicles were evacuated from the area until the fire burned itself out. There were no further explosions.

The U.S. Air Force announced that its huge scorched earth raid Wednesday on Boi Loi forest, 20 miles north of Saigon, failed because of a thunderstorm.

The rain put out fires from tons of napalm, incendiary bombs and fuel oil that had been poured over the 19,000 acres of woods honeycombed with Viet Cong caves, tunnels and fortifications.

One source said heat from the man-made forest fire caused air currents that touched off the thunderstorm.

Newsmen flown over the area today were greeted by heavy Viet Cong ground fire.

Police in Saigon announced the arrest of another Viet Cong terrorist involved in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy. One of the bombers was arrested at the scene and a companion was killed in the blast.

Boycott Plans For Alabama Being Prepared

By GORDON BEARD

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The executive board of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference opens a major planning session today amid indications it will back a proposed economic boycott of Alabama.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the conference president who suggested the "economic withdrawal program" in San Francisco Sunday, made another reference to it Wednesday night at a dinner in his honor.

King said he thought a decision on the boycott would be announced at a news conference called for noon Friday after the closed-door meetings.

"Something must be done to prod the business community and the good people of Alabama."

"Terrible things are happening in Alabama under the administration of Gov. (George C.) Wallace," King said. "Ten persons have been brutally murdered in civil rights demonstrations, there have been untold bombings, and murder is something of a favorite pastime."

King, who has led the voter registration drive in Alabama, said the state "suffers not only from the violence of the bad, but from the silence of the good people."

At an earlier news conference, the winner of the Nobel Peace Prize suggested the proposed boycott is the "kind of

U.S. Navy Tries to Detect Enemy Arms Shipments

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is testing whether magnetic detection gear used to locate submerged submarines can be effective in telling whether Communist junks are loaded with weapons, it was learned today.

Details of the tests are classified, but sources reported they involve the Magnetic Anomaly Detection (MAD) equipment with which all U.S. Navy anti-submarine patrol planes are fitted.

Aircraft of the 7th Fleet have been helping spot junks which might be manned by Communist sailors hauling weapons and ammunition from North Viet Nam to Red forces in South Viet Nam.

The detection job is enormous, with some 70,000 junks operating in those waters, many of them fishing craft and others on innocent voyages.

Actual interception and inspection of suspicious junks is handled by the South Vietnamese navy and its fleet of 550 armed junks.

In one recent week, more than 3,800 junks were inspected, but none proved to be Communist

Carson Man Robbed; Suspect Held

A man was assaulted and robbed early today of $80 in the 100 block of South Sahwatch street, police reported, and another man was being held in connection with the robbery.

Dewey C. Phillips, 43, Ft. Carson, was found by police on the ground near a car, with another man bending over him, at approximately 2:21 a.m. today. As patrolmen D. L. Watts approached, the man standing started to run away and was apprehended.

Phillips told police at headquarters he had pulled into a parking space in the 100 block of South Sahwatch Street to allow another car to go by, and at this time another man walked up to the car and uttered a profane statement to him. Phillips said that during the talk that followed he was hit three times by the other male, and then his car door was opened and he was dragged out. Phillips said the man then began taking his money and billfold away from him, and at this time police arrived.

Phillips was taken to Ent Air Force Base dispensary, where it was discovered he had a one inch laceration on his left cheek, abrasions, and a possible concussion. He was to be moved to Ft. Carson hospital for observation, according to the report.

Police said they are holding Willie E. Holland, 20, Ft. Carson, for investigation of assault and robbery.

Daylight Saving Time Voted by Colorado Senate

By GORDON G. GAUSS

DENVER (AP) — The Senate passed today and sent back to the House a bill which would place Colorado on daylight saving time April 25 and would allow people to vote on the issue at the 1966 election.

The vote was 20-14.

Supporters of the bill could muster only 18 votes — the bare minimum for passage — when the bill was approved on preliminary reading Wednesday.

The Senate made two major changes in a bill previously approved by the House. One provides for the referendum after daylight time has been in effect for two summers. The other extends the daylight time until the last Sunday in October each year, rather than the final Sunday in September.

Votes on the measure shattered party lines.

Before the final vote was taken Sen. John Orcutt, R-Holyoke, an opponent of the bill, attempted to send the bill back to the State Affairs Committee. He was defeated 13-21.

Immediately after the bill passed Sen. Donald D. Kelley,

Ivywild Postal Address Opposed by Spokesman

Would Ivywild mail be addressed to "Ivywild" instead of the present address of Colorado Springs if Ivywild residents vote for incorporation April 8?

An opinion by Colorado Springs Postmaster R. H. Wardwell, that the address would continue to be Colorado Springs, was challenged Wednesday at the last rally of pro-Ivywild incorporation forces.

Victor Maze, spokesman for the Ivywild Incorporation Committee, showed a letter from Wardwell which said mail to Ivywild would probably continue to be addressed Colorado Springs if incorporation is successful.

However Eugene Lyons, 400 Valley Way, who said he was former assistant postmaster of the United States, said the mail naming decision "would be made by the department in Washington, not by the postmaster in Colorado Springs."

One spectator said he signed pro-incorporation petitions because "I was afraid of losing my vote. I do not want to be in Colorado Springs and I do not want to live in Ivywild (if incorporated)."

Applause followed this remark.

Applause also followed statements by proponents of incorporation.

L. H. Buck spoke on the 100-year history of the Ivywild area and the work of the Ivywild Improvement Society and other groups in installing fire hydrants and other improvements by cooperation of the residents.

Buck said that "75 civic minded citizens. . .have contributed more than $1000 in order that you may have the right to vote on this issue of incorporation and not wait until annexation is forced on you."

Clifford Kennell, a member of the incorporation committee, said Ivywild could operate an economical city government, just like the present Ivywild-Cheyenne Canon Fire District. "In a day of rising taxes," he said, "our fire department operates at a lesser mill levy than when it started.

"If you can do it yourself you can do it cheaper and you have

Topless Bathing Suits Headed For Court Test

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm a stripper," said the barmaid. "Except I make more money here. No traveling around. I get to stay in one place."

Irene Ziemer, 23, cast an apprehensive glance around the little beer-and-wine bar, expecting to be arrested any minute.

Three days later she was and a hot legal issue has developed in Southern California.

Irene works in a topless bathing suit. Only what stripteasers call pasties kept her bosom from being completely bare.

Peter Tripp, owner of the bar in Torrance, decided to make a test case when the city passed a law against his scantily clad waitresses.

Torrance police obliged. Tripp, his wife and two waitresses were arrested — giving the courts the spicy legal issue: How much nudity is legal?

In 12 Southern California communities innkeepers thought it worth risking jail to find out.

In nine, however, enforcement of one or more laws succeeded in forcing nudity, as it were, back under cover.

It started two years ago when

Young Millionaire Accused of First Degree Murder

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Young millionaire Timothy W. Nicholson — free on $27,500 bond since December on an open charge of murder in the death of his twin brother, Todd — is in jail today without bail, now accused of first degree murder.

Superior Court Judge H. Burton Noble revoked the Nicholson's bail Wednesday night and ordered him confined after Deputy Dist. Attorney Joseph Carr asked a special hearing under the court's rule of discovery.

Carr said the state has a new witness and evidence that Nicholson, 22, has threatened one prospective witness with a gun since he has been out on bail.

Carr identified the witness as Enrico Bernal, a painter who had worked for Todd. Carr added, "We have information that he (Bernal) saw the defendant kick his brother in the back and tell him: 'I am going to kill you.'"

Carr said Bernal is being held incommunicado for his own protection. Judge Noble also complied with Carr's request that Nicholson's attorneys not be allowed to interview Bernal unless prosecution attorneys are also present.

Judge Noble ordered that Nicholson remain in custody until his trial opens April 12 in Pasadena Superior Court.

Nicholson was freed on bond last December by Alhambra Municipal Judge Fred Butler, who also gave Nicholson permission to leave California and attend to business interests in Phoenix.

'Most Fantastic Drug' Probed by Researchers

By JOHN BARBOUR

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Researchers probed the mysteries Wednesday of what may be one of the most fantastic and weird drugs of all time.

It passes right through your skin, enhances the action of other drugs, kills pain, relieves inflammation, stops the growth of some bacteria, tranquilizes, acts as a diuretic and heavens knows what else.

It's called DMSO — short for dimethyl sulfoxide — and the doctors who use it experimentally are almost as amazed at what it does, as some of their experimental patients.

It is a potent solvent, has wide industrial uses, and will dissolve your clothes if they are made of synthetic fibers like rayon, polyurethane and acrylics.

But as a drug it is not yet ready for presciption use by doctors, has only been used experimentally, but is showing some very unusual results. It may be years away from federal approval.

Dr. Stanley W. Jacob of the University of Oregon Medical School said toxicity tests have been and are being run in a number of animals, and so far the compound appears to have a low toxicity.

There were three reports on the drug and its uses to a science writer's seminar held by the American Cancer Society. Drs. Sam Jacob, Edward E. Rosenbaum of the University of Oregon, and Arthur L. Schrerbel of the Cleveland (Ohio) Clinic, made the reports.

— The drug gave pain relief to persons with superficial second-degree burns of the hand and forearm, and for some third-degree burns.

— It has relieved pain and reduced swelling in twisted ankles.

— In some cases of acute bursitis — severe shoulder pain and inflammation — the drug has relieved pain, and for most patients helps bring recovery in from one to seven days.

— It relieves pain in common arthritis—but does not cure it.

— In scleroderma, a progressive and deforming disease that begins with the skin, and leads to internal organs, the drug has dramatically helped nine of ten patients. It stopped pain and cleared up ulcers of the fingertips, relaxed the tight leathery skin and made hands mobile and strong again.

It seems to have a dissolving effect on collagen — the tough fibers of the body's connective tissue, and could be useful in diseases involving abnormal collagen.

March Roars to New Record in Springs Area

March exited like a sluggish lion Wednesday but during the first 30 days of its reign, it roared its way to a new record in Colorado Springs.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Peterson Field said this was the coldest March ever experienced here since the Signal Corps began keeping records shortly after the founding of the city.

The average temperature was 26.6 degrees compared to a normal of 36 degrees. This topped some of the previous chilly Marches when 27.6 was recorded in 1906; 27.8 in 1924, and 29.3 in 1912.

The mean maximum temperature was 37 against a normal of 50 degrees; mean minimum was 14 compared to a normal of 23 degrees.

The angry lion breathed its last fury on Tuesday when the mercury hovered around the 40-degree mark, and settled down on Wednesday when it reached 66 degrees, the highest temperature recorded for the month.

The previous all-time high was 80 degrees noted on March 28, 1963.

The lowest was a -7 recorded on the 19th and 25th, compared to a previous all-time low of -16 noted on March 2, 1943.

Snow fell on 19 days, contributing 1.12 inches of moisture

LBJ Willing to Talk Peace in Viet Nam Only If Reds Stop Attacks, NATO Told

PARIS (UPI)—The United States told its North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) allies today President Johnson is willing to take part in Viet Nam peace talks—but only if Communist aggression ceases.

U.S. Under-secreary of State George W. Ball assured the NATO Permanent Council this remains Washington's policy. But he said that so far the Communists have shown no readiness to negotiate themselves.

Ball gave the council a 30-minute report on American policy in Viet Nam.

NATO sources that there was general agreement among council members that means for opening peace talks should continue to be explored. The sources said it also was agreed that the risk of Communist expansion in Southeast Asia remains higher.

French NATO delegate Pierre de Leusse said his government also still favors Viet Nam peace negotiations. He added that desire for peace is high among the Vietnamese people who have been at war continuously for 25 years.

NATO sources said Ball gave the council a full rundown on the U.S. government's position on Viet Nam as it already has been made known in statements by Johnson and other government officials.

The sources said Ball reiterated Johnson's willingness to negotiate if the Communists ceased aggression. But they said he gave no new information beyond what generally was known.

British Disarmament Minister Lord Chalfont was reported to have announced the British government's strong support for the United States in Viet Nam.

Squeeze Play Planned for Education Bill

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leaders are perfecting a squeeze play they hope may deliver the House - passed $1.3- billion education aid bill intact to President Johnson next week.

But Southern opponents of the administration's voting rights bill and critics of the school measure could upset this timing if they choose to offer controversial amendments and talk at length.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said in an interview he has tentative assurances that the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee will act on the bill next Tuesday. If it does, he said he will try to bring it up in the Senate on Wednesday.

Unless Southerners resort to delaying tactics, Mansfield said he believes the bill can be passed in three days. But he lacks any indication, he said, whether the voting rights opponents may use this opportunity to stall consideration of the latter measure.

The Senate has ordered its Judiciary Committee to return the voting rights measure to it by April 9. But Mansfield said that if the school bill is then before the Senate, he will oppose laying it aside for the voting measure.

While the administration apparently has the votes to get the education aid legislation out of committee without major changes, leaders are uncertain what will happen if Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., attempts to amend it to make its provisions readily subject to court review.

Ervin succeeded by a 45-33 vote in attaching an amendment for court tests of parochial school aid provisions in a college education bill passed in 1963 by the Senate. The Ervin amendment was tossed out by a Senate-House Conference Committee and the measure became law without it.

As this year's measure came out of the House, it carries indirect aid to parochial schools which might be pinpointed in court challenges on constitutional grounds. The administration has tried to avoid this issue by its piecemeal approach to aid.

The measure would provide $1.06 billion in grants to local public school districts, to be used to meet special needs of educationally deprived children. These would include special service for non-public school pupils.

It would provide $100 million in grants for establishing supplemental educational services and centers, available to all elementary and secondary school children. Another $100 million would go to the states for purchase of textbooks and instructional material for use in public and private schools.

Lesser grants provided included $45 million for educational research and $25 million for state educational program planning.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen has predicted that the voting rights legislation can be passed by the Senate without a filibuster.

Mansfield said he thinks two weeks of debate on it should be sufficient. He said he would be in favor of acting then to get a debate limitation. Since 67 senators have joined in sponsoring the legislation, leaders are confident of obtaining the approval of two-thirds of those voting necessary to end debate.

Preparing Tax Forms Take Much Time

By MARGERY McELHENY

CHICAGO (UPI) — The income tax deadline is April 15, work and late hours for the average wage earner who studies the fine print in hopes of saving a few dollars.

You can assist your husband in computing his tax return by making sure his working environment is well planned.

He will need adequate working space, if possible a room out of bounds to the family. Make space on the desk or table, sharpen plenty of pencils and have scratch paper and carbon paper ready.

You can arrage these materials in date order: old checkbooks, cancelled checks, last year's return and estimate withholding statements, last last year's return and estimate form, new form 1040S and schedules.

An official internal revenue service rule book plus one of the excellent income tax guides now available at bookstores and newsstands are helpful.

Proper lighting is instrumental in avoiding eye strain, especially when paper work is done under artificial light. If you spend long periods of visual concentration under such lighting your eyes can become tired and your general sense of well being is liable to suffer, say researchers of the Murine Co.

To avoid eye strain, cut down some of the overhead light and add a desk lamp. This will give a softer light with adequate illumination for reading. The minimum lamp size recommended is one with a 15-inch base and a translucent shade 10 inches deep. A 100-watt bulb is preferable.

However, the lamp should not be the only source of lighting but should serve as a supplement to overall background lighting. Try to avoid glare and be sure the light is focused on the work, not on the eyes.

Focusing the eyes on distant objects for a few seconds will help relieve eye fatigue caused by a long session at the desk. Squeeze the eyelids togther at intervals to relax eye muscles. Winking and blinking slowly are also good exercises. A few drops of eye lotion also help soothe eyes irritated by overconcentration.

You should also make sure your husband is aware of the more important tax changes:

—Don't overlook the "minimum standard deduction." Now $200 may be deducted plus $100 for each exemption claimed on the return.

—You may now exclude the first $100 of dividends received instead of the previous $50 tax free.

—If you use your car for business, instead of itemizing expenses such as gas, oil and insurance, you can deduct 10 cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles and 7 cents a mile after. But you can no longer deduct fees for license plates or driver's licenses, or taxes paid on tobacco, cigarettes or alcoholic beverages.

—Moving expenses resulting from a job change may be deducted including the cost of transporting your household goods as well as meals and lodging for you and your family enroute.

—Taxpayers over 65 can now deduct all drug and medical expenses. Any gain from sale of their residence is tax-free if the sales price is $20,000 or less.

—Should your income fluctuate widely from year to year you may be eligible for a new way of computing tax called "income averaging" so ask your local IRS office for the special form required.

HEARTENING NEWS

NEW YORK (UPI) — It is now possible to reduce the risk of heart attacks and strokes, says the American Heart Association in its 1964 annual report.

The report named high fat diets and cigarette smoking as risk factors singled out for special attention in a campaign directed both to the public and the medical profession last year.

Old Courier Outlasts Many Ambassadors

"Hear! Hear!" they shouted Wednesday when Counselor John O. Killick noted that as embassy courier for 42 years Barksdale has "seen through, worn out and outlasted 11 British ambassadors and 18 foreign secretaries."

At 65, Barksdale was retiring to return to his native Massachusetts. He regrets diplomacy is "not nearly as stuffed shirt as it used to be."

As he put it: "I'm old-fashioned and the stuffed shirt business made me feel, 'Oh, I'm working for high class people.'"

New Haven to Be Sold to Penn-Central

By KEN HARTNETT

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The New Haven Railroad, short on cash but rich in assets, has agreed to sell virtually all it has to a merged Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroad system.

The sale, estimated at $140 million, would assure continuation of the bankrupt line's freight service, considered a vital part of New England's economy.

But it leaves the fate of the New Haven's profitless passenger and commuter system in the hands of state and federal officials.

They must come up with funds to salvage an operation the railroad's trustees said has lost $135 million in the past 10 years.

The transaction, dependent on Interstate Commerce Commission-New York Central merger, specifically exempts the purchase from any obligation to keep the passenger service going.

The New Haven's trustees, announcing the agreement Wednesday, said Pennsylvania and Central officials "have expressed a willingness to continue operations of the New Haven's passenger service if suitable arrangements with public authorities can be made."

The trustees were not counting on governmental subsidies. They said they were proceeding with "all appropriate steps" for elimination of all passenger service by July 29.

"By then they (public officials) will have had a full four years to act, knowing from the outset of bankruptcy that passenger service was in jeopardy," said trustee Richard Joyce Smith. "We can't operate without resources."

Under the agreement, the New Haven, in bankruptcy since July 1961 and in the red since 1957, would sell almost all of its buildings, equipment, land and other physical assets and investments. The package was valued by the trustees at $375 million as of Dec. 31, 1963.

In return, the New Haven would receive 950,000 shares of common stock of the combined system, $23 million in bonds, and $8 million in cash. The New Haven would also retain various assets valued at $27 million.

The Pennsy-Central would also assume certain New Haven debts. These totaled some $29 million as of Dec. 31, 1963, which would be the starting date for the agreement.

Circus Comes Back To New York 'Garden'

The big show opens for 39 days. Crews of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus were busy today converting the Eighth Avenue sports arena into a vast stage for laughs and thrills, animals and clowns.

There was the traditional preview peek Wednesday as the animals paraded to the garden from the Harlem River yards in the Bronx.

Three Sentenced for Attack on American

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique (AP) — Two Portuguese sailors and a Martinique youth have been sentenced by a French court for the fatal attack on American composer Marc Blitzstein. They were convicted of assault and theft.

Blitzstein, 58, was attacked in a Fort de France slum Jan. 22, 1964. He was found dying on the sidewalk. About $400 apparently stolen from the composer was found in the sailors' cabin aboard a fishing vessel.

Armando Fernandes, 27, was sentenced to three years in prison, and Alfredo Rodriguez, 35, to 14 months. Both are from Madeira.

The youth, now 18, was not identified because of his age. He was given a suspended sentence of 14 months and put on probation for three years.

NEGROES RAISE FUND FOR WHITE WIDOW

DALLAS (UPI) — A fund sponsored by a negro minister group has raised $500 for the widow of a white man slain by two Negroes in a holdup.

Two 17-year-old Negro youths were accused of the slaying of William J. Flowers, 53, during the New Year holidays. A spokesman for the International Ministerial Alliance said he hoped the widow's fund would reach at least $2,000.

SCIENCE LESS GOLDEN

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bright youngsters are veering away from the physical sciences in their choice of a career. They are turning toward the humanities, the social sciences and teaching, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers (PTA) The shift in career goals was noted in a six-year survey of National Merit Scholarship semi-finalists.

Hamburg Mayor Finds Out About U.S. Hamburgers

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) —The only thing the Lord Mayor of Hamburg is sure about, when it comes to the American hamburger, is that it didn't come from Hamburg.

Lord Mayor Paul Nevermann admits he never even has eaten one. So he was a little nonplussed recently when American hamburger mogul James Schindler of Chicago (vice president of McDonalds) presented him with a plaque to honor the hamburger.

The Lord Mayor, a polite man, took it and said thank you. But he didn't seem too sure what it was he was being grateful for.

Schindler himself did not explain too clearly why the plaque went to Hamburg. He told United Press International the first hamburger may have come from Russia.

"It goes back to medieval Russia," he said. "They ate their hamburger raw."

But no such American institution as the hamburger could be left entirely with Russian ancestry. Cincinnati and St. Louis come into the hamburger story, too. Mainly St. Louis.

(German beer halls, to digress, merely serve the chopped raw beef atop a buttered half of a hard crusty roll, sprinkle on minced onion, salt and pepper. The beer cooks the beef in the stomach, they say. In plush German, French and Swiss restaurants the gourmet mixes his raw beef with the raw yolk of an egg, a splash of catsup, a few capers, pinches of salt and pepper and parika, dros of vinegar and olive oil and a spoonful of diced raw onion — all mixed and served with no vegetables. No American hamburger stand would recognize it.)

In the salad days of the Hanseatic League — the band of North German cities that sent trading ships around the world —German sailors carried Beefsteak Tartare home to Hamburg. German women, not given to frills in the kitchen, cooked the chopped beef.

But Germans eat this "Hamburger" mostly cold — and without the bun. They call it a "boulette," a French word, or a "Frikadelle" in German.

Then the hamburger crossed the Atlantic.

Schindler said German emigrants took their version of the hamburger early in the 19th century to Cincinnati—but the real birth of the hamburger as Americans know it today took place at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair. When an enterprising gent began selling hot hamburgers in a bun. An institution was born.

Mustard, mayonnaise, catsup, pickles, tomatoes, lettuce and the other trimmings crept in as time went along and until the hamburger became not only a snack but a frightening statistic.

LITTLE SNOW IN ROME

ROME (AP) —Rome has had snow only 101 times since 1900. That counts even flurries lasting only long enough to whiten the ground, and still amounts to less than two snowfalls per year.

Dr. Seagrave Wanted His Hospital to Continue

By PETER BOOG

Namhkam, Burma (Delayed) (AP) — Thousands of hill people poured into this small Burma town on the edge of Red China on Tuesday to pay respects to Burma surgeon Gordon Seagrave, who died Sunday.

Shans, Kachins, Karens, Chinese and Burmese — the tribespeople Seagrave had served for 43 years — came by foot, mule and cart to attend funeral services set for Wednesday and burial in a simple grave at his beloved hospital, between his sister, who died in 1951, and his eldest son, who was drowned at the outbreak of World War II.

Despite the seriousness if his illness and a lack of modern medical equipment that might have saved his life, the renowned American misstionary doctor stubbornly refused to leave the home he had carved out of the North Burma jungle.

Seagrave's adoring staff tenderly dressed his body in his only blue suit and dark blue tie. His body was placed in a coffin in the hall of his small cottage where hundreds of those whose lives he had saved paid homage.

At the head of the coffin was big cross of roses inscribed with the words: "To Daddy Seagrave from Your Beloved Nurses."

Among the mourners were a few who had crossed the border from Communist China, a stone's throw from the hospital.

Seagrave's sons John and Sterling and John's wife and two children, who flew here from the United States, participated in the service.

Afterward, Sterling showed me Seagrave's sparely furnished room. "He chose it because it was the smallest in the house," Sterling said.

It has one small collapsible bed, a bookcase containing his favorite books and a writing desk. He spent many hours a day bent over this desk writing letters, making medical notes and keeping his diary. His one recent luxury was electricity — but even so the lights are dim and flicker off and on through the night.

Sterling said the main cause of his father's death was overwork. His 18-hour-a-day schedule throughout his life, often five to six major operations daily, had finally taken its toll.

He suffered from every conceivable sickness one can pick up in the jungles, including chronic bronchitis, malaria, dysentery and beri beri, said his American assistant, Dr. Joe Newhall.

An autopsy report said Seagrave's "heart failed as a result of widespread infection from chronic bronchitis."

He had three specially trusted nurses constantly at his side ever since he took to his sickbed in the last week of February. His last wish was to remain alive until his sons and grandchildren arrived here. He never had seen his eight grandchildren.

He gathered enough strength to whisper and caress them when they arrived with John last week.

Burma's revolutionary government flew in the best cardiologist in the country, Dr. Ronald Lwin, to examine Seagrave. He brought specialized equipment flown from Thailand.

Unexpectedly, Seagrave took a turn for the better and his oxygen tent was removed from the room Friday.

He called his two sons into his room and said: "My work is done, I have been lucky to have seen you all again before I die. No2 it's time for me to go home."

The words came out haltingly and he was exhausted as he finished.

He slept fitfully Saturday night. A final crisis struck Sunday morning. Nurses dashed for oxygen and Newhall rushed into the room. It was too late.

In his will Seagrave asked for burial at Namhkam Hospital and that work there continue as before.

Only Half of Sheep's Ears Can Be Cut

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — There are a lot of things distinctively western about the current session of the Wyoming legislature, but perhaps nothing more so than the sheepman's legislation.

And there has been plenty of it—bills that to the urban dweller seem useless, even humorous.

For example, this Wyoming legislature has passed a bill which has been signed into law making it unlawful to cut off or mutilate more than one-half the ear or ears of any sheep.

When this bill was introduced on the floor it drew smiles from a few of the urban representatives. But Rep. Joseph Burke, R-Natrona, president of the Wyoming Wool Growers Association, explained its purpose.

Most sheep in Wyoming are identified by a brand on the lower part of the sheep's ear, Burke said. All a rustler had to do was cut the sheep's ear off and its owner had no way of identifying the animal. Under Wyoming's new law, which carries up to a five-year prison sentence, sheep rustling will be lots more difficult.

It also will be easier to kill another person's dog, legally, after this session of the legislature.

Last fall, the city council of Powell in the northwestern part of the state announcd it ssupport of lgislation to control rampaging dog packs that roamed the countryside at night killing sheep.

On several occasions, the dog's bloody tracks were followed from the scene of their slaughter back to their homes in the city, their owners unaware their pets had left home.

The ranchers decided to take their problem to the legislature. And they got results. The legislation allows the owner of livestock to kill dogs caught running with his stock, without the consent of the dog owner.

And probably no other state legislature this year, in the West or elsewhere, talked about buffalo in its political halls.

But for two days, the Wyoming House of Representatives discussed a bill to classify the buffalo as a game animal. The bill, said sponsors, was designed to protect the buffalo.

It was voted down in the House, then approved on another reconsideration of the vote. It was sent to the Senate which failed to take any action on it immediately.

The group portrays the early day fur traders, who carrying their beaver traps on their shoulders and cradling their long rifles in their arms, were the first white men to penetrate the rugge mountains of Wyoming.

STAMP JACKPOT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Mrs. Donna Bechhoefer got the surprise of her life upon dropping a dime in an automatic stamp vending machine at a neighborhood post office near her home. As she stood amazed, out pumped 1,000 postage stamps before the machine stopped. And that was not all. A total of $1.40 in change popped out. But postal authorities came over and claimed all the "windfall."

$13 Million Is Cut From Research Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee cut $13 million from the military hardware and research authorization bill Wednesday but included unasked millions for an advanced bomber and two additional nuclear submarines.

The authorization measure — totaling $15,284,000,000 — was approved unanimously by the committee.

The bill includes $82 million extra to hasten "development of an advanced manned bomber" and $136.6 million for two more nuclear submarines than had been requested by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara. In the past, the Pentagon has refused to use extra funds voted by Congress for manned bombers.

In other budgetary action Wednesday, a House subcommittee increased the space agency's proposed authorization for advanced research and technology to $743,970,850 — up $36,9850 over the administration's request.

Cuts in other places partially offset the increase of $27.2 million for three projects which had been halted for budgetary reasons by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Clemency Hearing Is Still Possible

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI)—Gov. William H. Avery said today his office had determined it would be possible for condemned killers Richard Eugene Hickock and Perry Edward Smith to have a clemency hearing before their execution date.

Avery had indicated Tuesday it might be impossible since such a hearing requires a 30-day period of notice. The execution date is April 14.

University Says Co-Ed Record Good

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The University of Oregon will try again at getting parents' reaction to women students checking out for overnight stays.

But it isn't likely to ask again whether it's all right for the girls to sign out for overnight stays in men's apartments.

The Legislature is in session and State Rep. Stafford Hansell said he has asked the chancellor to explain to the Ways and Means Committee, which decides the fate of higher education's budget, why the university had put that question to parents.

'Out of line," he said.

The committee meets today but the explanation was set over until next week when it discusses the budget for dormitory construction.

University officials say that until Chancellor Roy Lieuallen goes before the committee, they will not go beyond a statement issued by the office of President Arthur Flemming saying the university has never approved or permitted such conduct.

But a source close to the university said, "I don't think they expected parents to say it was o.k."

Whatever they expected, when the replies started coming back, a number were marked in the "yes" square opposite the question on whether women students could check out of their campus living quarters for a night at the home of men friends.

Francis B. Nickerson, associate dean of students, said a surprising number of cards had been so checked. He said he didn't know how many. The president's office said it didn't know either, adding: "The cards haven't been tabulated."

Questionnaire cards have been used at Oregon for 21 years as a guide on parents' wishes. New categories — including the new overnight questions — were added this year "to ascertain more precisely the wishes of parents under all possible circumstances," the statement said.

Dean Nickerson said he thought the whole episode an unfair reflection on students. Only 1½ per cent of the student body is ever called in for discipline, he said. And he added that in one two-week stretch this year not a single student had been arrested.

"What other community of 10,000 has so good a record?" he asked.

NEW ENVOY

MADRID, Spain (AP) —Angier Biddle Duke, who for four years as chief of protocol presented new envoys to American presidents, today was presented to the Spanish chief of state in Madrid as the new U.S. ambassador to Spain.

Duke, 49, and his staff rode to the National Palace in horse-drawn royal carriages with an escort of mounted lancers to present credentials to Gen. Francisco Franco.

Negro Intruder Is Killed in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — City Patrolman C. R. Nichols shot and killed a Negro man in the home of two white women shortly after midnight.

Elsie M. Brister, 58, told officers the intruder threw her to the floor in a rape attempt a moment before he heard the policeman arrive and started running. She was unharmed.

Police identified the dead man as Willie Beard, 21, of Grand Prairie, a Fort Worth-Dallas suburb.

Nichols and other officers related these details:

Mrs. Brister, a widow, was in bed when she heard someone trying to break in the front door of the home she shares with Ida Gregory, who is 78 and partly paralyzed.

While she was telephoning police, the prowler slit a back door screen with a knife to get inside. He caught her after a brief chase and hurled her to the floor of an enclosed porch.

Nichols arrived at that point and fired three shots as Beard dashed into the kitchen. Two bullets struck him and he collapsed in a hallway.

Missionaries Find Ocean Is Too Much

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — On March 15, two ministers and two brothers set sail in a 36-foot schooner on a mission to Christianize the natives of South Seas islands. More than 50 friends and relatives gathered dockside to bid them bon voyage.

Today they are back in this Southern California port village, after a voyage that wasn't so bon.

They got seasick, explained the Rev. Lyle T. Burchette upon their return Wednesday.

Further, he said: "Each one of us thought the other was well experienced in the ways of the ocean before we left, but we found out otherwise once we got on the other side of San Clemente Island." (San Clemente Island is visible from the mainland on a clear day.)

After leaving Oxnard, the Rev. Mr. Burchette said, they sailed south to San Pedro and then south again to San Diego, where the journey ended.

The Rev. Mr. Burchette, 32, associate pastor of the Central Assembly of God Church in nearby Ventura, was accompanied by the Rev. Hendrick Den Haring, 34, an evangelist from Rotterdam, Holland; the boat's owner and skipper, Blair Wilber, 30, of San Pedro, and Wilber's brother Allen, 28, a former Navy lieutenant.

The men planned the venture for more than a year and hoped to establish churches in Hawaii, Guam and ultimately the Marshall Islands, 5,000 miles away.

But because of their seasickness and inexperience in ocean-going, they spent only four days at sea, sailing a total of 200 miles.

The mission will not be entirely abandoned, however, he said. They took with them 5,000 Bibles, 6,000 pounds of religious tracts and a half ton of other religious materials and, said The Rev. Mr. Burchette, "we are going to mail it all to as many post offices as we can find in the Pacific."

Flood Danger Reported in Midwest Areas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Snow and snow mixed with rain fell on snow-covered areas in the northern Midwest today, increasing dangers of flooding in some areas.

Soaking rains continued during the night along the Southern California coast but tapered off in northern and central California and in northern Washington. The precipitation in Southern California was the heaviest of the winter season which was one of its driest in history.

Up to three inches of snow fell in Park Falls, Wis., Marquette, Mich., and at Duluth, Minn. Similar amounts were indicated in other parts of the northern Great Lakes region. Snow measured three feet at Duluth.

Fairly cold weather prevailed in northern areas in the eastern half of the nation with lowest temperatures reported in northern New York. Early morning temperatures ranged from 8 above at Rome, N.Y., to 77 at Key West, Fla.

King has said he would ask consumers to boycot Alabama products, ask labor unions to refuse to transport or use materials grown or manufactured in Alabama, and ask the federal government to withdraw funds from federal projects within the state.

King said the SCLC meeting also would serve as a brief respite to assess past developments in the civil rights movement and "to see where we go from here."

Cosmetics Tycoon Helena Rubinstein Dies at Age 94

NEW YORK (AP) — Helena Rubinstein, 94, cosmetics executive, died today.

She had worked at her Fifth Avenue office Monday, then became ill and was taken to New York Hospital Tuesday night.

She had been in the cosmetics business 63 years. Her firm now is a $100-million annual business.

Her career began by accident in Melbourne, Australia, while she was visiting her uncle's ranch.

The Ausiralian housewives, with faces dried and roughened by the climate, began to borrow the facial cream she had brought with her from her native Poland.

She sent home for more and soon realized that she was spending most of her time advising women on beauty care. So she opened her own salon in Melbourne in 1902. A year and a half later she left Australia with $100,000 in profits.

She operated salons in London and Paris before coming to New York in 1915.

Miss Rubinstein was married twice. Her first husband was Edward Titus, an American she met in Australia and married in London in 1908. Her only immediate survivor, Roy Titus, board chairman of Helena Rubinstein, Inc., was born of this marriage. The Tituses were divorced in 1932.

Her second husband was Georgian Prince Artchil Gourielli-Tchkonia, who died the year after their 1937 marriage.

In an interview seven years ago, Miss Rubinstein was asked how she maintained her busy schedule.

"Keep healthy," she replied. "9nd always do first the things you most dislike to do. With them out of the way, you then will find you have plenty of time left to do what you want."

against a normal of .61 inches. This gave the city an excess of .51 inch. Total precipitation for the year is 1.98 inches, with an excess of .75 inch.

The skies were clear on eight days, partly cloudy on six days, and cloudy on 17 days.

There were 11 days when the maximum temperature was 32 degrees or below, and 30 days when the minimum was 32 or below. On five days, residents shivered when the minimum was zero or below.

Spring officially made her entrance at 1:05 p.m. on March 20 but the announcement didn't convince residents who bundled up for the 24 degree weather that accompanied her.

To residents, spring really arrived Wednesday, when light wraps were substituted for heavy topcoats, boots were cast aside, and shoppers invaded the stores to examine the new season's collections.

April, only a few hours into her reign, promised fair and sunny weather today, when by 10 a.m. she had sent the mercury up towards the 50-degree mark, just nine degrees short of her average high.

Mrs. Geddy was born in Florissant, Colo., Feb. 12, 1904. She was a member of the Episcopal Church. Besides her husband she is survived by a brother, Rolland Wilson, of Colorado Springs, and a sister, Virginia Hall.

Ivywild Postal Address Proposed by Proponent

the pride of having accomplished something."

The vote of incorporation will be April 8 in Ivywild School, two days after the Colorado Springs city election.

Lee Dorr, another worker for incorporation, explained that the proposed 6-mill property levy for Ivywild would provide $51,000 in revenue and the highway users tax would bring in another $12,000, by conservative estimates. He said this $63,000 in revenue would more than pay for the estimated city operating expenses of $59,400.

Maze reported on pending bills before the state legislature to aid annexation of unincorporated areas like Ivywild by cities.

Lyons pointed out that an elected city council could not be held to the incorporation committee's 6-mill levy ceiling.

Replied Maze, "We have always run our affairs in Ivywild in a conservative manner."

Lyons praised the work of the Ivywild Improvement Society.

Gov. John Love's brother, Richard Love, said a pending bill before the legislature would require a $600 minimum salary for policemen in cities.

the restaurants catering to businessmen decided to hold noon-time fashion shows. They hired pretty girls to model bikinis, shorty nightgowns and lingerie, and discovered a formula: The more girls showed, the more customers showed.

Then came the topless suit fashion shows.

While emergency city ordinances, arrests, threatened arrests, injunctions, trials and appeals confused the legal situation, a few bar owners followed the nudity formula one step further with topless waitresses.

And that's how Irene Ziemer, 34-23-34, ended up at the Torrance Police Station.

Like her co-defendants, she pleaded innocent at her arraignment, and asked for a jury trial. It is set for April 13.

Most of the small, independent cities where topless shows or waitresses appeared passed local ordinances against them. At issue is the knotty legal problem called pre-emption. Can cities control nudity, or is it a state matter?

Says attorney Phill Silver, who is assisting a Pico Rivera restaurateur's fight against an anti-topless suit ordinance:

"We feel, 1. That the state has pre-empted the field; there's a state law that says a crime is committed when the public decency is outraged; and 2. That nudity for the sake of nudity is not criminally indecent. Can public agencies prevent the display of nudity under certain circumstances?"

If high courts feel nudity is to be prosecuted only under the state law, arresting officers will have to produce members of the public whose decency was outraged by seeing bare-breasted women. Easily outraged people don't frequent such places, attorneys contend.

Horse Steak Returns to Harvard Club

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The end of a horse meat shortage has settled a stew at the Harvard University Faculty Club.

Since the meat rationing days of World War II, horse steak has been a standard item at the Harvard club. Fifteen to 20 orders a day are served with a special mushroom sauce.

But three weeks ago the club was told by New York meat brokers that horse meat was so scarce they couldn't fill the club's regular six-week order of 200 pounds.

So the steak, which sells for $1.50 at luncheon and $2 at dinner, was taken from the menu.

Today, however, word was spread for the benefit of the horse meat lovers that although sirloin of horse was still in short supply, 200 pounds of tenderloin could be expected by the weekend.

weapons smugglers and they were allowed to go their way.

The idea behind using the MAD gear is that U.S. patrol planes thus might be able to tell, in passing over a junk, whether it had large quantities of metal below decks.

If effective, this would reduce the needle in a haystack character of the present inspection operation. It would provide a method of sorting out the suspicious from the innocent without having to halt, board and examine each junk.

As presently used in antisubmarine warfare, the magnetic detection device records the presence of massive metal, such as a submarine hull, below water. The effect of the metal is registered on the patrol plane's equipment.

However, there appears to be some question as to whether this gear is sensitive enough to inspect junks from the air.

R-Denver, one of its supporters moved for reconsideration. A vote was called and the motion lost 13-21. Kelley's move was taken to "lock up" the bill.

Under Senate rules any senator can ask for reconsideration within 48 hours after a bill passes. Only one reconsideration can be granted, however. Kelley's motion had the effect of preventing any opponent of the bill from seeking reconsideration later when advocates might not have all their supporters on the floor.

Rep. Donald Strait, D-Aurora, original House sponsor of the bill, has indicated he would accept the changes made by the Senate.

If the House concurs in the Senate amendments, the measure will go to Gov. John A. Love for signature or veto.

The governor has given no indication of his intention.

There have been frequent fights in the legislature for daylight time ever since World War II that have ended in failure.

A major factor in passage of the bill this year was the reapportionment of legislative seats, basing both the House and Senate allocations on a population basis. This had the effect of increasing urban and suburban strength in reducing strength of more thinly populated areas.

Only one Denver senator — Democrat Clarence Decker — voted against the bill and only two suburban senators — Andy Lucas, D-Westminster and Allen Williams, Commerce City — OPposed it.

Golf Hacker Cuts Down Clump of Trees

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP(— A hacker apparently got tired of hitting his second shots from behind a clump of trees on the fifth hole at Eastwood Golf Club.

Tuesday night, he cut down four of the trees.

"Used to be, if you hit over there, your only chance was to roll the ball and hope you got it between the tree trunks," said club manager Jack Horton Wednesday. "Now you could hit a wedge.

"We've had people threaten to cut down those trees for a long time jokingly," said Horton. "Now, someone has actually done it."

The four small hickory trees "about the thickness of your leg" were located a little to the right of center in the fairway. Just a little push would land the golfer squarely behind them.

Dynamite Shatters Home in Birmingham to those found today, were discovered last week in predominately Negro neighborhoods. Police said none exploded because of a defect in their assemblies.

The mayor was in Washington for a meeting, but his son, Albert Jr., was home.

The blast at the Crowell home wrecked a garage in the rear. Police said the explosive had been placed in the alley about 25 feet from the house. The garage separated the house from the bomb and took the full force of the explosion.

No motive was established immediately for the Crowell bombing. Neither Crowell nor his wife is publicly involved in civil rights work.

The blast shattered windows in many of the surrounding residences. Huge chunks of brick were littered in the back yards. Some landed atop two cars parked in a driveway.

The roof of the garage was caved in.

The Crowell home is flanked and fronted by well-kept Negro homes, most of them brick, single-story structures.

There was no apparent structural damage to the Crowell residence other than a couple of loose boards and shattered windows.

Students Stage Spring Pilgrimage to Beaches

Associated Press Writer

They started swarming to the beaches at Daytona and Fort Lauderdale the third week in March — vacationing collegians temporarily released from their books and pleasure-bent for sun and surf.

It was the annual spring pilgrimage from the campus which was expected to reach its peak Easter week.

This year there also was another growing exodus, a segment of the student population pasing up the holiday fun for civil rights causes.

And "some actually plan to go home for the holidays," said a spokesman at Washington and Lee University.

The first 10,000 pilgrims to the Florida beaches came from the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky. Many more thousands were expected.

"They'll be back with their suntans and I'll be very envious of them," said Ohio State Dean John Bonner.

Generally, the campuses of the South and East and Midwest pour out students toward Florida, Bermuda and Nassau; the West sends water skiiers to the spring runoff on the Pecos River at Carlsbad, N.M., and surfers to Mazatlan and Guaymas in Mexico and to Los Angeles.

One group of University of Utah students took a fling at Las Vegas' gambling tables.

The word among the fraternity brothers at the University of Missouri was that West Palm Beach would be the Florida spot this season. At the University of Virginia the "in" sites were Bermuda and Nassau.

For Duke men the message was Nassau and at least three fraternities chartered boats to take several hundred students there.

The popular Daytona and Fort Lauderdale spots prepared for the usual thousands. The Daytona Beach City Council appropriated $10,000 for entertainment — and to hire reserve policemen to handle an anticipated 800,000-100,000 youthful visitors.

"We are filled up with collegians and are completely booked up until after Easter," said one motel owner. "Conduct has been pretty good but of course there are a few who get carried away."

The last sentence referred to the way the collegiate spring rites have sometimes gotten out of hand.

Not rivaling the pleasure seekers in number was the movement of students to join in civil rights projects.

These included Notre Dame undergraduates preparing to help rebuild a bombed Negro church in Mississipppi and make a study of Chicago's slums for a tutoring program. There were Boston University students planning to demonstrate in Washington or participate in a voter registration project in Raleigh, N.C.

Some Methodist students at Indiana University prepared to travel to Mississippi and two dozen from the University of Kansas planned to join in civil rights projects in Jonesboro and Bogalusa, La.

"In general, the students who are going to Florida are a different group from those involved in civil rights protests," remarked Dean Jack Matthews of the University of Missouri.

The Rev. James Hine, a Presbyterian minister associated with the University of Illinois, agreed but added: "The Fort Lauderdale crowd is still with us. I think a certain segment (of the student body) will want to get away from responsibility."

Dog Kidnapers Are Caught by New York Cops

NEW YORK (AP) — A tale of dognappers ended Wednesday night with the arrest of two men on charges of burglary and attempted extortion.

A 12-year-old spitz terrier named Tuffy was involved.

Police said two men ransacked the apartment of Mabel Wayne, 64, of the Bronx Tuesday night and took $65, a wrist watch, a portable radio — and Tuffy.

Later, Mrs. Wayne received a telephone call: "If you want your dog, you'll have to pay $3,000. We'll call you back Wednesday afternoon."

She alerted the police, who were ready when the second call came. Mrs. Wayne went to St. James Park Wednesday with the money in marked bills. Two detectives were nearby, one dressed as a park attendant and the other as a tree cutter.

Along came two men, carrying the black and white terrier. The dog leaped into Mrs. Wayne's arms. The detectives grabbed the pair.

Dennis Loonam, 20, and John Cleary, 17, both laborers, were charged.

Diplomat Tells Son to Turn in Drivers License

WASHINGTON (AP) — Christopher L. G. Phillpotts, a counselor at the British Embassy, has stripped his son of diplomatic immunity and made the 18-year-old apologize to police and turn in his license for driving offenses.

Errant motorists who are diplomats or members of a diplomat's family cannot be prosecuted by police. They can't even be forced to pay a parking ticket.

But, Richard T. Salazar, State Department assistant chief of protocol, reported Wednesday, when Pillpotts heard his son, Simon, had been ticketed twice for speeding, ignoring two stop signs and going through a red light, he ordered him to apologize personally to the police and turn in his license.

Salazar said he first learned of the case from the British Embassy, which requires its employes to pay for any tickets they get. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., has scheduled a hearing next Tuesday on the subject of diplomatic immunity from police action for traffic offenses.

BACK TO YESTERYEAR — Woodland Park, in the span of the next few months, will return to the days of the old west—or, at least the fronts of its buildings will. These three men have had a big hand in construction of the first western-style front in the Ute Pass community. They are (from left): County Attorney Jerry Mills, owner of the Midland Professional Building (in the background), Dr. Roy Mathews, chairman of the western front committee, and Chamber of Commerce President M. E. Pete Brown, who spearheaded the idea. The Midland Professional Building is the first structure in Woodland to "go western". When fully completed, a sign at the top will read "Land Office." Residents hope to have the entire main street of Woodland Park looking "western" by summer. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

STIRS UP CONTROVERSY — Rep. John Dowdy, D-Tex., poses in his Capitol Hill office ater his testimony before the House Judiciary Subcommittee which is holding hearings on the Administration's proposed voting rights bill. Dowdy suggested to the subcommittee that Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach had cleared the constitutionality of the bill with the Supreme Court before submitting it to the Congress. Katzenbach promptly ridiculed the report. (AP Wirephoto)

Army Is Going Back to Drill Sergeant

By JERE MOOR JR.

FT. KNOX, Ky. (AP) — The Army is going back to its old method of training civilians to be soldiers—having a drill sergeant, wearing the round, peaked campaign hat, give most basic training.

Since mid-World War II, committees have taught recruits, up to 1,000 at a time at a central location. Initially this was to save manpower. The instructors give the same class over and over.

These drill sergeants as instructors will be giving about two thirds of the basic training," said Brig. Gen. John A. Beall Jr., commander of the U.S. Army Training Center Armor, an organization of about 12,000 soldiers in various phases of training.

Similar programs are under way at the other five basic training centers — Ft. Jackson, S.C., Polk, La., Ord, Calif., Leonard Wood, Mo., and Dix, N.J.

Secretary of Army Stephen Ailes ordered the change, among others, after looking at facilities of other services for better training methods.

The aim of the drill sergeant program, Beall said, is to provide individual instruction, "someone who is really interested in the trainee and will help him when he is in trouble and push him when he is lazy.

"When a committee trains 12,000 in eight weeks, the trainee is just a number. But when you have a drill sergeant and a platoon, the sergeant becomes father, mother, older brother, adviser . . . the trainee then becomes an individual."

Capt. Paul Quittrochiocchi, who is in charge of giving basic trainees at Ft. Knox a test of military knowledge and skill required for graduation, said he had noted improvements in training since the drill sergeant program started in August.

"I think the unit with drill sergeants for cadre has a definite advantage," he said.

Committees will continue to operate the rifle range, infiltration course and other things that lend themselves to centralized control.

The instruction now is split about 50-50 with drill sergeants conducting such training as drill and physical training.

Before he can wear the campaign hat and be a drill sergeant, a noncommissioned officer must complete a six-week school. About 89 per cent of those entering have graduated, some after taking the course twice. Twenty per cent of the last class failed.

To get the hat's prestige, some sergeants over 39 are waiving the age limitation.

The aim of the school is to develop leadership characteristics, make the sergeant technically proficient in courses he must teach and instill the idea of making immediate corrections of all trainee errors.

The school also seeks to bring out the "command image." Sgt. Charles R. Newhouse, an instructor, said, "we bring into the sergeant's mind that he is an NCO standing before a man who may not have seen an NCO before. He provides the foundation for the rest of this man's Army career."

A drill sergeant practically has to get his platoon up, stay with it through the day and tuck it into bed at night, while constantly retaking basic training—14 to 18 hour days are common.

In return, he gets moved around less, has a choice of his next assignment and gains promotion points.

Also, Newhouse said, "The NCO has gained back some War II."

100 Million Were Fed by U. S. Aid, President Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Wednesday America's Food for Peace Program fed 100 million people last year — 70 million of them children — and benefited the nation's balance of payments position.

In an annual report to Congress he described the shipments of surplus farm products as being compassionate and humanitarian. They also help develop markets for U.S. goods, he said.

The program, technically known as Public Law 480, is now entering its second decade.

It provides for U.S. donation of surplus farm products for relief and emergency use abroad, and sale of the products to underdeveloped countries with payment in their local currencies.

The foreign funds accumulated are often loaned back to the nations for economic development.

Last year sales for foreign currencies totaled almost $1.2 billion, a record, Johnson said. Commercial sales of U.S. agricultural commodities abroad also reached a new high of $4.6 billion.

"Food for peace is, above all, a program which expresses the great and generous heart of the American people — and is a worthy expression of the compassion always so much a part of America's character," Johnson said.

Entry Hall

If you've got carpeting that extends to your front door, you've probably got a problem from muddy feet. You can solve this and save wear and tear on your carpet. Have a small area of the carpet cut away just inside the door. In its place, install ceramic mosaic or quarry tile. Real tile is durable and easy to clean, and this technique can create the effect of an entry hall in a house not having one.

Durable Cake Stand

SNYDER, Tex. (AP) — When Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schulze celebrated their golden wedding, the cake was served from a hand-painted cake stand first used by Mrs. Schulze's grandmother nearly 100 years before.

Since the grandmother's initial use of the stand, it has never held any cake but a wedding cake, and was used by the Schulzes at their wedding in 1914. It has been used at all subsequent family weddings since then.

Counter Ideas

The increasing number of frozen foods available has made quick meals a simple matter. But haste can make waste, as many housewives have learned after placing a hot pan or pot on a countertop that isn't burnproof. The solution is to have your kitchen countertop surfaced with ceramic tile. Not only is it fireproof, but it also can withstand a slip of even the sharpest knife.

Experts Say: Don't Hard Boil Easter Eggs; Simmer!

Easter eggs should not be boiled!

That may come as news to some who are getting ready for the annual decorating carnival, but home economists at United States Stamping Company point out that the eggs should be simmered gently over low heat for about 20 minutes.

After cooking, pour off the hot water and fill the sauce pan with cold water so the shells will peel off easily when the eggs are ready to be eaten.

A company which manufacture a wide range of decorative porcelain enameled cookware, markets several differnot sauce pans that are ideal for boiling the Easter eggs. One line sports a gay fiesta design; the other a traditional blue meissen decoration.

The company's home economists point out that a variety of festive Easter eggs can be made with crepe paper, construction paper, doilies, paper lace, little flowers and bits of ribbon.

Plenty of glue also will be essential, as will a little patience!

Perhaps the most popular type of egg is "Mr. Easter Bunny." He should be a pale pink egg. His ears can be made from pink construction paper.

To assemble, spread glue over the back of the ears and apply bits of cotton. Put a light crease down the center of the ears so they will be shaped.

Make Mr. Bunny's eyes from fringed construction paper, his nose and mouth from bits of red paper, and his whiskers from thin strips of black paper. Make his collar from construction paper and his bow tie from velvet ribbon.

Little ducks can be made by cutting "bills" from construction paper. Eyes, too, are made from construction paper. A little girl duck should have a pert velvet bow on her head. A little boy duck should have a jaunty hat made from a nut cup.

Velvet ribbon in several colors, gold paper lace (available in strips), and other "goodies" available in stores now enable you to make a wide variety of eye-catching Easter eggs.

If you use colored eggs, be sure to coordinate the ribbon with the hue of the egg. After the body of the egg is finished, attach a small bow with glue on top to give the egg a "gift" look.

Children like to make special Easter eggs for relatives and friends around the neighborhood, so let them have a ball!

Incidentaly, home economists recommend that if you don't color all the eggs at one time, the remainder can be stored in the refrigerator in a covered sauce pan.

We're Doing Poor Job For Teeners

"Part-time schooling must be developed in the United States for the teen-age brides who interrupt their education for marriage and babies." That's what Mrs. Esther Peterson, assistant United States secretary of labor, told the 1965 convention of the American Association of School Administrators.

Since 40 per cent of all brides are teen-agers and more girls marry today at 18 than at any other age, it is probably necessary for us to make it easier for these teenage wives and mothers to continue their interrupted education.

But even more important is the need to convince our young people that the teen years are not the year for marrying.

Somehow, we have got to convey that to interrupt their schooling to marry is to short-change themselves, each other, and their children-to-be.

It usually means short-changing their parents, too, since the dream of most parents is to see their children well-equipped for life before they take on the responsibilities of marriage and parenthood.

This is a job for the nation's mothers and fathers, and its junior high and high school teachers. They have got to sell the idea of education BEFORE marriage to the generation now entering its teens.

Never has education been so necessary as it is today. Parents know it. Teachers know it. But they aren't getting it across to young people.

Why are teen-age girls today rushing boys into marriage? Why are our young people so anxious to get out from under the parental roof? Why do so many teen-agers look on marriage as all of life — and not just a part of it?

These are the questions we need to answer. When we do, perhaps we can sell our daughters the idea that 18 is not the ideal time for marriage, that it IS the ideal time to prepare for it.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Pros and Cons!

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years, and have been tempted many times to write but, today, I can no longer restrain myself.

The letter "FOR PRAYER" sends me into action. The writer (along with many others) has obviously misinterpreted the Supreme Court's ruling to ban prayers in the public schools.

The ruling does NOT forbid prayer in the public schools. It merely places a ban on prayers composed, prescribed or recommended by any agency, teacher or employee of the government. In other words, it is an effort to keep the State and Church separated. Since, in our public schools, we have children whose religious beliefs differ, the Supreme Court ruled that in fairness to ALL, no ONE prayer should be THE prescribed prayer for use in our public schools. —Sincerely, Mrs. J. A. C.

DEAR ABBY: "FOR PRAYER" said he wished that we would go back to the "old way" and return prayers to our public schools. I hope you'll give equal voice to those of us who are also "FOR PRAYER" — but not in our public schools.

I say if children pray at home and in church, they don't need to pray in school. And if they don't pray at home or in church, why should they be expected to pray in school? When "FOR PRAYER" speaks of the "old way," I wonder how "old" he means. I am 33 and I have never prayed in school. We pledged allegiance to the flag, and at that time the phrase "under God" was not part of it. It is as out of place to pray in public school as it is to do arithmetic in church. So how old is "old-timer" — or did I go to an unusual school? — A SGT., FT. BENNING, GA.

DEAR SGT.: I went to grammer school in Sioux City, Iowa and I recall having been led in The Lord's Prayer by Miss Nettie Olson, my third grade teacher at Hunt School in 1927. It was obviously Miss Olson's idea because when I passed into the fourth grade, that teacher did not lead the class in prayer, glad to see the Supreme Court prayed in school with that one exception.

DEAR ABBY: "FOR PRAYER" is sadly misinformed. No law on earth can prevent anyone from praying wherever he wishes. You see, a prayer can be silent communication with the Lord for the purpose of making a request, offering thanks, expressing adoration or even to make a confession. It need not be said aloud in a group led by a school teacher —nor should it be.
—Yours very truly, PRAYS ALONE

DEAR ABBY: I, for one, was glad to see theSupremeCourt take prayers out of the public schools. I am now 50 years old, but I still vividly recall the discomfort endured by some of the Jewish children when the teacher who had charge of our school lunchroom made all the students bow their heads and thank their Lord, Jesus Christ, for the food they were about to eat. —AN M.D. IN L. Parent-Teacher Debate Merits Of Homework

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A high school student brings home nine books representing four hours of study in history, English, chemistry and art.

Her father jokingly asks her is she's "opening a branch library."

"No," she replied, "this is just homeowrk."

Father's angry reaction was: "I'll go to school and tell off that . . ."

Is homeowrk valuable, is it constructive and reasonable? Or should homework be abolished?

Oren Arnold, a father of three, and Betty M.. Shaw, a West Virginia teacher, voiced differing opinions in articles written for the National Education Association (NEA) Journal.

Arnold wrote that homework interferes with the family life. He said that after an eight-hour working day, most parents can relax and enjoy their leiure, but children "aren't so lucky."

Although agreeing that homework may hamper homelife somewhat, Mrs. Shaw argued that the solution was better organization of the student's after-school hours.

She said that students who "budget their time wisely can keep homework from taking more than its reaosnable share of time."

Arnold contended that study required after school hours was both presuptuous and dangerous. Homework, he said, is, "in effect, governmmental encroachment on the private lives of citizens."

Mrs. Shaw insisted that work outside the normal school day at the high-school level promotes self-education and is necessary to develop independent study habits and discipline.

She cited the case of Jack, a youth interested in electricity. If assigned outside work—special reading, experiments, etcetera--he may experience the "satisfaction of independent learning and become efficient in the problem-solving method," she said.

Arnold conceded that arguments "for" homework does have some merit. But he called it the "lesser of two evils." He said some students would be "glued" to a television set or out making trouble if homework was not required. But he said all homework should be "voluntary, not mandatory."

"Let the teachers and administrators work out a full day for the children—then let them

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HEOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

I always fold bathtowels with their matching colored hand towel and wash cloth inside. This way, all I have to do is grab one pile of linen.

All of these matching colored towels and wash cloths are soiled at once. They are also washed at the same time. This keeps all of the matching set the same hues and colors and they will wear out at the same time.

Bleach sometimes does damage these beautiful dark-colored towels. And nothing makes me madder than to pull out a beautiful bath towel that is two shades darker than a hand towel when a guest comes.

This also saves tearing up your linen closet when you are in such a hurry looking for that matching set. —Mrs. Blumenthaul

Dear Heloise:

What hint have you tried that you thought was likely to succeed and flopped?

I'm serious. —Mary

Ordinarily, I use a blue spray on my hair (which washes out) but at shampoo time I use a rinse. It so happened I ran out of both. A reader had suggested bluing as a rinse—so I tried it. "Don't" you ever try this.

Anyone for green hair? And it will not rinse or wash out It's horrible. Sure glad I did not print "that" one.

Want another one?

Last month, we had a suggestion to put cold cream on your face and rub it with fine sandpaper in order to have skin like a baby's . . . sounded most reasonable to me).

If babies had skin that hurt like mine did after trying it they'd cry "25" hours a day! So, no matter who tells you about that hint, "don't" use it either.

"Yes", I try all hints before publishing them. —Heloise.

Dear Heloise:

If you want to wear slacks with boots, the boots push the slacks up unless they have a strap underfoot.

For those slacks without straps, cut pieces of narrow elastic, buttonhole stitch over the ends of elastic and form a loop (threads back and forth and then buttonhole stitch over loop).

Sew buttons on both seams inside of both pants legs, and attach the buttonholed loops to the buttons.

By puting buttons on your other slacks you can use the same piece of elastic with all of them. —Reader

Dear Heloise:

Last weekend, my teen age daughter had a hot dog and hamburger party and some catsup and mustard were spilled on the table cloth.

I've never had any luck removing either of these stains. . . please, helpful Heloise, how's about a hint? Elinor

Dear Elinor:

To remove the catsup, scrape off as much as possible while still wet, then wash off as much as possible with cold water. Soak in cold water for at least 30 minutes. Rub glycerine (drugstore) into the fabric while it is "still" damp. Leave for 30 minutes. Wash with neutral detergent and rinse as usual.

Some people just pre-treat wit hdetergent and wash as usual. "Never" use hot water or soaps. This sometimes sets the stains. If any stain remains sodium perborate bleach or hydrogen peroxide may be used.

And for the mustard stains, apply glycerine and work into the stain. Let set 30 minutes then wash with detergent solution as usual. Or:

Rub detergent into the stain after dampening it with water May require overnight soaking. If any stain remains use sodium perborate. Alcohol may be diluted with two parts water and sponge on the fabric.

Always be sure to test spot a hidden portion first and to follow instructions and cautions on the container. —Heloise

Engaged — In a Way

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—When Carolyn Preston went to Upper Guinea as a Peace Corp worker a year ago, she soon found she lacked social status among the natives because she was an unpledged single woman. It was some months later before she could remedy that handicap when two Peace Corp officers came to the village of Kerouane where she was stationed.

Carolyn blushingly explained her need of a fiancee to one of the officers who agreed to be her fiancee in name only. She writes her parents here that she now enjoys the warm welcome and genuine friendliness of the native women. She is no longer a social outcast because they think of her as being the "property" of a man.

South, the declarer at three notrump, concentrated his attentions on the wrong suit, and the result was a costly setback.

West opened the deuce of hearts. The ace was played from the dummy and the queen of diamonds was led for a finesse. West shrewdly held off for one round; however, when a second diamond was led to declarer's ten. West won the trick with the king and returned another heart.

South captured East's jack of hearts with the king and tried to run the club suit. West showed out on the second round and, since the dummy had no more entries, declarer was unable to pick up the jack of clubs. When East got in, he cashed the queen of hearts and shifted to a spade. The result was that the defense took three spade tircks as well as the long heart to register a three trick defeat.

If West had taken off the queen of diamonds with the king, North's jack would have provided a late entry to the dummy for a successful finesse against East's jack of clubs once the situation in that suit becomes revealed. Five club tricks together with two each in hearts and diamonds brings the total for declarer up to the required nine.

South could have averted defeat altogether by winning the first heart in his hand and then testing the clubs. When West shows out on the second round, declarer temporarily abandons that suit in order to establish a second trick in diamonds.

Since the ace of hearts entry must be saved to tage the club finesse later, South is obliged to lead diamonds from his hand. West gets in with the king; however, there is no damaging play that he can make, and declarer has nine tricks as soon as he picks up the jack of clubs.

Even if it turns out that East has the king of diamonds, where it would have been finessable, the defense is limited to a maximum of four tricks-three spades and one diamond—provided that East shifts to a spade.

Smoke Bombs Are Used in Camden, Ala.

CAMDEN, Ala. (AP) — Authorities used smoke bomb Wednesday to disperse youthful civil rights demonstrators as they tried to enter the city limits withou a parade permi.

Mayor Reg Albritton, 42, tossed the first smoke bomb when one of the marchers moved a few steps across the line. Two auxiliary policemen threw the other two smoke bombs.

The estimated 120 marchers fled from the smoke. One girl screamed as if she were hurt. Witnesses said the smoke bombs landed near the Negroes but did not hit any of them.

Several of the demonstrators dropped to the grass beside the road. Others ran back toward St. Francis Baptist Church where the march started three miles away.

In time the group reformed, stayed near the city limits for about 25 minutes and then went off in the direction of the church.

Camden is about 40 miles southwest of Selma and the march was held in connection with an effort to enforce a boycott linked to voter registration.

Reserve Officers Hit Merger as 'Scurvy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reserve Officers Association (ROA), in a new attack on the Pentagon plan to merge the Army Reserve into the National Guard, today called the proposal a "scurvy trick."

The April edition of the ROA's magazine "The Officer" said congressional hearings on the plan had confirmed ROA's charge that the aim was to "disarm and discredit the Congress."

Contending that the proposal needed congressional approval, the ROA said those in "positions of tremendous power and authority," at the Defense Department had attempted to make the merger an accomplished fact last fall before Congress could consider it.

Commission to Hear Chain Store Issue

Reps. John T. Baer, D-Loma, and Hiram McNeil, D-Montrose, two of the sponsors, will appear before the commission.

A resolution declared that big chain grocery stores are in a position to fix prices received by the farmer for livestock and other commodities by eliminating Competition. McNeil said farm income has been declining while operating costs were rising and Colorado farmers are "falling by the wayside."

Rep. Kenneth Monfort, D-Greeley, a cattle feeder, is also scheduled to appear before the commission.

Negro Youth Says He Narrowly Escaped Death

By AL KUETTNER

ATLANTA (UPI) — A Negro youth who was with Mrs. Viola Liuzzo the night the Detroit white woman was shot to death in Alabama disclosed Wednesday that he also narrowly escaped death.

The youth, Leroy Moton, 19, said in an interview with United Press International that one of at least six shots fired at the car in which he and Mrs. Liuzzo were riding "whizzed right by my head."

Mrs. Liuzzo was killed on U.S. Highway 80 near Lowndesboro, Ala., by nightriders as she was transporting demonstrators back to Selma at the end of the march on Montgomery. Four Ku Klux Klansmen have been charged by the FBI with violating Mrs. Liuzzo's civil rights.

Moton, who caught a ride to Selma after the slaying, was taken into custody for his own protection and held as a material witness. He was later released under $1,000 bond.

The tall, slender Negro youth was brought here by Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) en route to Baltimore, Md., where he will give a report of his experiences to an SCLC board meeting. He is scheduled to go later to New York and other Eastern cities, not returning to Alabama until he is called to testify in the Liuzzo case.

Moton said he returned to his home town of Selma about six months ago from New York where he was working as a waiter at a sandwich shop. He said he has been working as an unpaid SCLC worker and was a "transportation officer" during the Selma - to - Montgomery march.

Moton said near the Lowndesboro Crossroad on U.S. 80, a Ford pulled alongside Mrs. Liuzzo's car and suddenly the windshield shattered on the driver's side. Mrs. Liuzzo slumped over the wheel and the car left the road, stopping against a farm fence.

The youth said the slaying weapon apparently contained a silencer because he could not hear any shots. He said the same car came back along Highway 80, stopped opposite them and someone flashed a light into the car. Moton lay down and played dead.

Dillion Says U. S. Balance of Payments Works

By JERRY T. BAULCH

WASHINGTON (AP) — Douglas Dillon held a far-ranging farewell news conference Wednesday after President Johnson formally accepted his resignation as secretary of the treasury.

Johnson credited Dillion largely with leading the nation to its longest and strongest peacetime economic upsurge.

It was announced that Henry H. Fowler, 56, a Virginia lawyer who served as undersecretary to Dillon for three years will be sworn in as secretary at the White House Thursday. The Senate confirmed his nomination last Thursday.

Dillon, in his news conference, made these observations:

—The U.S. balance of payments program to shut off the flow of dollars abroad appears to be working. If it succeeds, he said, it could make Europeans more willing to discuss proposed changes in the international money system to provide enough money and credit for expanding world trade.

—It is "very difficult to read" the intentions of French President Charles de Gaulle in regard to monetary matters. "I think they are largely political in nature. I don't think they are primarily monetary."

—"It is unfortunate that for two or three years there has been such sharp differences" among Comptroller of the Currency James J. Saxon, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation. Dillon said he is undecided whether consolidation of the agencies would provide better cooperation.

—On proposals to reduce or eliminate silver in coins, tests of new coins are now being completed and proposed legislation will be announced in April.

—His statement calling for reduced rates for low income taxpayers does not represent a change in his personal views.

—He would like to see a balanced budget if it fits in with present economic objectives. But he is not opposed to moderate budget deficits as long as the national debt increases at a rate slower than the growth of the national economy.

—On recessions, "We haven't banished the business by any means but with the tools we have we should be able to moderate any recession."

—The most challenging domestic problem is two-sided — "advancing toward our necessary goal of employment and at the same time maintaining price stability."

—After 12 years in government under both Republican and Democratic administrations his personal politics has not changed. He still classifies himself as a liberal Republican.

"I don't think there is much difference between this kind of Republicanism and the last two administrations — the one now in office and the preceding one," Dillon said.

He plans a vacation and then perhaps some writing about his treasury experience, Dillon said. He said he has no plans to return to government or undertaking any special projects for the administration.

However, his March 15 letter of resignation expressed hope that from time to time in the years ahead he would be called on, if he could be of help. Johnson replied that he fully intends to call on Dillon again but the President did not indicate in what capacity.

Russell, who has been commander here for the past three years, is retiring from the Navy after 42 years of service.

Justices Okayed Voting Bill, Solon Charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An opponent of the administration's voting rights bill said today he had been told the measure was endorsed by five Supreme Court justices even before it was submitted to Congress.

"I think that its unethical," Rep. John Dowdy, D-Tex., told a House judiciary subcommittee at a hearing on the proposal to strike down racial voting barriers in the South.

Dowdy testified he had been informed that Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach told some senators before the bill was introduced that he had submitted it to Chief Justice Earl Warren and four associate justices. According to Dowdy, Katzenbach described the reaction of the high court judges as "enthusiastic approval."

Under questioning, Dowdy declined to reveal the source of his information but he said it had come from "people I consider reliable."

"I think the attorney general ought to be asked about it," he said.

Dowdy also suggested that the measure be amended to make it unlawful to travel across a state line for the purpose of participating in riots and to forbid mass demonstrations and rioting.

A move to expand and "tighten up" the administration bill gained strength today with word from Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen that he would support it. Dirksen plans to meet Thursday with Katzenbach to several proposed amendments. He said both he and Katzenbach were interested in getting a bill which "will stand up."

Bank Robbing Charges Filed Against Two

DENVER (AP) — Scott Werner, FBI special agent in charge said today charges of robbing the South Denver Bank of Glendale of more than $44,000 were filed against two men Tuesday.

They are Lewis W. Cameron, 23, and Robert D. Wilburn, 33, who were charged with bank robberies in Niles, Ill., and Skokie, Ill., last year.

Cameron was sentenced to terms of 12 years for each of those robberies and Wilburn is scheduled for trial April 12. Both are held in jail in Illinois, Werner said.

The South Denver bank was held up last Oct. 9.

MY ANSWER
by Billy Graham

© 1964 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: Years ago I was guilty of a serious sin. I am sorry for it but it is not possible to make any correction for my past sin. Is there no hope for me?—S. B.

ANSWER: Yes, my friend, there is hope. While God is not indifferent to any sin that has ever been committed, He is also of God of limitless mercy. You may be sure He knows to what extent, if any, you can make a correction for the past. Sometimes there are past wrongs that can be made right. This is a common occurrence in our meetings across the nation. One thing is needful for you, however. Would you be willing to make right the wrong if you could? This is the nature of repentance; sufficient sorrow for sin that you wish to forske it, and if it is possible to correct it. Often this cannot be done. But if there is a desire, then God knows your heart. My answer to you then would be this, that you turn now, with a sincere repentance toward God, and confess your sin to Him. Trust His promise for salvation that has been made possible through the death of Christ. Remember, God desires your salvation enough to give His own Son. Is not that assurance enough? Then trust Christ for your salvation, and when the opportunity presents itself, make right the wrong of the past as a testimony to what Christ has done for you.

QUESTION: My husband and I have been married twenty-three years and have three grown children. I realize that when I don't feel well I'm irritable and short with them. This is breaking up our marriage. — C. H.

ANSWER: You are in real need of medical and spiritual help. Statistics show that the percentage of divorces rises very appreciably between the twenty-second and twenty-fourth years of married life, and then falls off very rapidly. The physical factors which have changed your whole outlook on life and home for the time being cause little difficulties to appear as insurmountable mountains; and when viewed in the perspective of the years will be seen in their true proportion. You should consult your family physician and follow his advice very closely. You should take up some outside responsibilities which will take part of your time and strength (such as gray lady work for the Red Cross, or community welfare or better still church work) and which will divert your thoughts from yourself and your troubles to the needs of others; and you should have earnest prayer help from God. To hold together now when it seems dark and difficult will mean a stronger and sweeter home than ever in days to come.

QUESTION: I 'm the victim of malicious gossip in my neighborhood and my church. The things said about me are completely untrue. What can I do to make them realize how cruel they are to me? —K. M.

QUESTION: I would keep on doing what I know to be right and good, and pay no attention to them. The Bible says: "Blessed (or, happy) are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake; rejoice, and be exceeding glad."

Some of the contemporaries of the Lord Jesus were very critical of Him, and spread the most unfounded and wicked lies about Him; but He did not answer back. He went on doing good to all whom He could help. He left the vindication of His life and actions to His Heavenly Father. Abraham Lincoln once said: "If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how . . . if the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference." Remember, "when a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him."

Baptist Association Hits Ecumenicism

The North American Baptist

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The North American Baptist Association is on record in opposition to the ecumenical movement among Christian churches.

Some 4,000 delegates to the association's annual convention approved the resolution Wednesday because they don't believe such a movement "will include actual spiritual unity," a spokesman said.

"We would like to see all Christians together, but we must have them together on a Bible basis," he added.

The association, which ends its three-day convention today, includes 1,450 churches with a membership of 174,000.

High Altitude Adjustment Is Recommended

By DONALD P. MYERS

DENVER (UPI) — Dr. C. B. Favour, a physiologist who hates elevators and likes stairs, is helping solve high-altitude problems for soldiers, skiers, hunters and athletes.

Favour has completed a two-year study financed by the U.S. Army to find new ways to speed up the body's adjustment to quick changes from lower to higher altitudes.

But skiers, skaters, hunters and hearth-loving businessmen can find solace in his findings.

Favour is chief of physiology at National Jewish Hospital in Denver. In Colorado, a state with more than 60 mountains higher than 14,000 feet, he has done research that will stretch to the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico City (alt. 7,100 ft.) and beyond.

The Army financed the study with a $93,000 grant to find out why Indian Army troops failed to fight effectively when rushed to the mountainous Northeast Frontier Agency region to battle Communist Chinese invaders five years ago.

The Indian troops were strangers to the high altitude. They suffered headaches, nausea, sleeplessness and mental confusion. A few died. But the Chinese were mountain veterans, trained in the Himalayas, and had the edge.

Favour said anyone who has hiked or skied at altitudes around 14,000 feet will recognize the Indians' symptoms as those of mountain sickness.

In his two-year study atop Mount Evans 65 miles west of Denver, Favour found that the human body can be pre-adapted for sudden trips to high altitude.

"The person who is fit — rather close to his physical capacity—is going to be much more likely to tolerate a sudden change to high altitude," he said.

Favour took six student volunteers to Mount Evans to test body reactions to high altitudes. They suffered physical, psychological and mental setbacks when first taken to the mountain.

Until they were physically conditioned, they were irritable, unable to do prolonged, strenuous physical activity and were poor at learning to use instruments.

"Unpleasant personality traits such as temper tantrums, tendencies to goof off and cheat come out at high altitudes," Favour said. "Mountains take the veneer off a gentleman."

Before going up on the mountain again, the volunteers were put through a rigorous physical program. On the return trip to Mount Evans, their physical out-put was greater, they were less irritable and could do routine tasks easier.

Favour said the physically fit students cut 20 per cent from their previous time to hike half a mile up a steep slope of the 14,264-foot mountain carrying 40-pound packs.

He described the exercise as "something like climbing up the Washington Monument a few times with one nostril plugged up and your mouth taped shut."

The problem concerns respiration — pre-adapting the blood for a thinner supply of oxygen. Favour found that persons adjusted to high altitude and athletes in top shape seem to be "blood brothers."

They both have richer blood, get by on less oxygen and have breathing mechanisms that adjust quickly to a lack of oxygen.

Favour said daily exercises can take white collar workers from the list of "medical cripples."

"I run up the five flights of stairs to my office every day," he said. "If you are a commuter, you can get off the bus and walk the last mile in."

He said three times as many men died of heart attacks than were shot in accidents during Colorado's big game hunting season last fall. He said most of the victims were older men "in lousy shape" for hunting at high altitudes.

Bill for Aged Study and Care Okayed in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a bill Wednesday to create an administration on aging and give it $17.5 million for long range planning to help those over 65.

The bill passed 394-1 and now goes to the Senate. It is intended to coordinate federal activities in the field of aging and seek ways to improve the lot of the elderly, who now make up 10 per cent of the population.

Among the objectives listed for the legislation are the achievement of adequate income in retirement, good health care, suitable housing, job opportunities and meaningful activity.

Rep. John E. Fogarty, D-R.I., sponsor of the bill, said its main purpose is to create a separate agency to deal with the problems of the elderly. Such activities are now scattered through many departments.

Of the funds authorized, $13 million would be for matching grants to the states for community planning and training of personnel and $4.5 million for grants to public and nonprofit agencies for pilot projects.

The only vote against the bill was cast by Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb. He objected because no hearings had been held on it since 1963, and because it was voted out of subcommittee after only a five-minute session.

Colorado Senate Okays Daylight Time Proposal

By GORDON G. GAUSS

DENVER (AP) — Initial approval of daylight time for Colorado next summer and in 1966 was voted Wednesday by the Colorado Senate.

The bill provides for a vote of the people on the issue at the 1966 election.

The bill comes up for final Senate passage Thursday morning and if approved must go back to the House for consideration in amendments.

The vote was a hairline.

On a roll call vote which amounted to a test of sentiment on the bill, it passed 18-16. Eighteen is the minimum number of votes for passage of a Senate bill.

The Senate even strengthened the measure in one respect. It adopted a proposal by Rep. William O. Lennox, R-Colorado Springs to make daylight hours effective until the last Sunday in October, rather than the final Sunday in September as in the House measure.

Daylight time would become effective April 25.

The compromise plan was submitted under sponsorship of Sen. Roger Cisneros, D-Denver.

Senate approval of the bill followed a bitter debate which split party lines. For the most part Denver and suburban lawmakers supported the bill and rural lawmakers, backed by the two Pueblo Senators, opposed it.

At one point in the debate Sen. Sam T. Taylor, of Walsenburg, the Democratic leader, declared, "You city folks should compromise. If you want to play ball that way, we can play that way too."

At one point Taylor succeeded in amending the bill to provide that daylight time would be in effect only this year, then the state would return to standard time in 1966 unless another law were passed. He got this through, 17-16, on a standing vote, then it was overturned by a subsequent amendment of Sen. Donald E. Kelley, R-Denver.

It was the vote on the Kelley amendment which was the best test of sentiment on the bill.

Rep. Donald E. Strait, D-Aurora, principal sponsor of daylight time in the House, said he was willing to accept Senate measure if it passes in its present form.

One Person Killed In Greek Earthquake

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Two strong earthquakes created widespread panic in Athens today and killed one person and injured another in the central Greek tobacco center of Agrinion.

Police said the violent tremor at Agrinion destroyed 150 houses and damaged 1,000 others. Succeeding minor earth shocks spread alarm. Thousands fled to open squares or the countryside and feared to return to their homes.

The Agrinion quake was the second in Greece this month that caused fatalities. One was killed, and one seriously injured and 50 homes were destroyed by a quake which shook the Aegean island of Alonnisoss March 9.

Agrinion is 155 miles northwest of Athens.

Short-Lived Revolt Crushed by Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Only about 20 of the estimated 600 troops involved in the short-lived revolt in Thakhek are still at large, a government spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the ringleaders — three colonels with known sympathies for exiled Gen. Phoumi Nosavan — were believed to have fled to Thailand where Phoumi, the right-wing army commander, took refuge after an earlier coup attempt failed.

Thakhek, a town of 5,000 was recaptured Tuesday without a fight by 100 government paratroopers.

Solons Okay Birth Control Information

DENVER (AP) — The Colorado Legislature adopted today a bill authorizing distribution of birth control information and devices to welfare recipients and others seeking to participate in the program.

Legislative action was completed when the Senate accepted, 23-11, amendments tacked on the bill by the House Monday. The Senate then voted 24-11 to accept the compromise bill.

The action sent the measure to Gov. John A. Love. Love has made no comment on the bill this year but two years ago said he would have signed a somewhat similar bill which died in the House Rules Committee.

The bill does not require counties to participate in the program but makes it optional. It authorizes the distribution to any "parent or married person."

The measure says specifically that anyone who does not want to participate because of religious beliefs is exempted and that no benefits may be taken away because of non-participation. The bill also provides that any welfare worker can decline to participate because of religious beliefs.

Building Permits Double '64

A $2 million permit issued to Colorado College Wednesday for construction of a Humanities Building boosted city building permits so far this year to $10.8 milion, about double what it was for the first three months of 1964.

This structure on the Colorado College campus will be located at 14 E. Cache la Poudre St. Gerald H. Phipps is the general contractor, according to Perry C. Tyree, superintendent of the Inspections Department.

With construction this year running double what it did last year, all indications are that 1965 will be the biggest building boom in the history of the city, officials say. The previous record of $36.3 million was set in 1964.

For the past 27 months, city building permits have amounted to $70.8 million and $90 million for the past 39 months.

During just the last 27 months, about 3,000 permits for new homes valued in excess of $35 million have been issued.

Amended Sign Resolution Approved Wednesday by County Commission

A new El Paso County sign resolution, amended in part to "bring relief" to the small businessman, was approved and passed along to the County Commission Wednesday afternoon.

The resolution was drawn to regulate the erection, painting or alternation of business or advertising signs within the county and sets a maximum fine of $300 for its violation.

One amendment, proposed by commission member Dietz Lusk, places limits on the location and size of business signs.

It stipulates that signs are not to be more than 75-foot square and must be at least 660 feet from another sign measuring 75-foot square or of similar size. The signs are not to be less than 75 feet from an intersection.

The amendment states that signs not more than 150-foot square are to be at least 1,320 feet from another of similar size and not less than 150-foot from an intersection.

Section three of the amendment stipulates that signs not more than 300-foot square must be at least 2,640 feet from another of similar size and not less than 300 feet from an intersection.

Other regulations specified in the ordinance include:

— No business sign, the face of which visible from a controlled access highway shall be erected, placed or structurally altered within 660 feet from a controlled access highway.

— Business with frontage exceeding 500 feet shall be permitted signs equalling the allowable limit in each 500 feet or the major part thereof, provided no sign shall exceed 600 square feet.

— No sign is to have changing illumination within 660 feet of the right of way of a controlled access highway.

—Damage to and destruction of non-conforming signs which have been damaged or destroyed by any means to the extent of 50 per cent or more of its replacement value shall be repaired or rebuilt.

— Business and advertising signs rendered non-conforming may be left in place for a maximum of 10 years and may be repaired repainted and maintained. Signs are to be removed at the end of the 10-year period and must bear owner identification plates.

— Any person, firm or corporation, violating any of the provisions of the resolution shall be fined a sum not to exceed $300 and each 24 hours during which such violation continues shall constitute a separate offense.

Commissioner John Ericson proposed a second amendment, accepted by members, which would allow signs of 600 square feet in Zone Two, an area between 400-660 feet of any highway boundary.

Zone One of the adopted ordinance is that area between the boundary line of any county road and a line 440 feet from the road. The total area of free standing business signs shall not exceed 300 square feet and flat wall business signs shall not exceed 15 per cent of the gross wall area of the first two floors facing any county road.

Originally, Zone Two was proposed to prohibit the total area of free standing signs exceeding 300 feet. Flat wall business signs were not to exceed 20 per cent of the first two floors facing a controlled access highway.

Youths Sentenced for Looting Paper Racks

Two youths were sentenced to the state reformatory and another received a suspended sentence from County Judge Jack Roeser Wednesday for breaking into newspaper racks.

Thomas Elloy Morales, 18, 2424 W. St. Vrain St., received a sentence not to exceed six months in the reformatory for malicious mischief.

He was first charged with malicious mischief and petty larceny and alleged to have broken into a Free Press rack by the Empire Super Market, 2314 W. Colorado Ave., and stealing $2.40. Damage to the rack was $6.90.

After he pleaded guilty to the first count the second was dismissed. Morales was ordered to pay $9.28 costs.

Joseph Phillip Martinez, 18, 3143 W. Pikes Peak Ave., was also sentenced to the reformatory for a period not to exceed six months.

Martinez had been accused of malicious mischief and petty larceny and alleged to have broken into a Gazette Telegraph rack at Simms Super Market, 2515 Airport Rd., causing $5 damage to the rack and stealing 20 cents Feb. 12.

He pleaded guilty to malicious mischief and the petty larceny charge was then dismissed.

A second charge, again malicious mischief and petty larceny against Martinez resulted in a further six months spell in the penitentiary, but Judge Roeser ordered the sentence to run concurrently with the first.

According to charge number two Martinez stole $1.50 from a Free Press rack at Furrs Foods, 2325 E. Platte Ave., Feb. 13. Damage to the rack was estimated at $2.85. He pleaded guilty to malicious mischief and the second count was then dismissed.

In a companion case Eugene Marquez, 19, 311 Portland Ave., was aslo charged with smashing the Gazette Telegraph and the Free Press racks.

Marquez entered a guilty plea to malicious mischief in both cases and petty larceny was then dismissed.

Judge Roeser gave him a suspended sentence of six months in county jail on both charges and then placed him on probation for one year.

Tuberculosis Tests Slated For 1,624 Local Students

Plans to test 1,624 junior high school students for tuberculosis are nearing completion, with five schools to receive visits by professional testing personnel in April.

The testing program for junior high schools, in effect since 1945, has led to the discovery of positive reactors, or those who are infected with the live TB germ, in numbers varying from two to ten per cent.

Mary Frances Loughlin, executive director of the TB Association, said students who are found to have the germ will be given chest X-rays and an attempt will be made to find the source of the students infection.

Tests are free, financed through Christmas Seal contributions.

The El Paso County Parent Teachers Association will help the physicians and registered nurses in the testing procedure. A medical doctor will head each testing team.

Emphasizing the need for increased work in discovering TB cases is a recent report from Denver where physicians have been alerted to redouble their efforts in the fight against TB. The disease is making "an alarming comeback" in the nation. According to Dr. Carl W. Tempel, president of the Denver and Tri-County TB Association, although the rate of new cases and deaths in Denver "has declined in recent years . . . nationwide, especially in the bigger cities, TB is striking hard and fast." And he said that "Nationwide, new cases increased nearly 1,000 to 54,062 in 1963, and deaths went up 154 to 9,660."

The schedule for junior high school testing is as follows, listing also times and locations at the schools:

North Junior, April 14 at 9 a.m., Upper Hall Annex; East Junior, April 14 at 1:15 p.m., Gymnasium; Horace Mann, April 15 at 9 a.m., Cafeteria; Washington Irving, April 15, at 1:15 p.m., Cafeteria; West Junior, April 22 at 9 a.m., Gymnasium; and South Junior, April 22 at 1:30 p.m., Cafeteria.

Flying W Protests Setback For Signs at Planning Meet

An area "wrangler," one of seven outspoken businessmen who protested the new "billboard" resolution proposed by the El Paso County Planning Commission, made his remarks clear and then "rode off" to another destination Wednesday afternoon.

Russ Wolfe, operator of the Flying W Ranch, said he hopes the commissioners had not overlooked the small businessman when they drew up the resolution.

"If I have to set back 300 feet, I'll have people all over the woods trying to find my place. I hope you don't overlook the little businessman who's trying to make a living," Wolfe told the Planning Commission.

He was referring to a section of the resolution which would regulate the distance of business signs from a roadway.

"These laws are made for crooks and attorneys and I'm neither one," Wolfe said.

The "little" businessman said he can't afford to hire an attorney "to put up with laws you people put out. That's all I've got. I got another meeting to go to," Wolfe said, concluding his four-minute protest.

Commissioners later approved an amendment which would bring relief to Wolfe and other small busnessmen, subject to an okay by county commissioners.

Among those protesting the resolution, prior to passage, was Douglas Naegele, who spoke as a representative of the Colorado State Outdoor Advertising Association. He sais sections of the resolution "hurts the little fellow."

Naegele said he would have a "dickens of a time" asking other advertisers to clean up billboard clutter if the resolution stipulates that signs must be spaced at least 2,640 feet apart, and a maximum of sign area of 300 square feet, he said, would make it impossible for anyone "to afford that kind of advertising."

Naegele said attempts are being made to clear up to "eyesores" in the county, areas near the Harrison and Garden of the Gods interchanges.

Byron Akers, owner of Ghost Town on 21st Street, objected to the resolution on grounds that the small businessman depends a great deal on advertising.

"We have to attract people who are new here. It's a very definite part in our business," he said.

Craig Ramsey, representing the Pikes Peak Advertising Club, said the association objected to the resolution "in the spirit of free enterprise," and that all advertising media is self-regulatory. He cited Seven Falls as an illustration of the need a business has for advertising signs.

Representatives of the Mountain States Advertising Association, the New Ramada Inn the area motel-hotel association and other groups, opposed the resolution.

A representative of the American Institute of Architecture favored the resolution in that "it will work in El Paso County," and that the ordinance is "timely."

C. Hamilton Evans, a Denver attorney, who spoke for the Colorado Motel Association, was a proponent of the resolution, but offered changes to the "bill" drawn by commissioners.

Sections of the resolution, he said, "are unfair and could be manifestly unfair."

Pan American Airways Struck By Pilots

By MALCOLM STEPHENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — A pilots' strike crippled the globe-girdling operations of Pan American Airways today.

Pan Am, the country's largest international airline, announced a shutdown Wednesday night.

Thousands of travelers were grounded. But many others were rebooked on other overseas carriers.

The pilots said they would continue to fly government-chartered flights to South Viet Nam, Germany and other points where the United States has military installations.

The AFL-CIO Air Line Pilots Association declared the strike in effect at 7 o'clock Wednesday night after contract negotiations here collapsed. The union said at its Chicago headquarters that all flights that began before the strike call would continue to their scheduled destinations and no passenger would be stranded far from home.

The union has 1,528 members employed by Pan Am, which has a total of 26,500 employes around the world. The airline serves 17 American gateway cities and more than three score foreign countries. It normally carries 14,000 passengers a day, with about 4,000 of them streaming in and out of Kennedy Airport here.

Leverett Edwards, a member of the National Mediation Board, said the negotiations collapsed mainly over the issue of the number of hours a pilot can be required to remain on the flight deck. The pilots demanded a reduction in the basic 80-hours-a-month work schedule.

A union spokesman said in Chicago that the deadlock in talks was over the number of consecutive working hours for pilots. He said pilots could be required to work as many as 16 consecutive hours, and the union has been seeking a cut.

Edwards said no further negotiations were scheduled. Bargaining talks had been going on here since March 8 in an effort to reach agreement in a 16-months-old contract dispute. Federal mediators have been lending a hand for months.

Pan Am said a jet captain flying 80 hours a month receives an average annual salary of $31,800; a jet copilot, about $21,600; and a third pilot on a jet, $16,500.

Pan Am said in a statement that it had accepted a settlement formula proposed by Edwards, the federal mediator, but that the union's negotiating commitee did not.

The company said the union committe accepted one feature of the formula which called for a 5 per cent salary increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1964.

"The mediator's proposal," the statement added, "also involved costs equivalent to an increase of over 7 per cent during the 12 months commencing April 1, 1965, (today), and an additional 7 per cent in the following 12 months.

Pan Am then offered with the approval of the mediator to apply these two additional increases to salaries, or for changes in work rules, or for a combination of both at the option of the pilots. The (Union) negotiating committee found these proposals unaccepable."

Another Viet Cong Terrorist Is Arrested

By JOHN T. WHEELER

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Another Viet Cong terrorist involved in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy was arrested today, police said. One of the bombers was arrested at the scene and a companion was killed in the blast.

Police said the terrorist was arrested at a hospital where he was trying to get the names of all the casualties. They said he admitted under questioning that he was a Viet Cong and had been trying to learn whether the driver of the bomb car actually had been killed in the explosion.

Just after the explosion, police picked up the wounded driver of a motorcycle being used in the getaway. He was carrying a pistol and admitted shooting at police when he tried to leave with the man who drove a French sedan loaded with explosives up to the embassy.

The motorcycle driver was hit at least once by police bullets and required medical treatment. It is expected he will be executed soon i npublic.

Memorial services were held today in the American Chapel at the Saigon Military Airfield for the American secretary and U.S. Navy enlisted man killed in the bombing Tuesday.

Vietnamese government officials pinned a medal on the casket of Barbara Robbins, 21, of Denver, Colo., and two medals on the casket of Storekeeper 2.C. Manolito Castillo, a Filipino serving in the U.S. Navy.

Miss Robbins was on the second floor of the five-story concrete embassy building when the powerful bomb went off. Castillo was believed to have been entering the building or was in its consulate section when the blast occurred. The consulate section was destroyed.

An American and a Vietnamese honor guard stod at rigid attention as the caskets were brought to the chapel.

Johnson's Plea For Future Fame Lies in Viet Nam

By RUSSELL KIRK

President Lyndon Johnson clearly desires to leave a great name behind him: a reputation equal to that of Franklin Roosevelt, Theodore Roosevelt, Lincoln, Jackson, Jefferson, or even Washington. This is not empty vanity.

For the honorable ambition to endure nobly in the minds of posterity is one of the highest of human aspirations, and one of the most beneficial to a nation. More than one President, previously a mere canny politician with some shady associates, has risen to real dignity at the challenge of his great office.

Mindful of the New Deal of his political youth, Mr. Johnson has thought of his "Great Society," with objectives and slogans similar to those of the Roosevelt era, as a means for perpetuating his repute. But this is an unlikely device. The difficulties and possibilities of 1965 are not those of 1935, and the old "mass welfare" approaches are not calculated to improve the American social order noticeably.

Thus advanced liberals like Mr. Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., realize that the old "quantitative liberalism" is archaic, and commend a new, if somewhat vague, "qualitative liberalism." Thus a sagacious theorist like Dr. Glenn Tinder perceives that the true statesman must transcend New Deal sloganizing:

The rather indiscriminate fervor of many liberals and socialists for the extension of welfare measures can appear highly ludicrous if one reflects on the degree of welfare which almost everyone already enjoys. This is not to imply that there should be no further increase in our welfare, but only that its indefinite extension is not a goal properly to excite the passions of reformers."

However worthy Mr. Johnson's motives, his "Great Society" scheme, thus far, is a mere hodgepodge of projects, some of them boondoggles, some mildly promising. These will not elevate the American nation markedly — nor give President Johnson greatness with historians.

What, then, may L.B.J. do to achieve lasting distinction? Conceivably he might perpetuate his strong personality, and be honored so long as this Republic endulges, by becoming the President who beat back the menance to civilization of the "armed doctrine," the Communist ideology with its Soviet Russian and Red Chinese agents of revolution.

Some beginning to such measures has been made, however confusedly, in Viet Nam. In the Congo and Central Africa, the Johnson Administration's reversal of policy gives promise of success. Senteimental liberals like Ambassador Chester Bowles have small influence upon the foreign policy of Mr. Johnson. Much astuteness in foreign affairs — the realm that Mr. Johnson knows least — would be required, to leave a great name as the defender of "the great tradition" against fanatic ideology; yet the thing is possible.

Abandoning "accommodation" (better labelled "appeasement") of the Communist powers, Mr. Johnson may begin to ask, with Mr. Goldwater, "Why not victory?" And the copybook headings of the future might keep his memory green.

Puebloans Still Seek Wagering At Race Track

DENVER (AP) — A delegation of Pueblo residents opened a major effort today to revive a bill which would open the way for pari-mutuel wagering on horse races at the State Fair and C. L. Thomson said he believed the purpose will be accomplished.

The Senate's State Institutions and Public Buildings Committee voted Monday, 4-3 to table the bill, already passed by the House. A report covering the action was put through the Senate desk late Tuesday.

The principal problem appeared to be a way to get the bill back before the Senate.

Lt. Gov. Robert L. Knous said that if the committee asks for the bill back he will rule it is entitled to get the measure again.

The procedure which was worked out appeared to call for Sen. Richard Hobbs, D-Pueblo, to ask the Senate formally to have the committee reconsider the bill. This would open the way for Kous to rule.

The committee chairman, Rep. Ruth Stockton, R- Lakewood, said she personally had no plans to call for a committee on the bill. At present, she said, the committee has relinquished control of the bill and has nothing before it to consider.

Mrs. Stockton said she personally is against the measure, but Thomson told a reporter enough of the 10 committee members have promised to vote for the bill to pass it on for floor debate if the committee reconsiders the measure.

One other possibility appeared opened to the Pueblans. This was the chance that another bill relating to the state fair might be amended to provide for parimutuels. This bill is on the Senate's calendar for Thursday.

Rep. Tom Farley, D-Pueblo, is the sponsor of both measures.

Thomson said the fair commission and the city of Pueblo are anxious to get the decision on the grandstand will be necessary before the fair opens Aug. 23.

Vatican Paper Boosts U. S. Viet Nam Action

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican weekly l'Osservatore Della Domenica said editorially Wednesday the Americans with their troops and planes in Viet Nam are defending the interest of all the free world.

"If the Americans retreat from Viet Nam," the editorial said, "They would open the door to (Red) Chinese expansion in an area of the world which the common interest of all nations wants to remain free and peaceful."

The Vatican publication defended bombings by U.S. planes in North Viet Nam, at the same time expressing sympathy for the Vietnamese people.

"The Americans," it said, "try with airplane actions in North Viet Nam to cut the channels that feed guerrilla war in the south. And it is opportune to stress that they, despite the obvious difficulties they meet, fight not only for their own interests but for those of all free men."

Steel Industry To Be Faced With Pay Plan

By H. L. SCHWARTZ III

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers of America asked the basic steel industry for pay raises that could exceed 65 cents an hour over a three-year period, it was learned today.

The wage demands break down this way:

1. A flat hourly increase of 12.5 cents an hour in the first and third years of a three-year contract.
2. Double time for all overtime.
3. A flat 10 per cent raise for all workers who do not belong to an incentive program.
4. A periodic shortening of the work week from 40 hours to 32.

The emphasis on wages came as a big surprise since David J. McDonald, union president, has been saying for months he wanted total job security for his workers.

A source in the industry, who is close to the talks, said that at first glance the package appeared to represent the views of I. W. Abel, USW secretary-treasurer who has challenged McDonald for the union presidency.

The economic demands were drawn up by Joseph Molony, director of the USW Buffalo, N.Y., district, who ran for vice president on the Abel slate.

THE BODY's IRON SUPPLY

A 40-year-old New York City woman writes: "I'm always tired, nervous, and short of breath. In addition, my hands and feet tingle and feel numb. Our physician says I am healthy except for a borderline anemia. I feel better when he gives me iron tablets but it doesn't make sense. How can borderline anemia cause all this trouble?"

In the past, most physicians would agree with this woman,, provided she had iron deficiency anemia. This is understandable because in other types of anemia, the blood count and hemoglobin (iron content of blood) are very low before symptoms develop.

Why is iron deficiency anemia so different? We now know that the blood count does not tell the whole story. Considerable iron is stored in bone marrow in a form easily converted into hemoglobin in the blood.

Let us assume that our New Yorker loses a certain amount of iron in her menstrual flow. In addition, her diet lacks iron because she prefers salads and dainty sandwiches to meat. In time, the percentage of iron in her system wanes but this deficiency is not detected in the blood until the reserve supply in the bone marrow is depleted. Special studies have shown that when the quantity of iron in these depots is exhausted, the response to iron tablets is excellent. Victims of anemia become peppy and are relieved of headache, dizziness, and nervousness.

A Dallas physician recently calculated that the iron deiosits of normal men average 819 mg., whereas those of women are only 254 mg. He conducted tests on several volunteers in which the iron stores were compleaely depleted and an obvious anemia existed. Iron tablets were given when this stage was reached and the hemoglobin content of the blood returned to normal in a short time.

But the medicine had to be continued for four to six months before iron deposits in the bone marrow returned to normal. These people took 110 mg. of iron per day but only 3 to 6 mg. were absorbed to make up the deficit.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topices if stamped, self-addressed envelope accomapnies request.

SOLE WART

Mrs. W. writes: What will happen if I disregard treatment of plantar warts?

REPLY

Nothing, if you refer to the usual wart on the sole. The majority are so painful most victims want them and the cause corrected. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on plantar wart.

NERVE DEAFNESS

F. S. writes: Can anything be done to retard deafness caused by deterioration of the hearing nerve?

REPLY

Possibly. Vitamin B complex or niacin is worth trying. Meanwhile, consult an ear specialist for a hearing aid or advice on lip reading.

SALT WATER BATHS

M. T. writes: If a person is on a reducing diet, will weight be lost faster if she bathes in epsom salts every night?

REPLY

No, because epsom salts are not absorbed through the skin and the solution is no more efficient than ordinary water.

QUIESCENT POCKETS

G. S. writes: Will observance of a bland diet cause diverticula to go away?

REPLY

They'll stay put — but silently.

NAVEL HERNIA

G. B. writes: Does a navel rupture (about the size of a pea) call for surgical repair?

Colorado House Okays Airport Bond Proposal

DENVER (AP) — A bill earthorizing counties to issue revenue bonds to build and improve airports won final approval Wednesday in the House.

The bonds would be paid off by revenue from airport operations. Sponsors of the bil were Sens. Fay DeBerard, R-Kremmling an Sam T. Taylor, D-Walsenburg.

The House spent most of its morning session on a bill revising election an registration procedure but still did not get into a vote.

An amendment by Rep. Harold Adcock, D-Greeley, that would eliminate the requirment that voters sign a card at the polling place was adopted on a party line vote.

Adcock said people who cannot write are embarassed because they are asked to sign with an X. Rep. Isaac Moore, D-Denver, said election officials declare in loud tones the fact that the person can't write, discouraging them from voting in the future.

The House voted down proposed amendments by Rep. C. J. Gillaspey, D-Pueblo, to increase the number of signatures required for primary election nomination from 100 to five per cent of the number voting in the previous primary. He said that would strengthen party control over nominees but opponents contended it would restrict the freedom of candidates who seek office. The vote was 26 to 17.

De Gaulle Ready for Little Summit Talks

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle said Wednesday he is ready to attend a six nation "little summit" conference with his five European Common Market partners on European political unity projects. But he attached a series of conditions.

He said he would attend only if there is a full agreement by June 30 on Common Market farm policy, if the conference is carefully prepared in advance and preceded by a meeting of Common Market foreign ministers, if there is advance agreement on its objectives and if prospects of success are good.

$2.7 Billion Spent On 'Food for Peace'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson reported to Congress Wednesday that the United States spent $2.7 billion last year on its Food for Peace program of shipping surplus agricultural commodities overseas.

Johnson said the figure raised the total cost of the program since its start in July, 1954, to 22.9 billion.

The figures were contained in the President's annual report to Congress on the status of the Public Law 480 program to provide food for underdeveloped countries.

For Food for Peace program, Credit Corporation, accounted for 27 per cent of all agricultural exports in 196, the report said. It has accounted for 28 per cent of the country's food exports since the program began.

The program provides for foreign governments to buy food products from the United States with their own currencies.

Parents Form 'Teen Code' In Warwick

By PAUL MARTISIAN

WARWICK, R.I. (NEA) — Whenever two or more parents get together the subject, more likely than not, will be adolescents—and what to do about them. And, more likely than not, the end result will be just a lot of random talk, nothing concrete.

Not in Warwick, however. Here the Warwick Parenta Code Committee, comprised of parents of youngsters between 13 and 18, have come up with a code.

What the code amounts to is a protest against the "Blackmailing" tactics used by some teen-agers to force mom and dad into allowing them more liberties—such as staying out a little later at night, taking an occasional alcoholic drink and going steady when they're in the eight and ninth grades. It has evoked favorable reaction from parent groups throughout the country.

Mr. J. Arthur Dore, president of one of Warwick's high school's Parent-Teacher Associations and chairman of the code committee, said the idea of the code evolved from her conversations with other parents who felt that they were being forced by their children to keep up with the Joneses, morally speaking.

Warwick, a growing suburban community of nearly 80,000 population, has a juvenile crime rate rated among the lowest in Rhode Island.

Several months ago the code committee sent out questionnaires to 5,000 families having high school-aged children, asking opinions about dating, drinking, driving, staying out late and other social privileges.

Nearly 2,500 parents answered and most of them, according to Mrs. Dore, were in favor of some sort of guideline.

"Their answers prove to us," Mrs. Dore says, "that most parents are conservative, interested in their children, but a little confused as to how much freedom they should give their children."

Notes on some of he questionnaires read like this:

A mother: 'I've got a 16-year-old son who wants to drive our car. I don't think he should because he's to young and doesn't have a sense of responsibility. My husband disagrees. He says it's about time the boy grew up. After all, he says, the boy next door is 16 and has his own car."

A father: "I've got a 16-year-old daughter and she's been staying out later and later every night. When I complain about it my wife calls me a stick-in-the-mud. I think the code is reasonable and I hope I can convince my wife and daughter to stick to it."

A mother: "I thought we'd brought our children up properly until we moved to this community. Some of the boys and girls here have their own cars and drive them to school. My son has always betn a good boy, but lately he has been hinting, almost nagging, that he should have his own car, to."

Most of the high school students questioned about the code do not consider it too rigid. The schools are not attempting to enforce it, although most schools in Rhode Island have established rules relating to dress, smoking on school property and dismissal times for social functions on school property.

"I don't mind the code, but a stranger force it on me," a stranger force it on me," a high school junior said. "My parents might be considered strict because I can't stay out as late as a lot of other kids, but I think they're doing what's right for me. As far as driving is concerned, I don't have a license yet and I won't try to get one until I can afford to help pay for the car and to keep it running."

"We know that no code in the world can take the part of parental guidance," Mrs. Dore says. "We just hope that some confused parents will know that ries about their children.

"It's about time some of us learned to say 'no' when our children put pressure on us to alter our own way of living to accommodate to theirs."

Constituents Necessary Evil, Solons Declare

By TOM NOLAN

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The Southern senator was busy. At a meeting, he was being briefed on a tricky segment of the excise tax bill by a lawyer in a Capitol corridor.

The senator is intelligent. A tax expert, he was asking hard questions. A furrow of annoyance crossed his brow when a middle-aged couple approached, their hands shyly extended.

"Senatuh, you probably don't remember us, but we met you at Billy Joe Mason's barbeque last . . ." the man began.

The senator was instantly radiant and the molasses flowed:

"Ah'l be hog-tied. Course ah recollect you-all! Cut mah left arm off raht heah at the shoulder if ah evah forgot a friend of Billy Joe's and that nice lady of his!"

By now, the senator had given each hand a hefty pump. It was a simple matter to grasp an elbow in each hand and gently guide the couple down the corridor toward the elevators. Honey still dripped from his lips and the scent of magnolia was overwhelming.

"Why, there mus' be a thousand things ah need your advice on. We'll get together later. Raht now ah have to show these Yankees us country folk ain't gonna be pushed around. Ah want you-all to git over to mah office and meet young Bruce Cartuh. His folks are those nice people in Marion County and his grandaddy rode with Jubal Early!"

The couple had been steered into an elevator. The senator dismissed it to the subway level with a hearty, "Boy, you show these nice folks which train to take!" As the doors closed, he turned quickly to a phone at a guard's desk and dailed a number.

"I just sent two more over. Give them the works. I won't have time to see them," he crisply ordered.

He corraled his lawyer friend who had trailed the play discreetly. "That'll hold them for a while, Bill," he said as he steered the man down the corridor. "Now tell me how this tax bill is going to affect a jeweler who . . ."

Scenes like this are fairly common in the U.S. Senate where it sometimes seems as if serious work is impossible in the constant clog of visitors.

"Constituents are a necessary evil," says one senator's aide. "You're dead if you neglect them. But if my boss saw everyone who comes to our office, he'd never be able to do anything else."

One eastern senator estimates that spending five minutes with each visiting constituent would cost him 150 hours a week. If he read every letter his office receives, he adds, he'd need another 200 hours.

That's why veteran senators — like the Southern "pro" — have developed the practice of treating constituents as graciously as possible while expeditiously giving them the brush-off. It depends on the ability to shift gears mentally with split-second timing.

President John F. Kennedy was a master of this art. One observer recalls that, as a senator from Massachusetts, Kennedy was once discussing a labor bill with union officials. Sticking his head out of his office to ask a secretary for some records, he noticed Ralph Guglielmi, then a Washington Redskins quarterback and a close friend.

"Hi, Ralph. Nice to see you," said Kennedy. "Say, why did you go for the long bomb in the third quarter last Sunday when you only needed six yards for the first down?"

Guglielmi answered and Kennedy asked another question or two. Satisfied after two minutes, the senator returned to the union officials, tossing back over his shoulder:

"Thanks for stopping by, Ralph. Good luck next Sunday."

Before he had even closed the office door, Kennedy had his mind back on the labor bill:

"Gentlemen, in clause three you'll find . . ."

Most senators generally rely on aides to bail them out of situations where they have been cornered by visiting constituents, but here, too, the extrication is graciously managed. "The idea," says another staff man, "is to give them the red carpet treatment while you're banishing them to the outer office."

Aides absorb most of the work in dealing with constituents. But for some visitors — state officials, key businessmen, campaign contributors and the like—a personal chat with the senator is a must.

Many senators have adopted special techniques to hold the duration of these chats to a minimum.

A Southwestern senator, for example, signals an aide with fingers behind his back to indicate how many minutes the interview is to last.

"I show up at the time limit and keep out of sight," the aide says. "If the boss has had enough, he'll call, 'Oh, Joe. Come in here a second. I want you to meet these nice folks,' like I'm just passing by. I go in and while I'm shaking hands, I suggest we take a trip over to the Capitol. The boss seconds the idea and the next thing the visitors know, they're in the subway with me."

A West Coast senator simply leaves his intercom on. Tapping it with a pencil produces notification from a secretary that somebody important is on the phone.

This play has a high batting average for terminating newspaper interviews.

$19 Million Cut In Military Aid By Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted Wednesday to cut $19 million from support funds for foreign military assistance in the administration's foreign aid bill.

The total for this assistance, which goes into such projects as dock construction, thus was reduced to $350 million in tht $3.4-billion authorization measures.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., championed an amendment under which President Johnson would be directed to make 20 per cent of a $750-million development loan fund available for lending to international agtncies, such as the World Bank. It was adopted by a voice vote.

The committee rejected an amendment by Sen. A. Willis Robertson, D-Va., to authorize loans to Ireland, on the ground that Ireland is not an underdeveloped country.

Tht committee approved a $350-million limitation on mortgage finalncing guarantees for Latin-American housing projects and a two-year authorization for up to $85 million annually in loans under the Alliance for Progress.

Fulbright reported he had picked up two supporters for his proposal to split economic and military assistance into separate bills. This left the count against such proctdure standing at 9-6.

He said Senate Democratic eeadrL Mike Mansfield of Montana and Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., had asked to be recorded as favoring the two-bill approach.

Social Change Takes Patience With Compromise

By RUSSELL KIRK

Despite passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and despite increasing job opportunities for colored people in most of the country, and despite "integration" of schools, and despite the gradual registration of a good many Negro voters even in the Deep South, still racial antagonism and the "civil rights" controversy, with demonstrations and menaces and corresponding reaction, plague us mightily. Tempers grow hotter, not cooler. What's wrong?

This commentator calls to mind a sagacious observation of Alexis de Tocqueville, concerning his French compatriots during the French Revolution. "Halfway down the stairs," Tocqueville writes, "we threw ourselves out of the window, to reach the ground more quickly." And many French necks were broken in consequence.

In any age, many people are fighting the battles of yesteryear. By raking up old grudges and violently demanding at once that which they would soon acquire by natural process, too often they break the peace and actually delay the results which they seek.

So it is, I think, with much of the present "civil rights" and "voter registration" controversy. Colored citizens now have the power of federal law behind them. Even in the Deep South, they will achieve far greater political power than they had formerly. Time and national authority are on their side. But sincere zealots and demagog opportunists, by demanding everything at once, may excite bitter animosity and violence greatly damaging to everybody, including the Negro.

It is not surprising that the Civil Rights Act has not been immediately and willingly accepted, overnight, by the white majority in Alabama and Mississippi. It is not surprising that three out of every four voter-applications from Negroes have been rejected in Alabama, in recent months. The surprising thing is that one out of four colored applicants already has been accepted. One ought also to note that these same registration boards have rejected one out of every three new white voter-applications, on the ground of illiteracy. In a very few months, considerable progress toward political equality has been made, and more will occur, steadily, even without new legislation.

As with the most unfortunate Prohibition experiment, we Americans are indulging again in our passion for passing laws difficult to enforce. Because last year's Civil Rights Act does not at once meet with general acceptance, we talk of passing more laws — which may be equally difficult to enforce, short of military occupation.

What political leaders and moulders of opinion and clergymen ought to seek just now in the South, it seems to this writer, is reconliliation and gradual improvement — not fanatic demonstration, hasty legislation, and windy talk of force. This is a year for consolidation and adjustment — and for healthy compromise, at which Americans once were adept.

No miraculous act of Congress can make most colored people promptly prosperous, well educated, and politically successful. Only good feeling and hard work, from white and Negro citizens, can accomplish such results. Is it not time to turn to non-political means of improvement?

Man Put on Trial For Pistol - Whipping

GOLDEN (UPI)—A 53-year-old Pleasant View, Colo., man was on trial in District Court Wednesday for allegedly pistol-whipping a Jefferson County welfare worker Feb. 25, 1964.

Charged with assault was Earl Wolf, who is accused of attacking 31-year-old Edward Van Dyke, a county welfare worker, after the two argued.

Admiral Says Viets Raids Are Effective

MANILA (AP) —ViceAdm Paul Blackburn, commander of the U.S. 7th Fleet, said Wednesday that American air raids against North Viet Nam have been militarility effective.

"The damage we wanted to achieve has been in large measure achieved," he told a news conference aboard his flagship, the cruiser Oklahoma City, which is here on a courtesy call.

Many of the planes participating in the continuing forays have come from 7th Fleet carriers and Blackburn said photo reconnaissance after the missions showed "the raids are quite effective. They are making a perceptible dent."

However, he said the raids were of a nature "to take a little while to have any perceptible effect" on the strength of the Viet Cong in Souh Viet Nam.

He added that antiaircraft opposition from the Communist North appeared to be better now "in some degree."

THE SAVAGE CELL

BY PAT McGRADY

About 800,000 Americans have cancer. This tremendous population of sick people would offer a magnificent opportunity to study cancer.

A few scientists already have treated human cancer experimentally with various vaccines. They were severely criticized. What some critics fail to consider is that few things in life are as risky as terminal cancer.

The above are just a few of the facts, figures and reports contained in the powerful 12-part series to be published in this paper on the nation's No. 2 killer—CANCER! Can you afford NOT to read it?

New Los Angeles County Museum Praised Highly

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Why, it's magnificent! It's absolutely epochal! This must be one of the most beautiful buildings in the world."

Edward G. Robinson, a man who chooses his words with care, was uttering these phrases during one of this week's gala openings of Los Angeles County Art Museum.

While select figures of Los Angeles society and the film world were partaking of a champagne supper, the actor-art collector was wandering amid the art and artifacts of the new Ahmanson Gallery.

Robinson had paused before a Babylonian bas-relief with a bearded figute that bore a remarkable resemblance to himself. "Fantastic" he murmured as he gazed about the halls. "To think that it could have happened in this town!"

Along with the newly opened music center, the museum gave the lie to the ancient canard that he who ventured into Los Angeles risked sinking into a cultural void, as the sabre-toothed tiger had slipped beneath the ooze eons ago.

Hollywood's night at the $12-million museum came with a $100-per ticket premiere of "The Train." The film was an appropriate choice, since it deals with a real-life incident in which French resistance fighters prevented the spiriting to Germany of a trainload of painting masterpieces from Paris.

The presence of the movie crowd was appropriate, too. Such figures as Bob Hope, Burt Lancaster, Art Linkletter, Jack L. Warner, William Wyler and Robinson were hefty contributors in terms of paintings and cold cash.

The movie came first, and it was well-received in the jewel-like 600-seat theater in the Bing Center (in honor ofthe late Leo S., New York realtor, not Crosby), which also houses a children's gallery and eating places. After the performance, the crowd paraded across the statuary- filled plaza, past the Lytton Gallery, designed for special exhibits — currently, Bonnard.

"Los Angeles can do anything," enthused Gene Kelly. "Next we must have resident companies of ballet, opera and theater."

Two Satellites Are Reported Mapping Earth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army disclosed today it has in orbit a three-satellite earth mapping system, with two of the spacecraft circling the earth from west to east and the third traveling from pole to pole.

Two were fired into orbit earlier this month; the other has been circling the globe for nearly 15 months.

All were fired from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Together the three small space voyagers, each equipped with a radio receiver and transmitter, are helping Army engineers pinpoint locations on earth that are widely separated by large bodies of water.

Already they have been used to pin down, with unprecedented precision, certain landmarks in Okinawa and other Ryukyu Island areas.

"Data such as the system provides will help determine much more exactly than is now known, for example, the true distance between San Francisco and Honolulu, or between Denver and Honolulu," a spokesman said.

The information also is of obvious importance in selection of potential targets in remote areas, such as Red China, for intercontinental ballistic missiles based in the United States.

U.S. to Aid Indian Power Projects

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The United States signed agreements Wednesday providing $118 million in long-term loans and $10 million in grants for Indian hydroelectric and irrigation projects.

The money will all come from the huge U. S. stock of Indian rupees resulting from sales of American wheat and rice to food- short India under the food for peace program.

State Committee Kills Teacher Tenure Plan

DENVER (UPI) — The Education Committee of the Colorado House of Representatives killed a proposal here to grant tenure to teachers whose school districts are annexed into another district.

Rep. Wayne Knox, D-Denver, chairman of the committee, sponsored the bill. It was amended to strike all reference to annexations, and then the bill itself was passed. As amended, the measure applies only to teachers involved in district consolidations or reorganizations.

Rep. Palmer Burch, R-Denver, president of the Denver School Board, moved to strike the reference to annexation and the motion passed 6—4.

Burch said the bill without his amendment would have applied only to whole districts annexed by Denver, a rare occurrence.

The Education Committee was expected to take up a bill to establish a commission for coloordination of higher educa tion policy in Colorado, but the group put off action on that measure.

Toward a Psychology Of Being

We are beginning to believe that there may be some major gains to be uncovered in psychology. We confess to being rather disenchanted by Freudian concepts. While admitting that Freud blazed a trail and as a pioneer is deserving of recognition,, the somewhat authoritarian outlook, obsessed with ideas respecting a super-ego and parental influences, seems woefully short of the full knowledge we should have.

Nor have we been particularly attracted to the environmentalists, who , though disdaining Freud as the single sun in the universe, have tended to set up an equally objectionable deity, in essence that man is really the victim of his environment and is acted upon by forces set in motion beyond his control.

The reason our hope for psychology has been encouraged relates to a book we have just read by professor Abraham H. Maslow, chairman of the Department of Psychology at Brandeis University, entitled: "Toward a Psychology of Being" (D. Van Nostrand, New York, paperback, $1.50).

Dr. Maslow confesses that he had difficulty in selecting that title, but took it as a way of expressing what he hopefully calls "the third force" in psychology, a rationale of "full-humanness."

The fundamental premise of the professor is that a man who has symptoms of ill health may actually be healthy, whereas a man evincing no such symptom in a situation that is essentially sick, is truly in difficulties. He cites, as one example, the attitude of a person called upon by the Nazis to take care of prisoners at some notorious slave pen. If such a man was happy in his work, apparently well adjusted, most psychologists of either the Freudian or Environmentalist school would conclude that he had no problem.

Dr. Maslow would see him in the midst of a very serious problem.

On the other hand, a man engaged in torturing or killing helpless prisoners, if he developed serious symptoms of inner conflict, might very well be signalling a perfectly healthy outlook.

This approach is, as we view it, a major breakthrough. The writer for many years has been somewhat of a rebel against both the environmentalist school and the Freudian school, insisting that there was at least one other major source of influence over behavior that could not be attributed either to environmment or heredity.

Thus we are personally delighted to join with Professor Maslow as he launches his book by saying: "There is now emerging over the horizon a new conception of human sickness and of human health, a psychology that I find so thrilling and so full of wonderful possibilities that I yield to the temptation to present it publicly even before it is checked and confirmed, and before it can be called reliable scientific knowledge."

As Maslow sees it, there is implicit in our natures a biologically based "inner nature" which can be called "natural" and which is unchanging and reliable. This "inner" nature of each person is individualistic, unique, yet at the same time sharing certain aspects with all members of the species. Further, we do not have to invent this inner nature, it is there waiting for us to discover it.

Here is a key point, quoted from Dr. Maslow's book: "This inner nature, as much as we know of it so far, seems not to be intrinsically evil, but rather either neutral or positively 'good.' What we call evil behavior appears most often to be a secondary reaction to frustration of this intrinsic nature."

This inner part of each of us is not strong in a dominating sense, but it is strong in duration. It persists.

This coincides, of course, with the findings of praxeology which insist that man is motivated in terms of gain and that he will not seek deliberately to injure others in this pursuit of gain unless, as Dr. Maslow now suggests, frustrations appear which supply a secondary motivation.

The far - reaching implications of this new approach to psychology imply an ultimate discovery of fundamental moral laws and an ability to define them and even to adhere to them. The main chore each of us has is to first ascertain just what kind of a person he is himself, balancing his uniqueness against the characteristics he also shares with others of the species.

We'll recommend this book for those who are seriously interested in widening their understanding of psychology.

Priorities on the Arts

In Russia the arts and humanities are state controlled and directed. An artist, painter, poet, or any other practitioner in the field of humanities, must follow the Russian variety of the communist line or risk shipment to the salt mines of Siberia. Consequently, Russian art is declining. Russians look fondly back to the times before the 1917 revolution when, under the terrible Czar, the arts flourished and Russian culture was born.

The golden age for the humanities in Russia was before the commies took over. And intellectual Russians are turning more and more to the "great days" of their country's past for the enjoyment of her arts. The stuff being produced as "art" under the compulsion of the commissars is pretty putrid.

Art never flourishes unless it is free, Culture is not enhanced by governmental guidance, it thrives in an atmosphere of liberty unbounded by state controls. But, in the recent 20th National Conference on Higher Education, one Roger L. Stevens, "Special Assistant to The President on the Arts" (What a title; and what does the Texas long - horn know of the arts?) made a long - winded speech to the assembled delegates, educationists presumably, on the place of government in the arts and humanities.

In olden times many kings became patrons of the arts, but they were acting on their own account and not as the state, although they did use the taxpayers' money to support chosen artists. But art that lives too high on the hog soon becomes a form of non - art. True art, whether painting, poetry, music or whatever is produced from struggle and strife, from the hunger of the artist's soul, if not of his body, more often of both. If an artist doesn't suffer, he produces no great work — and who ever suffered in a welfare state, except the taxpayers?

When Art ceases to be for Art's sake it quickly ceases to be art. Certainly, an artist loves recognition and also money, in that order — and if he earns it. But coddle and pamper and feed budding artists of any sort before they have proved themselves, and they never will. Under government sponsored art we will have a travesty on art and little else. A dull, drab, gray sort of culture will bloom under such sponsorship, with no high lights and with a monotonous conformity.

But the government is taking control, and more control is being demanded especially by Mr. Stevens and other bureaucrats who will draw fat salaries as members of the "National Council on Arts" and other such divisions and subdivisions of the "Arts and Humanities Foundation," a bill for which is already in Congress. Next step is to ask cabinet status for this foundation and the bureaucrats will have it made.

The National Council on Arts has already been appointed, having passed approval in Congress last year. The President appointed "24 outstanding leaders in the arts to serve as members." If they were really "outstanding leaders in the arts," they would refuse such appointments.

For the President to lean back in his chair and say, "I want so much art and culture for my people, and I'm willing to pay for it, with the peoples' money, of course," doesn't mean that he will get it.

Nation's Press

Selma's Side Of the Problem

From the Dallas Morning News

Excerpts of a speech on Feb. 10 in the House of Representatives by Rep. James D. Martin of Gadsden, Ala., explaining Selma's side of the racial story.

Selma is a town with a proud history where the races have lived together in harmony for the past 100 years.

It has not been a Utopia. Selma has had its problems like any other community. Its population is divided between 15,000 Negroes and 14,000 whites.

In spite of what you may have heard, Negroes have been registered in Selma and Negroes have voted in Selma.

I would like to remind that the election laws by which the registrars were operating were not peculiar to Selma, but were state laws and could not be changed by local option.

The state registration laws have been before a federal court since 1963, and the court handed down a decision easing the literacy test Feb. 4. Selma, like other communities in Alabama, immediately met the requirements of the court decision.

Today there is no literacy test, merely a simple set of questions to establish the fact that the person seeking to register is a bona fide resident of the county and is of sound mind and is not a criminal.

The peace of Selma and the good relations between the races were shattered about three weeks ago. The people of the community have been held in a grip of turbulence created by outside agitators who, for their own self-serving reasons, have spread unrest, flaunted the laws, both federal and state and have stirred up suspicion and mistrust between the Negro and the white races.

We speak of the right to vote for every citizen. I am in favor of that right to vote. I hold the right to vote a sacred right I know that every member of this body is in favor of that right.

Let me tell you the right to vote is not the issue in Selma. The registrars of Dallas County have never denied that right to vote to any man or woman who is qualified by law to vote.

And I repeat, the registrars of Dallas County did not write that law. It was a state law enacted by the people of Alabama and the registrars of Dallas County were bound by the law just as you and I are bound by our oath to preserve the Constitution and the laws of this land.

Now let us see, from the facts, if the real purpose of the Selma demonstrations is to gain the right to vote for Negroes. On the first six of the extra ten days allowed for registration, only a trickle of applicants showed up, and these were both Negro and white.

Then on the seventh day, at a signal, a melange of humanity descended on the town and the courthouse. It would have been impossible for any community to handle such an overwhelming surge of applicants.

I would like to remind you of the complaints made last year here in the District of Columbia because applications for registration were not processed fast enough. I would like to refer you to some of the articles which appeared in the Washington papers at that time. Yet there were no congressional delegations charging that the voters of the District were being denied the right to vote. There were no masses of newspapermen, and radio and TV people to show the lines of applicants.

Among the hundreds of applicants descending upon the Dallas County Courthouse on the seventh day of registration were many who were already registered, many who had no desire to register, many who obviously were not of age to register, many who were not residents of Selma or Dallas County or indeed the State of Alabama.

There were children taken out of school illegally to swell the ranks and who were delighted to sing and dance and the opportunity to get a day off from school. There were many who could neither read nor write and required more than a half hour merely to sign their names.

Under the circumstances, in a so-called effort to secure "the right to vote" these people and those who led them made a mockery of the ballot box, the registry office and the court itself. There was so much mass confusion the judges were impelled to suspend the courts.

I ask you, my fair-minded colleagues, how it is possible to register 1,500 or 2,000 people in one or two days? They could not do it in Selma, they could not do it in my town,, nor in yours. They could not do it in Washington or New York or any place else and no one would expect them to. But they are those who demand that they do it in Selma.

Our investigation showed, and I am sure my Northern and Western colleagues who were in Selma will bear me out the registrars of Selma were unfailingly courteous and cooperative, but the scene of wild confusion in the courthouse only added to their difficulties in getting the largest number possible registered in a short period.

There was continuous shouting, yelling, singing, stomping and organized cheer leading. Is there any one of you here today who would say that he could have served efficiently as a registrar in Selma under the conditions that prevailed there.

I am not going to make a blanket indictment of the news media or charge the wholesale distortion and misrepresentation in the news coverage of the Selma story. I say to you that there were distortions and deceit. I have many close friends in the news media and I have worked with members of the press harmoniously for many years, but I say that I was disturbed by many of the twisted accounts, of films that were edited out of context, of photographs that willfully misrepresented the truth.

I have here a photograph which I am sure all have seen it was flashed around the world and played up in thousands of newspapers. The picture makes it appear that the Dallas County sheriff is clubbing a Negro woman as she lies on the ground. Indeed, the caption under this particular photo reads in part: "Dallas County Sheriff Jim Clark uses his billy club on Negro woman."

Now there is another photo taken an instant earlier, but which appeared in only a limited number of papers. This photo shows the club, not in the hands of the sheriff but firmly in the grips of the woman. Investigation disclosed that the woman attacked the sheriff, shouting vile obscenities. She dug her nails deep into the neck of a deputy and then seizing the club of another deputy attempted to smash it down on the head of the sheriff.

In the scuffle to get the club away from her she was wrestled to the ground and the picture which was flashed around the world was snapped at the instant the sheriff was successful in pulling the club from the hand of his assailant. I charge, Mr. Speaker, that is distortion of the news.

I urge the Congress of the United States, as the greatest lawmaking body in the world, to take action to remove this growing violence from America's streets, to return the making laws to the hands of the lawmaker and the enforcement of laws to legally appointed officers of the law.

I urge the appointment of a bipartisan investigating committee as suggested by our colleagues from Alabama, Mr. Selden, to look into the full background and implications of this problem. This committee should be instructed to widely publicize its findings so that all the people of the nation will have all the facts upon which to judge the South and those who are tearing it apart.

I also request at this time that the President of the United States meet with the Republican delegation who visited Selma so that we may give him a full account of our findings and together find a proper solution to this mounting problem.

Time is short. America, this great land of liberty, built by the tireless and patient efforts of both our political parties and generations of God-fearing men and woman of all races, creeds and colors, has many deep and complex problems. Again I say to you, members of Congress, how long will the people you represent, many of them Negroes, who themselves want an end to this tidal wave of lawless demonstrations, how long will they wait for action from you with patience?

The Congress has shown courage and strength on many occasions when crisis threatened our land throughout our history. We are faced again with a time of decision,, a time which calls for action to save America, action that is right regardless of political consequences or its effect upon the political fortunes of individuals.

Let us together demand a determined and speedy end to the irresponsible actions of those who continue to ignore our laws. Only by such prompt and fearless action can we avoid a major domestic catastrophe in our time and restore peace and tranquility to our cities.

Billboard to Death?

By RUFUS L. PORTER

One point has come up in the Colorado House of Representatives about billboards that will apparently be shushed and never mentioned again. Representative Bill Foster of Grand Junction says the billboards on federally owned land on the Western slope are "worse than those on private lands."

Foster offered an amendment to the House Bill (the one with "teeth" in it — the Senate Bill is considered toothless) suggesting that the federal government exercise a little control over the billboards on its own land before getting tough with private land owners for the same offense.

His amendment was first passed and later un-passed by the House. The federal government is the source of many goodies and the state legislature, it seems, doesn't want to go on record as opposing it in any way. Maybe the feds only want a monopoly on the billboard business, apparently, government (public) lands are not mentioned in any of the proposed legislation, state or national—the "billboard war" is being waged only against private owners, and private industry.

So far the House and Senate have been unable to get together on a billboard bill that pleases all the members, or even enough of them to get a bill passed. But, politicians are compromisers and wheeler-dealers (you support my bill and I'll support yours) and they will come up with something to hamper the outdoor advertising business before this session is over — or be called into extra session by the governor.

With the affairs of government in such a state as they presently are, it seems that the august bodies of men sent to represent the taxpayers and all citizens, could find something more important to discuss than a harmless little old billboard.

It reminds me of the time, during the deepest part of the depression, when it seemed the whole word was tumbling down. I paid a visit to the legislative halls in Denver and was amazed to hear, in both houses, heated arguments over eggs. Though I didn't stay around that long, those arguments went for weeks and weeks, and several bills were passed to harrass the hens and roast the roosters. The upshot of such foolishment was state control of the poultry business. Farmers were told how to grade, sort, label and market their eggs, and when to turn the hens to "lay" and when to turn them to "not lay," so the market would be steadier. "More stable," was the way politicians expressed it and if anything belonged in the stable it was such legislation.

A NEW ERA OF HERMITS?

Adam Lyre is going to try to lease up all the caves and old abandoned mine tunnels, or any other similar places, such as bear dens and pack rats' hideouts in the Rocky Mountains.

When asked what he wanted to do that for, he replied, "To be in on the ground floor when the new era of hermits starts, which won't be long from what I read in a headline the other day."

"What did you read to bring you to such a conclusion?" I asked.

"The President of India said in a speech, 'We have no choice but to live as members of a single world community.' And it begins to look as though he's right. Now, there's just thousands of people who won't go along with the idea. They will hide out in the hills and live their own lives, even as the hermits of old did. And the guy with a corner on caves is going to get rich renting them out to the hermits. I've already got quite a few lined up. I'm saving the best one for myself, of course, and another for you on Mount Huron."

"I'll take it," I said, "If what you predict comes to pass I'll join you up there."

To The Point

Little Black Sambo And 1984

By RUSSELL KIRK

Pressures to remove good but "controversial" books from school and public libraries seem to be increasing. Trash, of course, ought to be excluded; but not important works of literature, or harmless and amusing little volumes.

Last year, this columnist reported a sad case of misguided censorship: the banning of "Little Black Sambo" from the school libraries and kindergarten classes of Lincoln, Nebraska. The Human Relations Council of Lincoln had called the attention of the innocent children's classic. Apparently in timidity and haste, the superintendent ordered "Little Black Sambo" removed. I am happy to report, however — according to Nebraska correspondents — that the superintendent has reconsidered the matter, and that the book is again available to Lincoln pupils.

Severe criticism of such follies, in newspapers across the nation, is a principal deterrent of book-banning. Eternal vigilance certainly is the price of liberty — especially the liberty of book-reading. Various readers of this column inform me that they find it difficult to obtain copies of "Little Black Sambo," because certain pressure-groups try to dissuade booksellers from handling that tiny book.

George Orwell's 1984 is another work that has had trouble with school-library censors, year after year in city after city — the most recently notorious case occurring in a Wisconsin community. Only the most biting protests get Orwell back into circulation.

Mr. August Derleth, the writer, suggests — not wholly tongue in cheek — that Communists may be behind the push to "burn" 1984, because that grim romance exposes the true character of totalitarianism. The usual misguided objection to 1984, however, is that the love affair between Winston and a party girl amount to obscenity.

As the late C. S. Lewis pointed out, the sexual relationship in 1984 is hideous because even love has been forbidden by the totalist order of Ingsoc, and — even among rebels against that order — cannot become a healthy and happy thing under such a domination. Far from being a pornographer, nevertheless, Orwell had (like Jonathan Swift, whom he greatly admired) almost a loathing of sexual relationships. The passages in question scarcely are calculated to lead any high-school student into evil courses.

When we actually reach the year 1984, I trust, "Little Black Sambo" and Orwell's novels still will be in print, and not under some humorless ban. But the survival of the freedom to read good books depends, gentle reader, upon the vigor with which we repel the recurrent pressures from folk who do not seem to have read the books they denounce.

FOOLS OR KNAVES?

To the Editor:

An argument came up the other day with an acquaintance who happens to be a tax-supported school teacher. This person presented the old idea that a politician is the choice of the people and must possess some merit; while on the other hand royalty has nothing but heredity and may even be mentally retarded.

We countered with the statement that individuals living under fool royalty might be lucky indeed, but as for the rule of the politician the mentally retarded shoe is on the other foot.

It is the people who register to vote and sanction the politician who are suffering from mental retardation.

MEDICARE

To the Editor:

It may be advisable to emphasize that although I like to think of them as being friends, no physician or insurance representative is a close friend or relative. For this reason, I consider it quite proper to pay tribute to the Nation's doctors who have been trying to stop the socialist steamroller.

I do not believe that loyalty to a political party, devotion to an organization or admiration for any individual justifies passage of a bad bill. If all adults analyzed and considered the possible consequences of the proposed King - Anderson or any similar compulsory bill, I am certain that most would be able to list a surprising number of objections.

Realistic persons are aware of ill and needy older citizens and our concern for them is honest. Much can be done for those who have experienced misfortune and reverses but in order to assist them, a little growing up among others of us may be necessary. Medicare for ALL is NOT the grand gesture.

Members of groups, favoring a program which would toss everyone over 65 into hospitals, refuse to understand that (1) all will not need (2) nor should all receive medical care at taxpayer expense. If a family reference is permissible, my father died seven and one - half hours after being admitted to a hospital last year. No one can convince me that he needed a medicare bill. It is inconceivable that a family, struggling to pay off a mortgage, believes it can afford to furnish medicare to the man who owns a $40,000 home, has a new car every year and time to enjoy a leisurely vacation in Hawaii. The mortgaged home may need a new furnace or new roof next year and it is doubtful that neatly labeled stacks of tax dollars would be available for the emergency.

It is sad that gentle, elderly people have been frightened into accepting the King - Anderson bill as the only solution of their health problems.

I have confidence in U.S. doctors and our good, reliable insurance companies. I'm sure that both, if allowed, can guide and advise us best.

Higher Salaries For Judges Urged in State

By JOHN M. NOLAN
United Press International

DENVER (UPI)—The Senate Finance Committee of the Colorado Legislature was told Tuesday by a Denver attorney that Colorado does not have competent judges because of low pay.

Ralph M. Clark, former secretary of the Denver Republican party, made his statement in response to a question from Sen. William Bledso, R-Hugo, a member of the committee.

The committee, headed by Sen. Harry M. Locke, R-Hartsel, was holding a public hearing on a House-passed bill to raise the salaries of the state's seven Supreme Court justices, its 69 district judges, and Denver's two juvenile judges, one superior court judge and one probate judge.

The raises for all the judges would cost the state a quarter of a million dollars a year.

Sen. George Brown, D-Denver, asked Clark to clarify his statement that Colorado judges were incompetent because of low salaries.

"I feel that we don't have the best judiciary," Clark said.

Walter Steele, president of the Colorado Bar Association, urged the committee to approve the pay raise bill.

Steele said the bar was not only concerned with keeping the state's present "good" judges but in attracting the best qualified lawyers to the bench. Steele said the best lawyers make much more money practicing law and would not run for judge.

The chief justice of the Colorado Supreme Court would receive a pay boost from $18,500 a year to $21,500. The other six justices would be increased from $18,000 yearly to $21,000.

All the other judges would be increased from $14,000 a year to $17,000.

INSURANCE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The reports that more thain 47 million American wage earners have some type of formal insurance arrangement which protects them against income loss when they are disabled.

H. L. Hunt Writes

In the early 1830's, a young fellow in Illinois was a partner in a grocery business that failed. There was no such thing as a small business loan or any other federal subsidy in those days, and perhaps this is the reason that he turned to politics.

In 1832, he was defeated in a race for the legislature; but he ran again in 1834 and won.

Political advancement seemed beyond his reach when he was gress in 1843. He tried again in defeated in a bid for Congress in 1843. He tried again in 1847 and was elected.

He lost popularity and did not return for a second congressional term. In disgust, he retired from politics and entered private law practice.

In 1855, his concern for mounting problems of the nation caused him to seek a Senate seat. He failed again.

His active role in that campaign, and a notable speech, made him prominent as a Vice-Presidential candidate; however, he failed to get his Party's nomination.

In 1858, he was nominated for the Senate and campaigned in one of the most hotly-contested races on record. He challenged his opponent to a series of debates, and the debates were momentous in their suggestions concerning the events shaping up on the political horizon of the nation. Both candidates became national figures as a result of this senatorial campaign. But the gentleman whose record of trial and defeat we are tracing failed again to get elected.

One would think this fellow justified in giving up, at age 49, and living a comfortable life in privacy. But Abraham Lincoln did not, and he was elected President two years later to become an immortal. HLH

Taylor Will Not Resign, Says White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Both the White House and State Department today emphatically denied a report that Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor will resign as U.S. ambassador to Viet Nam by the end of the week.

The White House described the report as "completely untrue." State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said "there is not a shred of truth in this report."

Robert Goralski, State Department reporter for the National Broadcasting Co., said today that Taylor would quit and be replaced by U. Alexis Johnson, now deputy ambassador to Saigon.

The NBC correspondent said that Taylor would leave the post in line with an understanding he reached with President Johnson last summer, and no policy dispute was involved in the decision.

Taylor returned to Washington last Sunday for consultations with State and Defense Department officials. He is expected to leave for South Viet Nam late this week or early next week.

When the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff came out of retirement to take the Saigon post last summer, it was generally expected that he would not remain in South Viet Nam for more than about one year.

There have been repeated reports that Taylor plans to quit in the near future. Some of these versions have been fed by the fact that Johnson has neither seen nor talked with Taylor since the envoy's return.

However, the President told reporters Tuesday that he expected to see Taylor today or Thursday and that he had not seen him earlier because of the ambassador's series of consultations with other officials.

White House press secretary George E. Reedy called today's report "completely untrue."

"But I don't want obviously to leave the impression that he is going to stay out there forever," Reedy added.

Reedy said Taylor had not submitted his resignation, nor was the subject before the president for consideration. He said also the President was not considering a successor because there was no vacancy in the Saigon post.

Committee Plans for Summer Event

The first meeting of the committee chairmen for the 1965 Summer Crossroads program was held in the ASCC Room of Rastall Center Tuesday, with Bob Blair, associate director of the Institute of International Education, coming from Denver for consultation.

Summer Crossroads is a program which has been in effect for the past seven years in Colorado Springs under the direction of Carlton Garner, foreign studnt advisor at Colorado College.

It will be held from Sunday, June 6 through Saturday, June 2 this year and will gather together foreign students who have attended American Universities and colleges for the school year to share a week of discussion and entertainment while being guess in local homes.

Mrs. Robert C. Price is co-director with Prof. Garner this year and reported that eight inquiries have already been received from Scandanivan students now in the United States attending college who have indicated a desire to attend this year's Crossroads due to a glowing report they received from a guest student who attended the 1964 program.

The number of students which have attended since the founding of the program has varied greatly due to various factors such as the date in connection with the date of the consumation of the terms of the various colleges being represented; the awareness of the program on the various campuses and possibly even the numerous foreign students who desired to work for the summer at the World's Fair last year.

The number has continued to grow, however, and while the first few years there were as few as 25 guests, the most recent programs have included as many as 85 students.

The original concept of the Summer Crossroads was formulated by the first committee in 1957 and is as follows: to be an integrated week of family living-seminar discusion and recreation for international exchange students who have completed a minimum of one year's study in the United States. To provide the community with an opportunity for further understanding of foreign countries through the knowledge of their students. To broaden the American experience of the international exchange student and to stimulate the exchange and comparison of theoretical and practical ideas on pertinent topics.

Countries which have been represented during the past years have included Turkey, France, Germany, Sweden, Egypt, Austria, Switzerland, England, Norway, Cuba, Japan, Netherlands, Greece, Ecuador, India, Phillipines, Morocco, Argentina, Peru, Hungary, British Guina, Argentina, Poland, Pakistan, Italy, Denmark, Iran, El Salvador, Denmark, Finland, Kenya, Arabia, Cypress, Chile, Korea, Lebanon, Spain, Panama, Scotland, Ireland, Israel Mexico, Iraq, Fiji Islands, Mauritius Islands, Haiti, Luxembourg, Brazil, West Indies, Ethiopia, Indonesia, Thiland, Ceylon, Uruguay, Jordan, and Hong Kong, China.

Each year since the inception of the program in 1957 has produced more detailed seminars and varied entertainment for the exchange students, the host families and interested visitors in which to participate.

Perhaps one of the most exciting experiences was the presence of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who prsided at one of the international discussions in 1959. More detailed information including the various committee chairmen and the needs for host families will be published at a later date.

Drug Firm Pleads Guilty to Conspiracy

NEW YORK (AP) — The Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp. pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court today to conspiracy to defraud the U.S. foreign aid program in sale of drugs to Viet Nam and Cambodia.

The guilty plea was made to Judge Harold F. Tyler five days before the corporation was to go on trial, along with two other corporations and two individuals.

Chronic Trade Problem Still Plagues Britain

LONDON (AP) — The British economy is picking up steam again but the nation's chronic trade problems remain, the treasury reported Wednesday.

A mass of statistics was released to set the stage for Tuesday's annual budget speech by Chancellor of the Exchequer James Callaghan. They indicated he may have to apply some curbs to keep the economy in balance.

A limit on overseas investment, similar to the one applied by President Johnson in the United States, was considered one possibility.

The figures also gave the balance sheet for last year's economic crisis. They showed the nation went $2 billion in the red by buying more overseas than it sold. The deficit was almost 10 times larger than in 1963.

To keep the British pound from collapsing under this trade deficit, the government had to borrow $1.5 billion from foreign bankers and governments last year and use $340 million of its own gold and foreign currency reserves, reducing them to $2.3 billion., lowest in about a decade.

The loans have not yet been paid back, and the trade gap is narrowing but not yet wiped out.

This means that when Callaghan announces the government's new taxes and financial regulations for the coming year in the House of Commons, he will be walking on economic and political tightrope — with one end held by the British taxpayer and the other by the world's bankers.

If the bankers feel Callaghan again gives too much emphasis to welfare schemes they may start a run on the pound, provoking a new crisis. If he clamps down too hard on the taxpayer at home to soak up excess purchasing power and reduce inflation, there may be political trouble for the Labor government.

Soviets Forced To Ship Viet Arms by Sea

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is being forced to ship weapons to North Viet Nam by sea because Red China is blocking air and land movement, Communist sources said Wednesday.

The sources said the word is being spread through Communist party representatives in Prague, Czechoslovakia, to explain the delay in getting military aid to the Northern Viet Nam regime. Prague is headquarters for the Communist movement's journal, Problems of Peace and Socialism..

The Russians are reported telling foreign Communists that it is Red China's fault that such weapons as antiaircraft missiles are failing to reach Hanoi.

This amounts to a Soviet accusation that, for all Peking's lip service to Communist unity in opposing the United States, Red China is putting its hatred of Soviet policies ahead of helping North Viet Nam.

Communist sources have been saying for several days that Peking refused to let Soviet planes fly across China to deliver arms to Hanoi and that rail shipments have been delayed.

Asked about these reports, official spokesmen here have declined to confirm or deny them.

Hearing Slated for Murder Defendant

BOULDER (UPI)—Dist. Atty. Rex Scott said today a hearing would be held in district court Friday to decide whether an 18-year-old Colorado University student charged with murder should be released on bond.

The student, Charles R. Self, and Mrs. Joan Gardner Brown, 29, a Boulder social studies teacher, were charged March 19 with murder.

Self has pleaded innocent. Mrs. Brown's plea has not been entered.

Freeway Shows Sharp Increase In Its Traffic

DENVER (UPI)—The Monument Valley Freeway in Colorado Springs had the largest urban increase as traffic on state highways rose 3 per cent during the first two months this year over the same period in 1964.

The largest non-urban increase was 8.6 per cent on Interstate 25 north of Denver. Traffic on Interstate 25 north of Pueblo increased 6.4 per cent during January and February over the same months last year. Other increases were 6.8 per cent on Interstate 70 east of Glenwood Springs, 5 per cent on Interstate 80-s east of Julesburg and 4.1 per cent on Interstate 25 south of Starkville.

Urban sections of state highways recorded an increase of 4.2 per cent during the first two months this year. The Monument Valley Freeway in Colorado Springs showed the greatest increase with 8.6 per cent over the first two months last year— a daily average of 18,481 vehicles.

The Denver Valley Highway had an increase of 4.5 per cent, with a daily average of 61,160 vehicles.

The Pueblo freeway had a gain of 4.8 per cent with a daily average of 23,848 vehicles.

Primary highways showed a decline of 5 per cent during the first two months this year. Secondary highways had a decrease of .9 per cent.

400 Burglaries on Campus Are Solved

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — A flying tackle by a Colorado School of Mines student, John Osborne, 20, of Butte, Mont., cleared up a three-year string of fraternity house burglaries.

Sheriff Harold Bray said today that Warren W. Haake, 24, of Phoenix, dropped by Osborne's tackle, has admitted more than 400 campus burglaries netting him about $3,000.

Osborne said he was awakened Monday to see a man going through the desk drawers in his fraternity house room. He chased the man while other students telephoned police.

Bray said Haake told him he formerly lived in Springfield, Ill., and attended Eastern Illinois University for a short time.

The sheriff said Haake sometimes used the name of a Northwestern University student whose wallet he stole in 1962.

Aid for Distressed Areas Is Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson formally sent Congress legislation today to authorize a $510-million annual program to aid distressed areas.

Johnson, in identical letters to Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and House Speaker John J. McCormack, said:

"It is basically and essentially a public works bill. More than half of the $510 million of annual appropriations authorized by this bill would be used for grants for public works and development facilities."

Mrs. Johnson Keeps Diary on Tape Recorder

By BILL BYERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Besides the President, Lynda, Luci and, possibly Him, the beagle, a University of Texas freshman knows more of the First Lady's innermost thoughts than anyone else.

It's no secret that Mrs. Johnson locks herself in her White House bedroom every week and pours her memoirs into a tape recorder. She has been doing it since Nov. 22, 1963. But except for a brief description of the events in Dallas for the Warren Report not one word of her oral diary has been heard by anyone except herself—and 18-year-old Scott Carpenter.

Before the Army provided Mrs. Johnson with an easy-to-operate recorder, she relied on Scot and his $12 Japanese machine to collect her thoughts.

Scott, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, the First Lady's staff director, recorded about 15 hour-long sessions for Mrs. Johnson, who found the Oriental gadget inscrutable and too tricky to operate herself.

"At first, after the assassination, she was recording every day," Mrs. Carpenter says. "She didn't want anybody to know, not even the President. She would just call Scott up on the phone and tell him to bring his machine over as quickly as he could. In those days of heavy strain, I think it was good therapy. Now, although she doesn't plan to ever publish her words Mrs. Johnson keeps up with it because she has an acute sense of history."

Although Mrs. Johnson has never told him to, Scott has kept mum on what he has heard.

The recording incident is typical of the changes in the mansion on Pennsylvania Avenue. Its mistress, who still lives in the shadow of Jacqueline Kennedy, is attempting to leave her own mark on history.

Mrs. Johnson's problem, establishing herself as the chief subject of interest in the White House, is exemplified by a recent tour of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Ah, this is Mrs. Kennedy's favorite portrait," he sais referring to Henry Inkman's painting of Angelica Van Buren in the Green Room. And later on, he commented that Mrs. Kennedy was so fond of the stately-East Room that "she didn't have the heart to change its decor."

Not once were there any references to paintings or furniture admired by Mrs. Johnson. If you didn't know beter, you'd wonder if she really lives there.

Vibrant and radiant, Mrs. Johnson slipped without fanfare into the White House screening room to comment on the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company's 30-minute color television program on the executive mansion's art, which will be telecast on a syndicated basis in April.

"What are your favorite portraits?" Mrs. Johnson was asked. She thought for a long moment and said in her East Texas drawl, "Why, I'm partial to the ones of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin.

It also doesn't bother Mrs. Johnson when people tell her "how well Jackie decorated the White House, turning it from a mausoleum into a home." The First Lady champions her predecessor's good taste and is more than a little relieved that she doesn't have to compete with her on that score.

Mrs. Carpenter says Mrs. Johnson has decided to revisit South Carolina, where she was jeered during last year's campaign.

"Mrs. Johnson was deeply hurt and bewildered by the Old South's coolness towards her," Mrs. Carpenter says. "She will never forget walking down the empty, magnolia - lined streets with, 'We're Solid for Goldwater' signs. The President tells her to forget it. But she is determined to make sure these fellow Southerners will be in the Democratic column in 1968."

Newsman Finds Kashmir Keeps On Its Fight

By CONRAD FINK

KASHMIR (AP) — Across the next ridge, a land mine exploded with a muffled "whummp." A hidden sniper sent his missile of death cracking through the tall pines and a machine gun chugged into action.

It was high noon along what is called, strangely, the "ceasefire line" in beautiful Kashmir.

Indian troops in helmets and full battle kit nervously fingered their rifles and, careful not to offer themselves as targets, peered across 1,000 yards of no-man's land separating them from Pakistani machine guns.

India's struggle with Pakistan over this Himalayan state is flaring dangerously. The t'l in lives and money is zoomi[illegible] ward.

Raiding parties strike through wooded valleys and across the mountains of Kashmir, throwing grenades, cutting throats, shooting up villages and army posts.

Rocket launchers, heavy mortars and even 105mm. artillery pieces are brought into action. Civilians—often disgusted with both sides—are killed.

The slaughter dates back to 1948 when India and Pakistan fought a full - scale war over Kashmir after evolving out of British India as independent, sovereign nations. In 1949, both sides settled down on a 360-mile "ceasefire line" dividing Kashmir that, ostensibly, is watched over by the United Nations.

U.N. observers, all but shoved aside as the conflict gathers momentum, say there is ever-present danger of escalation.

"Any more shooting and it's war," one U.N. officer told a newsman.

India, charging Pakistan with "an unprecedented increase in aggressive actions" in 1964, admits to suffering 123 dead in the last 12 months. It claims to have killed 272 Pakistanis in the same period.

Pakistan also is charged by India with creating 1,522 "incidents" along the ceasefire line in 1964, as compared with 448 in 1963.

In years past, an "incident" meant, perhaps, a cow (sacred to Hindu Indians) being shot while grazing near the ceasefire line. Now, an incident can mean a limited attack by a battalion of 800 men.

Well-informed sources attribute the change to a subtle switch in Indian policy.

For years, the Indian government was committed publicly to fully integrating all of Kashmir—with its 86,026 square miles and 3.6 million population—into the Indian union.

However, the Indian government now appears content with the ground it holds. It seems determined to turn the ceasefire line into an international border and proceed with political integration of as much of Kashmir as it occupies.

This would secure for India most of the population and the best sections of Kashmir — including the beautiful valley.

Pakistan, also claiming all of Kashmir, feels compelled to prevent a stalemate that eventually might result in international recognition of the ceasefire line as a fixed boundary.

But, the Indians say, the Pakistanis are unable to do more because of India's "trump card."

This, the Indians say, is India's over-all military superiority and a firm understanding on both sides that all - out war would be between 480 million Indians and 100 million Pakistanis.

Heavy armored forces are stationed in northern India, ready to punch toward Pakistan's cities if Kashmir gets out of control.

by the Committee on Consumer

India Feels Confident

This assessment leads Indian officers to feel sure that they are in full command of the situation. Ambushes to kill Pakistani raiders and punitive raids and gunfire "to keep their heads down" is the Indian formula.

Knowledgeable observers, however, are not sure this will prevent escalation.

In many ways, they say, the Kashmir dispute resembles others in Asia that have developed into war involving many other nations. They point to Southeast Asia, or the "confrontation" between Indonesia and Malaysia.

Neither India nor Pakistan can possibly seal the ceasefire line in Kashmir. Heavily armed raiding parties of up to 35 men easily sneak through countless ravines and gullies, bypass opposing forces and strike at rear units.

The constant tension of this guerilla - type fighting makes men jumpy and is tough on morale. Junior officers, ordered to stand fast, are impatient to go on the offensive once in a while.

There are reliable reports of young company commanders jumping off without orders to strike an outpost or machine-gun nest that has been harrassing their units.

This leads to what is known in Indian Army parlance as a "counter-bash" by the other side.

An example of how this happened was the so-called "graveyard incident" near the international border in southern Kashmir last March. This generally is regarded as the starting point of the current fighting.

A small Indian patrol met four Pakistanis also on patrol and both sides charged the other with a border violation. Meetings held under the U.N. flag broke down and a scrap started over the graveyard, a point of land 130 yards long and varying between 2 and 50 yards wide.

Indian officers estimate that in one day, March 9, Pakistani forces fired 100 rounds of 105mm. artillery, 1,140 3-inch shells, 340 2-inch shells, 39,000 rounds of medium machine gun fire, 28,000 rounds from light machine - guns, 11,000 rifle rounds, 230 rifle grenades and 25 other grenades. Nothing is said about what Indian troops fired.

Finally, the opposing local commanders — old chums who served together in the British Indian Army—called off the affair.

Many Kashmiris in Indian territory want accession to Pakistan, for religious and other reasons. But many more say "a pox on both your houses" and strive for independence.

The United States and Britain have tried frantically to stay neutral, seeing both India and Pakistan as friendly bulwarks against Communism.. But this isn't working anymore since Communist China has lined up with Pakistan and the Soviet Union with India.

The United States is in the most difficult position, since it gives military and economic aid to both quarreling nations.

"See this" an Indian officer asked a newsman. "It's a .50 caliber American slug that missed my head by inches. Why do you Americans aid our enemies?"

Pakistani officers make similar complaints—and the United States officially denies its arms aid is being used in Kashmir by either side.

The whole Kashmir affair is discussed with tedious regularity in the United Nations and in countless diplomatic notes hurled between New Delhi and Rawalpindi. Charges of who did what and when have completely obliterated fact and it is clear that neither capital is trying seriously to negotiate an end to the bloodshed.

For negotiation might lead to compromise and the sacrifice of a political career would be the price paid by both Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India and President Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan if they gave way on Kashmir.

Home Buyers Warned Against Traps

By JOHN PIERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Viet Nam, Selma, income taxes, U.S. gold loss. It's as though the average man doesn't have enough to worry about.

And now the American Land Title Association (ALTA) has come up with a blood-chilling report under the penny-dreadful title, "Seven Traps for Unwary Home Buyers: Recounting True Case Histories of Everyday Tragedies In the Purchase of Property."

Forgeries, erroneous descriptions of land, unknown or missing heirs, false marital status of the seller, deeds from mental incompetents and minors, the sudden appearance of persons for years legally dead—the catalogue of horrors grows longer—and any one of them "can turn the natural elation of home ownership into a nightmare," the ALTA reports.

—Item A man disappears, suddenly and unaccountably. His family searches for him for years but finds not a trace. Reluctantly they conclude he is dead.

They go to court and have him declared legally dead. Then, acting under a court order, they sell his property.

Seventeen years later . . . guess what. The "dead" man reappears and claims his property from the new owners.

Item: A Chicago couple, newlywed and delighted with their new home, have barely had time to uncrate their furniture when . . . a knock on the door . . . and who should appear but a strange woman demanding that they get out of her house.

It seems that as a bride herself, the young woman had run away from her husband one day and never been traced. The husband then represented himself as a single man and sold the house to the couple, who innocently bought it.

Item: A woman gets a real estate agent to sell her house for her, then claims the deed of sale is a forgery and demands payment all over again. She bases her claim on the fact that the agent once went to jail for forging deeds.

This story has a happy ending. The case goes to trial and a handwriting expert satisfies the jury that the signature on the deed is in fact hers and not a forgery.

Forgers, the ALTA says, are probably the greatest hidden hazard to the unwary home buyer. "The ingenuity of some of these schemers is almost beyond belief," the Association says.

Watch out that you don't buy a house from a minor or someone who is mentally incompetent. "That lovely, sweet little lady from whom the starry-eyed newlyweds purchased their dream cottage may not be mentally capable of understanding the transaction—and the title they obtain may be legally null and void," ALTA says.

Dean Burch Bows Out Gracefully

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

When Dean Burch entered the the big - time political picture in January of 1964 as Barry Goldwater's secretary in charge of scheduling, he was a casual, small - city lawyer from Tucson, Ariz. But that was a long time ago as politics is reckoned. Now that Burch is about to turn over the office of chairman of the Republican National Committee to Ray Bliss of Ohio, he impresses one as a mature combination of political philosopher and operator, a person who has gained inestimably in stature because of the dignified way in which he has conducted himself since he was made to walk the plank for the supposed crime of "symbolizing" Goldwaterism.

A lesser man would have sulked and gone about complaining of the injustice involved in being made a sacrificial goat. Instead of doing this, Dean Burch has used his last days as Republican national chairman to make it as easy as possible for his successor to take over the helm of a united party. Ray Bliss, it has been said, is a technician who does not recognize ideologies save when they pose "problems." And Burch, as a man who was well on his way toward becoming a first-rate technician himself, has tried to leave Bliss with an absolute minimum of problems on the docket.

The Burch speeches and magazine articles of the past three months have de-emphosized any ideology that might be interpreted as "extreme." In his speech in Baton Rouge, La., Burch rejected what he called the "slander" that the Goldwater victory in the states of the deep South was a "one-shot" affair, dependent on racist passions for the scope of its success.

Whether this analysis of the 1964 Republican victory in states like Alabama and Mississippi is good or bad won't be known until a few more elections have been held. But the important point is that Dean Burch hopes to build a permanent Republicanism in the South on a broad base of opposition to "centralist extremism" that will not preclude local respect for the right to vote as guaranteed by the fifteenth amendment. In taking this line in Baton Rouge Dean Burch was being as "undivisive" as possible, the better for Ray Bliss's hopes of surmounting problems on both sides of the Mason-Dixon Line.

The "non-divisive" Burch has been uppermost in speeches and interviews recognizing that the "leadership of the Republican renaissance will be diversified." He hopes that "prefix Republicanism" is on its way out. He has praised Barry Goldwater, Everett Dirkson, George Romney, Charles Percy, and Robert Taft Jr. with fine impartiality. It does prove the honesty of the man in his role as chairman of the Technical Aid Committee.

Burch believes that the U. S. electorate as a whole is conservative, and cites a number of polls to show that from 74 to 90 per cent of the people are for the "Republican positions . . . on prosecuting the war in Vietnam, on school bussing, on reapportionment and trimming the powers of the Supreme Court, on prayers in the schools." He thinks the 1964 vote went for Lyndon Johnson partly because everybody was so prosperous and partly because of the propaganda that Barry Goldwater might make a rash President.

If Dean Burch should run for Congress or for governor of Arizona, it would be as a non-rash conservative with principles of his own. Since Burch is not by temperament "merely a technician," fate probably did him a good turn when it pried him loose from the "purely technical" job of running the Republican National Committee.

Egyptians May Attack Ethiopia, Reports Hint

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (UPI) —The United Arab Republic is training and equipping warfare against the Ethiopian government, according to informed sources here.

These sources believe that U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser's goal is to split Eritrea from Ethiopia and, through a a vital United States Army communications station in Asmara, the capital of Eritrea.

The guerrilla training is reported to be going on at Iraqi military bases under the direction of Egyptian officers stationed there, but the number of men involved is unknown.

Sources believe that Nasser's plan is to send the guerrillas into the Sudan and from there have them infiltrate across the border into Eritrea. The new Sudan government formed last November has been giving open support to the so-called Eritrean Liberation Movement despite frequent protests by the Ethiopian government.

U.S. Base

The American installation at Asmara, known as Kagnew Station, is a major link in the United States' worldwide communications sytem and alsois involved in space tracking operations. There are 3,000 Americans including dependents, at the station.

It represents a major source of revenue for the Ethiopian government, both in annual rental fees and in money spent by the Americans stationed there.

Kagnew is one of two American military installations in Africa, the other being Wheelus Field in Libya, an Air Force training base.

Nasser, who opposes foreign military bases anywhere in Africa or the Arab world except his own in Yemen, has never mentioned Kagnew publicly. But in a speech a year ago he called for removal of American and British bases from Libya.

American officials then privately warned him that if he continued his campaign against Wheelus Field he would endanger shipments that are badly needed by Egypt. Nasser has not mentioned the base since.

"We have a long border with the Sudan, and if they want to cause trouble for us we can give them plenty of trouble in their South," said one official. "But we look on this as a temporary problem that will pass when the present caretaker government in the Sudan leaves office this spring."

Jobs of 15,000 Rail Firemen Are Eliminated

WASHINGTON (AP) —The railroad industry reported Wednesday night it has eliminated the jobs of more than 15,000 locomotive firemen in less than a year.

Another 6,000 of the remaining 22,000 firemen are expected to be eliminated from diesel engines in the second year since the 1963 ruling uner the nation's first peacetime compulsory arbitration law.

The removal of firemen on grounds that they are not needed on modern locomotives has cost the industry $30 million in severance pay so far, but it stands to save an estimated $75 million a year in wages.

The figures, released by the Association of American Railroads here, were prepared for a speech by chief industry negotiator J. E. Wolfe at a Yale University management conference at New Haven, Conn.

They were the first detailed figures from the industry.

Wolfe said the vast majority of the eliminated firemen landed on their feet with other jobs, a business of their own set up with their severance money, or are going to college.

Only 11 per cent of the 15,135 men eliminated so far have shown up on railroad unemployment rolls, he said.

However, H.E. Gilbert, president of the AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, said in Cleveland, Ohio, that more than 30 per cent are unemployed. Gilbert said the railroad figures covered only men eligible for jobless benefits.

The arbitration award, handed down in November 1963, went into effect last May after the firemen's union lost legal appeals up to the Supreme Court.

The special arbitration law and the terms of the award run for a total of two years, after which the union has said it will seek to force the railroads to rehire the eliminated firemen.

The award provided that the railroads could eliminate 90 per cent of all firemen from diesel engines in yard and freight service, but with provisions that gave lifetime job protection to most men. Firemen are being kept on passenger trains.

Wolfe said one of the most surprising results of the arbitration case was that the vast majority of firemen who could have taken other railroad jobs chose severance pay instead.

The railroads eliminated 4,800 firemen with two to 10 years service who, under the award, were offered comparable jobs with their current earnings guaranteed for five years.

About 4,000 — or 83 per cent — chose instead to take severance, which averaged $5,600 a man, Wolfe said.

Change of Mind Creates Change of Methods Too

By SAM CAMPBELL

Some people believe in taxes. They say we got to have them.

They say tax the old folks' homes till they can't afford to live in them, then tax everybody else to support the old folks.

They say tax the workingman on his income so he can't save anything in order that we'll have money to provide his dole when he gets out of work.

They say tax the workingman on his outgo to make up the deficit that was caused when the Socialist-crats wasted too much of the revenues from the tax on his income.

They say tax the businessman in order to keep him under surveillance while he builds the wealth of the community.

They say tax the industrialist so he can't expand and that way we can finance a commission to study the lack of jobs. They say tax the law-abiding in order to feed the crooks and criminals in jails.

They say tax parents in order to provide a lounging spot for filth-breeding non-students at state universities.

They say tax because we've always taxed.

They say tax because we don't know any better.

They say tax because we can not envision anything different from tax. They say tax even though tax involves the power to destroy. As the prophet counseled, "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

But let us examine an alternative. Instead of saying that we must continue a necessary evil, let us say that the necessity can be brought to an end.

Instead of taxing the old folks out of their homes, let us take the tax off their homes. Let us leave them undisturbed, if they so choose, in the dwellings where they reared their children, amid memories of the morning, in surroundings friendly and familiar; yes, where even the dents and scratches have a story to tell.

Take the tax off the workingman so he can save toward his retirement. Some will not make it, but many will. The insurance and mutual fund salesmen will see to that. As to the others — brotherly concern is the best reliance against famine.

Take the tax off the businessman. Let competition eliminate the inefficient and greedy. Let the buyer's educated judgment weed out the fraudulent.

Take the tax off the industrialist. Allow him to make more jobs. If we do that, we won't need a commission on unemployment.

Let the crooks and criminals in jail earn their keep. Let them experience the rehabilitating joy of honest wages and honorable toil. As that great humanitarian Paul of Tarsus said of the saints, "If any would not work, neither should he eat."

Let the universities be owned by corporations of teachers. Let them be capitalized by persons who have savings and who revenue from the future earnings of students whose earning power will have been increased, by their own education. That arrangement will drive the trouble-makers off the campus.

Stop doing things the wrong way. Start doing things the right way. How to start? Easy. Quit believing that wrong is right. Quit thinking a specific evil is necessary because some evil is inevitable. Cease to regard the ridiculous way as the practical way. Method is in the mind Change the mind, and the method must change.

If what is written here is impossible to accomplish, then logic is illogic, fraud is truth, and sense is nonsense.

Indeed if the wrong way is the practical way or if the right way does not exist, then the whole English language is a contradiction of itself and each word means the opposite of what it seems to mean.

It can be done. But for the thinking, it is done now.

Tokens May Be Used For Slot Machines

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A bill to allow tokens to be used in Nevada slot machines has passed the Assembly and today is on Gov. Grant Sawyer's desk.

The measure is designed to meet the current coin shortage — especially of silver dollars — by allowing casinos to manufacture their own tokens subject to gaming commission approval.

Atty. Gen. Harvey Dickerson has said present state law forbids anything but genuine coins in slot machines.

South Africa Hangs Bomber For Murder

By JAMES C. MOULD

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Frederick J. Harris, a white opponent of South Africa's racial laws, was hanged today for the death of a white woman killed in the bombing of the main Johannesburg railway station last year.

Harris, 27, a schoolteacher, had been chairman of South Africa's Nonracial Olympics Committee and campaigned publicly against apartheid in sports. His particular target was the exclusion of nonwhites from South African Olympic teams.

He admitted planting the bomb in the station concourse during an evening rush hour in protest against the apartheid policy of racial segregation. The court rejected his plea of temporary insanity.

In the bombing an elderly white woman was fatally injured and several white adults and children were badly hurt.

The government ignored a last-minute appeal for mercy cabled to President C. R. Swart by 10 members of the British Parliament. They said prospects of peace in Africa would be diminished by the execution.

Police put a tight security guard around the Pretoria jail throughout the night. They kept all vehicles away from the vicinity, and armed wardens patroled the surrounding area.

Only a few passing stragglers and a group of newsmen were near the jail at 5:30 a.m. when Harris went to the gallows.

His wife, Ann, and their 9-month-old son, Davey, saw him at the jail for the last time Wednesday.

Harris had appealed his death sentence to South Africa's highest court. He was turned down.

Mrs. Harris then appealed to Swart to commute the sentence to life imprisonment for the sake of their son. She also contended the crime was not premeditated. Her plea was also rejected.

Krishna Menon Sent On Mission to Cairo

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — V. K. Krishna Menon, India's former defense minister, left for Cairo today on what appeared to be his first government mission since he was ousted from the Cabinet after Red China mauled India in the 1962 border war.

A government spokesman said Menon's trip was private, to attend a seminar on Palestine. But he was briefed Wednesday night by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and Foreign Minister Swaran Singh and was expected to confer with President Gamal Abdel Nasser about the coming African-Asian conference in Algiers.

COLORADO SPRINGS KENNEL CLUB NOTES

by Mary Urban

As I have said before my editor gives me free reign in this weekly attempt to entertain and inform the public in affairs canine. So, I'm going to do just that and too the horn for a friend of mine.

Her name is Saskia of Hap's Bluff. She is an eleven-month-old German Shepherd, owned and handled by Mrs. Harriet Pross of Black Forest. She is a beautiful brown sable with a black saddle and quite a charmer.

What makes this young dog so special is the fact that she has already won two Best In Show awards. True, these awards were won in fun matches, but at the time of her first Best in Show win she was competing against 431 other dogs of all ages and breeds. She won this coveted award March 7, this year, at the Mile-Hi Kennel Club all age, all breed show held at the Jeffery County Fairgrounds in Denver. Jack Farber of Denver was the judge. She also won first in the Working Group under John Harrington, owner of the Stormcroft German Shepherd Kennels of Golden, Colo.

At a puppy match March 21 at the Jefferson County Fairgrounds, Saskia went first in the Working group under Ron Smithson of Denver and another Best in Show award under Douglass Club of Denver. This triumph was made even sweeter by the fact that 300 other dogs were also competing for this award.

According to several competent judges, Saskia cannot be faulted, which means she is very near perfection.

Two Denver dog shows have been set for April.

The Columbine Dachshund Club will hold its annual show April 24 at the Premiere Motor Hotel. The show, for Dachshunds only, will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Colorado Kennel Club All-Breed show will be held at the Exhibition Hall at the Denver Coliseum, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., April 25.

More than 70 entries from 11 states are expected for the Dachshund show. The breed comes in three coat varieties and in two sizes.

Entries for both shows close April 13. Entry blanks can be obtained by calling Denver, 798-0064.

At a recent luncheon in New York City, Dr. Armour C. Wood, a veterinarian and former president of the Trenton Kennel Club offered a five-point program for proper sanitation, nutrition, disease prevention, breeding and the keeping of records.

He had these suggestions for office visits to your veterinarian:

Always try to make an appointment. Dogs, like children, are disturbed by long waiting periods. Keep your dog in the car away from other sick dogs. Take your dog directly to the examining room and directly back to the car.

Always take your dog's temperature at home. An excited dog usually has a high temperature at the hospital. Pulse and respiratory rates also are accelerated.

Bring stool samples in all cases. Much can be learned from them.

Have a complete medical history of your dog, including previous illnesses and vaccinations.

Don't send a dog for a check-up with irresponsible adults or teen-agers. Take him yourself and make sure he is under control at all times.

Directing his remarks to breeders, Dr. Wood said that the relationship between them and veterinarians often leaves much to be desired.

"Sometimes this relationship is strained to the point where individuals in my profession and yours act as if they are competitors. This condition is deplorable," he said. "Let us examine some of the areas in which breeders can utilize the services of my profession to better advantage."

Wood then singled out sanitation, which he said was well-drained runs, clean beds, and the control of internal and external parasites. Puppies should have some shade in the summer and some sunshine in the winter," he said.

In discussing nutrition, Wood said that proteins, carbohydrates, fats, minerals, and vitamins should be given in proper balance. For the growing dog these are the building stones. A lot of research has gone into commercial dog foods and they were good, but he liked to give suppliments. "Egg yolk is good and so is liver, but liver must not be overdone," he said.

"A little liver juice is good for puppies. Avoid fat, "butterball" puppies for the first six months. Overweight is frequently a factor in structural and anatomical defects. Avoid sudden change in diet. Old dogs should have less protein," he said.

On disease prevention, the veterinarian said the bassis should be a good vaccination program. Don't overlook boosters — every six moths or at least every year until middle-age, then every two years."

Wood stressed that for breeding, the ideal brood bitch should have no major faults, be in good health and normal in weight and whelping. Problem bitches should not be included in the program. He told how too many breeds need artificial insemination, Caesarean operations and the hand-rearing of puppies.

As to records, the veterinarian said that all pertinent information on every dog should be kept on separate cards, including notes on whelping and medical histories.

Questions about dogs may be directed to Mrs. Mary Urban, 495-2143.

SERVICE CUT

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, short of skilled young men in science and the professions, has cut military service by 50 per cent or more for those with the equivalent of a university education.

The presidium of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) set a one-year term of service for men "who have higher education."

Kennedy Exhibit Shown in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The John F. Kennedy Library exhibit was opening at the National Archives Building and David Powers was standing next to the desk of the assassinated president.

"John-John would come in under this desk," Powers said as he pointed to a little door, "and make a scratching, knocking noise."

Then the President would lean down, he said, and ask solemnly "is there a rabbit under there?"

And little John would jump out, shouting with delight over his surprise.

Powers, who was Kennedy's adviser and companion for years, is accompanying the exhibit around the country and around the world.

He said that in Dublin many people genuflected when they came to the desk; in Warsaw, by the time the exhibit closed at night, the people had covered Kennedy's rocker with flowers.

The exhibit will remain here a month.

As a World War II draftee, Carl Reiner, creator-producer of "The Dick Van Dyke Show," was taught to speak French, then shipped to Hawaii.

Aerospace Exhibition Proposed by President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson plans to ask Congress for $2.5 million to stage a two-week international aerospace exposition in the summer of 1966 to sell American aviation and space products to government and commercial buyers from around the world.

Federal Aviation Administrator Najeeb E. Halaby reported after confering with Johnson Wednesday that such a show would enable the United States to go into competition with the Soviet Union, Britain and France in the aerospace product field.

The exposition would be staged at Dulles International Airport in nearby Virginia and would be similar to shows held periodically at Moscow; Farnsborough, England; and Le Bourget Airport, Paris. The plan is to recoup the $2.5 million outlay through rentals of exhibition space and admission charges.

The 20th amendment to the Constitution changed the date for the Presidential inauguration from on or about March 4 to Can. 20.

Drought Will Remain Big Problem in Colorado

DENVER (UPI) — Drought still will be the main problem facing Colorado farmers this summer despite worries of and Utah are racing themneighboring states over infestation by grasshoppers.

Farmers in both Wyoming and Utah are bacing themselves for an unusual plaque of the insects.

But Lloyd Phelps, chief of the administrative division of the Colorado Agriculture Department, said grasshoppers should not be a problem in Colorado.

"We will have a few delicate spots," Phelps said, "but our preliminary Fall reports did not indicate a serious problem.

"Grasshoppers are a funny deal," he said. "They build up in areas without treatment to the point where if there is optimum weather conditions there will be an epidemic."

Phelps said there might be some small trouble spots over the eastern area—one by Lyons in Boulder County. "There are other little areas, but we don't look for a serious problem," he said.

Coloradohas not had a serious problem with grasshoppers since 1958 when 3 million acres of land were sprayed in the largest grasshopper control program in the world. It cost more than a million dollars.

Both Utah and Wyoming expect an unusually large infestation of the insects this summer.

U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have warned that Utah is facing "one of the worst grasshopper invasions in years," this summer.

The officials said they expected the grasshopper population to be the worst in 25 years.

DISASTER NETWORK

DALLAS (UPI) — A new radio network gives 10 Dallas hospitals direct two - way contact 24 hours a day. The network would aid in channeling casualties in any major disaster.

Officials said the network would be a tremendous help since, during emergencies, hospital switchboards tend to get jammed.

Jilted Suitor May Sue for 'Return'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — If a jilted suitor finds that money, indeed, cannot buy love, he will be able to sue for the return of the money, a ring, or other gifts under a bill approved by the New York State Assembly Wednesday.

Assemblymen, in some tongue-in-cheek debate, approved 129-14 a bill that would allow either party in an engagement to go to court to seek the return of gifts.

This was no joking matter, said the sponsor of the bill, Brooklyn Democrat Noah Goldstein.

He cited a case in which a 77-year-old widower gave his house and his late wife's jewelry to a 40-year-old woman who then broke their engagement. The man had signed over legal ownership of the gifts, Goldstein said, and could not get them back.

Under present law, Goldstein said, a jilted suitor has no legal recourse.

Firm Reports Largest Growth In Its History

Southwestern Life Insurance Company had the greatest growth year in its 62-year history in 1964, according to Charles T. McCreight and Russell H. Drawz, Southwestern Life representatives in Colorado Springs.

The company's 62nd Annual Report just received from company president W. Dawson Sterling shows new all - time highs for new insurance sales, assets, insurance in force, benefit payments and investments. Sterling advised that business produced by Southwestern Life's representatives in this area made a significant contribution to the firm's record year.

"Together, all of the new growth records mean greater security than ever before for our hundreds of thousands of policyowners," Sterling said.

New insurance sales broke the half-billion dollar mark to total a record-breaking $559,030,965 for the year, a 26.7 per cent increase or $117,749,981 over the previous year.

Insurance in force advanced to a record of $3,316,391,978, reflecting a 1964 gain of $282,640,791 — the largest single-year increase ever accrued from new sales.

The company's assets, representing a large measure policyowners' savings held for future payment, passed the three-quarter billion dollar level in 1964 and at year end totaled a new high of $753,492,865, an increase of $48,953,419 for the year.

Benefit payments to policyowners and beneficiaries reached a record $54,393,729 — and average of $214,000 paid each working day during the year.

Living policyowners received nearly two-thirds of the record benefit total as proceeds from matured endowments, college educational plans, annuity payments, disability payments, cash value, benefits and health insurance benefits.

New investments made by the company during 1964 hit a new record total of $84,916,873, with more than $40 million of this amount going to help families finance the construction and purchase of homes.

Under the company's "Plan for Progress" seven new branch offices were opened during 1964 across the firm's 22-state and District of Columbia operating territory — in Oakland and San Jose, California; Atlanta, Georgia; Jackson, Mississippi; Nashville, Tennessee; a second branch in Houston, Texas; and a third branch in Dallas. Also a regional office was added in Los Angeles.

AFA Air Police Detain Reporter

A Gazette Telegraph reporter, assigned to cover the 7th Annual Seminar at the Air Force Academy Wednesday, was detained for more than an hour by the Air Police in the basement of Fairchild Hall because he didn't have a pass.

The Seminar, which featured Senators A. S. (Mike) Monroney and F. Edward Hebert, is titled "Congress and America's Future," and a panel discussion on the topic was to have been held at the Academy Wendesday night.

The reporter was told by personnel at the Air Academy that the meeting was to be held in Fairchild Hall, and was to start at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. He arrived, went to the elevator, and was told by the air policeman on duty there that unless his name was on one of several lists or he had a pass, he would not be allowed to go to the auditorium in which the discussion was being held.

His press pass was shown to the air policeman and to another air policeman who was sent to escort the reporter to the meeting. However, that carried no apparent authority and was ignored.

After waiting for the arrival of the escort for approximately 45 minutes, the reporter was finally taken to the auditorium in Fairchild Hall, where it was discovered the discussion group had met and subsequently left for another part of the Academy to continue the discussion informally.

After much searching an another 15 - minute wait, the reporter was taken to Arnold Hall, where it was discovered the informal discussion also had broken up and those in attendance were leaving. The reporter, by this time a bit confused and discouraged, did the same.

Senate Hasn't Dug Out Varmit in Bank Scandal

By SAM CAMPBELL

The fan dance conducted by the U.S. comptroller of currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to avoid overexposure in the San Francisco scandal deserves an award for sheer comedy.

But even at that, it looks as if that show will come in second place compared with the prancing and waving that the Senate investigating committee is doing to cover up the comptroller and the FDIC.

For instance, the news services so far have carried a little story about the trips that Don Silverthorne, ex-president of the ex-San Francisco National Bank, made to Las Vegas. Through its established pipeline, the committee also let slip the fact that Comptroller James Saxon and his aide A. E. Larsen received gifts of $125 cufflinks.

Nonesense, there is more to this episode than that. As you may recall Saxon and Larsen are the very same two persons whom I tried to telephone. Neither would talk. Neither would come to the phone. Larsen's deputy — a chap by the name of Glover — did come to the telephone, but refused even to give his first name.

Among other things, Glover was asked whether any of the federal bank officials were implicated. He denied all. Apparently he didn't understand that the Senate investigators would have to squeeze a little juice out of this striped pelt to prove to us gullibles they are really big-white-hunter types.

If you've ever driven down a woodsy country land, you'll understand the propagandistic psychology here. Give the poor taxpayer a little smell — a sniff that he can't quite identify — and he will pass on, suspecting there may be a varmint in the brush but without enough evidence to be sure.

Now the federal authorities are perfuming themselves. They have revved up the hired hands. "Get tough," they instruct the crew, "prove we are virtuous."

So the feds are working the banks over hard. The committee is reaping the predictable reams of free advertising. And nobody suffers except the people who had absolutely nothing to do with the nasty San Francisco incident.

Now to become angry at the dramatis personae of the San Francisco sham is as unproductive as booing the villain in the Knott's Berry Farm melodrama. The federal authorities should be objects of pity, not disgust. They are merely creatures of a system that is fundamentally wrong, a system that decrees some men should have the power to meddle with other men's property.

They act their appointed roles. The federal appointees sit gravely and austerely like the lecherous judge on the burlesque stage while the elective clowns tumble and flop near the wings.

The objective of the appointees always is to justify their existence while the goal of the clowns is to get elected again.

To say that this performance is for your protection is like frying snowballs for breakfast—preposterous. Your only real compensation is a good laugh. The show would be even funnier except the ticket is so expensive.

Western States Economy Still On Uptrend

Continuation of the long uptrend in the business economy of the western states is predicted by respondents of the 1000-member Western Business Forecast Panel, conducted quarterly by the Prudential Insurance Company.

Members of the panel say the western economy will move into the second quarter of 1965 in a strong position, with more than two - thirds of the panelists expecting an increase in their business activity over the first quarter of this year.

Panel respondents indicated that the coming quarter will compare very favorably with the second quarter of 1964 with 84 per cent of the panelists expecting business volume to equal or exceed that of a year ago. Half of the panel members predict a gain in activity of from one to 10 per cent.

In the panel's industry groupings, the transportation - public utilities group rose sharply from fourth to first place in their degree of confidence about the coming quarter. Ninety - two per cent of these representatives expect business volume to equal or exceed that of a year ago.

Seventy - five per cent of business men in Colorado - New Mexico - Wyoming foresee their business activity equaling or exceeding that of a year ago. The most optimistic group remains the Northern California-Hawaii businessmen where 92 per cent are expecting business to equal or exceed last year's second quarter.

Steel Strike Deadline One Month Away

There's only one month left before the present steel labor contract expires. And the next 20 days are the most critical, reports Iron Age magazine. But steel users and producers act as though the present situation will be unchanged on May 1.

The national metalworking weekly says steel users continue to order heavily for May and later periods. The mills are revising second quarter shipping estimates upward. Inventory calculations, also, are being boosted on the assumption of heavy stockpiling in May.

The working premise seems to be that there will not be a strike on May 1, but neither will the strike threat be removed. All plans and predictions go out the window if there is a strike, a settlement before May 1, or agreement on a lengthy extension of the present contract.

Iron Age says the pattern of steel shipments should run something like this: January and February, 8 millions tons each; March, 9 million tons; April 9.4 million tons; and May 9 million tons.

The estimate for April is based on the assumption that mills will sweep out their plants as the strike deadline approaches. If a contract extension comes by April 20, this one - shot surge will be pushed back into May.

Meanwhile, mills are under heavy pressure from steel buyers for deliveries. Few — if any — mills are current on deliveries, or even close to it. Most are running two to four weeks late on such critical products as sheets and plates.

Mills are trying to respond to these pressures, but few expect to be able to clean up delinquent orders by May 1.

Every time they seem to be making some progress, something happens. In the Midwest bad weather has wiped out earlier gains. And a major equipment breakdown at a big mill in the East could cause an additional two weeks delay in the shipment of sheet and strip steel from that plant.

Consequently, few users have been able to build all of the inventory they want. While the auto industry appears to be in better shape than thought earlier, May orders from that industry indicate it would continue to stockpile at peak rates for at least an extra month.

Steel shipments are running as high as predicted. But consumption is running higher than predicted. One mill admits consumption for the year could run two million tons greater than estimated only a few months ago.

Most of the increase would go to the booming auto industry which has been setting production records since the beginning of the year.

The number of Penney department stores in operation in 48 states at the end of fiscal 1964 was 1,676 against 1,680 a year ago.

The board of directors of J. C. Penney Company, department store chain, Wednesday, declared a dividend of 37½ cents a share on the Company's outstanding common stock payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 6.

LITTER WARNING

NEW YORK (UPI) — Skaters beware! Don't litter the skating pond. Paper, candy wrappers and larger items of litter carelessly tossed on the ice can easily trip skaters with resultant personal injuries, warns Keep America Beautiful.

"This is a case where every litter bit really hurts," explained the national anti-litter organization. Clearly marked litter receptacles are urged for every community skating pond and rink.

Memory Is Foe Of Boredom, Boyle Declares

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Memory is a foe of boredom.

That's why over a lifetime a man's memory is his best companion. It enables him to remember good times and bad times, but not dull times.

For some reason dull times don't stick in the memory. We forget them.

Your own life hasn't been so dull if you can look back and remember when—

Away back in 1921 the State of Iowa made it legal for adults to buy cigarettes. Another historic decision that same year. Despite prohibition, the U.S. attorney general decided doctors still had the right to prescribe beer for medicinal use.

Only the wealthy had barbecue pits in their backyards.

Common folks usually ate in the kitchen, summer or winter.

Few parents bothered to call a physician if a child developed a runny nose. Normal children were expected to have runny noses for at least a third of the year.

Any man who wore a handkerchief in the coat pocket next to his lapel was regarded as a dude.

When you went to the grocery store you didn't need a checkbook or a billfold. You could easily buy a day's supply of food with the money in your change purse.

There were five times as many dope addicts in the nation as are known now, but reformers were so busy fighting John Barleycorn they didn't pay much attention to the narcotics problem.

Nobody bothered to put his dog on a leash. Dogfights were as common on the streets then as car accidents are now.

It was generally accepted in the community that most teachers would remain old maids — and act like them.

The worst thing about people who had dared to take a ride in an airplane was that they never quit bragging about it. Some nuts even predicted the time would come when you'd be able to fly across the country in a single day.

Butter was a kind of status symbol. If a family was so hard up it had to use a substitute, it hid the fact from the neighbors.

It was thought to be a waste of money to send a girl to college. After all, what could "book larnin' " teach her about raising a family?

You could tell a grandmother by the color of her hair. It was an honored gray.

NARROW-ESCAPE

HOUSTON (UPI) — Frank Vivian, owner of a grocery, was locked in a cooling vault during a robbery and had to squirm through a tiny glass door used by customers to reach in for serve-yourself milk.

The Houston Chronicle headlined the item, "Robbed Man Escapes By Milky Way."

Mostly Malarky

"The only way I can save money is to write a check and put it into my piggy bank!"

KIDS HAVE IDEAS ABOUT HOSPITALS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) Youngsters at the University of Michigan Hospital, asked to give their impressions of life in sick bay, reported they like the food and nurses. They dislike shots, blood tests, X-rays, and staying in bed.

Asked what they would have more of if they were running a hospital for children., they indicated a preference for more television, candy and going outside. One boy, 9, said his hospital would have "more guns."

Delay Attempt Fails in Trial Over Krebiozen

CHICAGO (AP) — An attempt to delay trial of four promotors of Kebiozen, scheduled to start Monday, failed Wednesday before. a U.S. District Court judge.

Krebiozen is a drug used by some cancer sufferers. The defendants are accused of mail fraud and conspiracy in connection with its distribution.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, physiologist and pioneer endorser of Krebiozen, sued March 10 to head off the prosecution. He contended a jury did not possess the intelligence to decide the merits of Krebiozen. He urged that a panel of five physicians be appointed by the government and the defense to investigate and report.

In denying the petition, Judge Bernard M. Decker of U.S. District Court observed, "the plaintiff's (Ivy's) argument that he will not receive a fair trial is at best tenuous. Juries are called every day to determine problems not within the scope of their knowledge."

Other defendants in the 49-count federal indictment are Dr. Stevan Durovic, discoverer of the drug; his brother, Marko, a lawyer, and Dr. William F. Phillips.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman of the U.S. District Court has turned down several requests for postponements and set April 5 as a firm date for trial.

The Durovics asked the U.S. Circuit Court of appeals Tuesday to delay the trial for six months. They contended a change in defense counsel on short notice has made it impossible to prepare for trial.

Students in Spain Demand More Freedom

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and other Spanish cities university students and police clash over student demands for the right of "free assembly."

In Madrid a secretly circulated petition which later is presented to the government demands freedom of association, the right to strike and freedom of information and expression.

FOR CITY COUNCIL
OSCAR WATSON
PROVEN ABILITY TO SERVE

It is signed by more than 1,000 Spaniards, including professors, clergymen, lawyers, students, laborers and others.

In the northern province of Asturia, disgruntled miners storm a police station. It is the first time since the end of the civil war in 1939 that a mob has attacked a Spanish police station.

This is the other side of the coin in a Spain which gradually is emerging from 100 years of isolation behind the barrier of the Pyrenees, its economy booming like nothing since the treasure galleons of the Spanish Main, but internally still torn by doubts.

These doubts spring from the century of chaos which preceded the end of the civil war.

They spring also from doubts of what is to happen in "the succession", the day when something or someone will have to follow Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Within Franco's cabinet there are men who chafe at the slow pace of the development of Spanish political and civil liberties, but even they plead for time to establish democratic processes.

Russians Want New Disarmament Talks

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Soviet Union today asked U.N. Secretary-General U Thant to call a meeting of the 114-nation U.N. Disarmament Commission within the next two weeks.

The request was made by Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Federenko.

He said his government felt the commission should meet before any resumption of negotiations in Geneva by the 17-nation committee which has been dealing with the arms problem.

He did not suggest a specific date, but requested that the meeting be held sometime during the first half of April.

U.S. Economic Upswing Enters Its 50th Month

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Bigger and better — maybe even indestructible? — these are the answers you get when you ask: How's business?

Today the economic upswing enters its 50th month. If it continues upward during April — and most signs now point to that as a sure thing — the expansion will have equaled the longevity record for peacetime set in the 1933-37 recovery from the Great Depression. In May a further climb would set a record on its own.

But records already dot the economy. High marks have been made this year in industrial production, personal incomes, retail sales, factory take-home pay, employment, stock prices, corporate profits, cash dividends, cost of living, savings, personal and public debts. Most of these are good things, a few doubtful.

True, there is no lack of problems and uncertainties today — Viet Nam, racial strife, threat of a steel strike, dangers of overheating the economy, lagging home building, drain of U.S. gold reserves because of imbalance in international payments.

But barring an explosion of one or more of these simmering problems, the very momentum of the long-lived era of prosperity should carry the economy to new heights this month and next.

Most government and business economists predict the business upswing will outlast 1965, unless a long steel strike develops. Some say the administration "won't let" a recession develop, using either more tax cuts, increased government spending, or both, to stimulate business at the first sign of faltering.

Pessimists stress that the rate of growth of the economy may slacken after the big spurt in the first quarter just ended.

Optimists stress that at any rate it will keep on growing.

An in-between view is that if the rate of growth slows, that might keep the economy healthy, free of excesses, and assure the expansion a long life than would a more frantic pace.

Here are the latest available figures as the 50th month starts:

Industrial production is 7 per cent higher than a year ago, with autos just having chalked up a record production month and steel tonnage also pouring out as a record.

Personal income is running at around $510 billion annual rate, and factory take-home pay is averaging $5 a week higher than a year ago, with the factory work week the highest since the end of World War II.

Almost two million more persons have nonfarm jobs than this time last year. Jobs for skilled workers are more plentiful, and the supply of eligible workers tightening.

Corporate profits apparently set a new high in the first three months of 1965. Cash dividend payments of $2 billion in the first two months were 11 per cent higher than in the like period of 1964.

Plans for more business spending for new plants and equipment in coming months have just been expanded again. Consumer spending continues high, and intentions to go on spending appear firm.

Plastics May Infringe on Milk Bottle

By JESSE BOGUE

NEW YORK (UPI) — More and more the ordinary glass milk bottle is fighting to hold its place on America's doorsteps and in its refrigerators.

The coated paper container already has established itself firmly in most retail outlets. Now, plastics are threatening to take over an even greater proportion of the milk container market.

Already test - marketed in scattered sections of the country, the polyethylene half-gallon and gallon container, on the market for more than two years, will be bidding for a major share of the attention of dairy men's representatives again at the national packaging exposition and conference of the American Management Association,, opening in Chicago April 5.

"By this summer, you'll see the disposable plastic milk container over the whole market area from Pennsylvania to Massachusetts," said David W. Wallace, executive vice president of American Seal - Kap Corp. These, he said, will be in the half-gallon and gallon sizes, and mainly formed from high-density polyethylene.

These, he said, now are priced at just slightly more than the paper container for milk, but Wallace cited what he said were other cost advantages to dairies in use of the plastic container. "And," he said, "every dairy which has gone to these has experienced a gain in sales—until their competitors came along with the same idea."

The dairy industry, he noted, is only one type of user for plastics in the $24.5 billion packaging market; plastic containers are turning up in dozens of applications in household preparations, even meats. He cautioned, too, that the makers of glass, paper and metals are scrapping every step of the way, with their own new products and applications of existing devices.

China Says U.S. Plane Shot Down

TOKYO (UPI) — Communist China claimed it shot down an unmanned U.S. reconnaissance plane over South China Wednesday.

Radio Peking in a broadcast heard here said the aircraft was brought down by a naval anti-aircraft battery but did not disclose the exact location.

The downed airplane was described as "U.S. imperialist unpiloted reconnaissance aircraft."

The United States has not confirmed or denied that it has sent drone aircraft on flights over Chinese territory.

NO STAEK

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—The $2 horse steak dinner, a standard item on the Harvard Faculty Club menu since the meat shortage days of World War II, was not available Wednesday.

Club officials said their New York meat broker advised them his source had run out of the item.

Indians, Harrison Meet

Wasson Faces Wildcats In Top SCL Contest

A pair of important league contests highlight an otherwise brief Friday schedule on the local sports scene.

Wasson will resume action in the South Central League race when the Thunderbirds travel to Pueblo to meet Central's Wildcats in a game that was originally scheduled Locally, Cheyenne Mountain and Harrison will crack open the Will Rogers League campaign at 4 p.m. at Harrison. Cheyenne, winner of 56 straight in the old Pikes Peak League, will be favored to take its first step toward the initial baseball championship of the WRL.

In addition, Colorado College's touring baseball team will play a doubleheader at New Mexico Highlands. The busy Tigers were to open their season this afternoon at Adams State and will follow the Friday twin bill with a Saturday doubleheader at St. Joseph's of Albuquerque and a single game Sunday at New Mexico Highlands.

The Palmer track team is scheduled to open its season Friday in a dual meet with Pueblo South in Pueblo. This afternoon Wasson runners engage in their second action of the week, traveling to the Steel City to meet East and Centennial in a triangular. Also on today's schedule is a quadrangular at Fountain which was postponed from Tuesday. The Trojans will host Cheyenne Mountain, Air Academy High, and Canon City. The long local baseball action today has Academy High at home to Cherry Creek in another makeup contest.

Wasson could possibly take over first place in the SCL Friday, depending on the outcome of today's battle in Pueblo matching Centennial and South. South, with one victory on the books, will move into the lead with a win but should the Colts lose, the victor in the Central-Wasson struggle will take over the top spot. The Thunderbirds swatted Centennial 11-4 in their first start Tuesday.

Canon City Baseballers Post Third Straight Win

CANON CITY — Behind the clutch pitching of Dee Betts and the pinch-hitting of Dan Scavarda, Coach Sam Schimelsig's Tigers recorded their third straight win of the season here Wednesday and the Canon City baseballers have strengthened their position as Will Rogers League contenders.

In three games, the Tigers have bombarded the opposition for five home runs and Canon City also possesses the bull pen to give pre-season favorites from Cheyenne Mountain a run for the WRL crown.

The Tigers struck in the sixth frame Wednesday as pinch-hitter Scavarda homered to push Canon City ahead and Dee Betts preserved the lead to down the visitors from the Fountain Valley Boys school, 5-2.

Dave Eslick started on the mound for the Tigers but he was relieved by Dee Betts in the sixth stanza. This was Betts' second victory of the season.

The Widefield-Florence nonconference game was cancelled by the latter team. The contest was to have been played Wednesday afternoon. Widefield's next outing is scheduled here Friday when the Gladiators tangle with Canon City in WRL competition.

Hall of Fame Fete a Sellout

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

The induction of the first three members of the Colorado Sports Hall of Fame this Friday evening has been assured a great success, according to the founders of the newly formed awards organization.

A capacity crowd of over 1,000 will attend the awards dinner at the Denver Hilton Hotel, to see and hear the three initial members of the Hall of Fame or their representatives. The banquet begins at 7 p.m.. All available tickets have been sold.

Two of the trio, Jack Dempsey and Earl (Dutch) Clark, have indicated they will be in attendance for Friday's fete. The other member of the distinguished group, Bryon (Whizzer) White, has said he will be there if at all possible, but because of his duties as U.S. Supreme Court Judge he has been unable to confirm the invitation.

These three were natural choices for the inaugural members as all have brought nation-wide fame to themselves and their home state for participation in athletics.

Dempsey, of course, was one of the most respected prize fighters the world has even known. From Manassa, Colo., which explains his nickname of the "Manassa Mauler." Dempsey rose to fame from bar room battles in the gold camps of Colorado and throughout the West to the Heavyweight Championship of the world.

Clark, from Pueblo, was a tremendous all-around athlete while attending Colorado College here in Colorado Springs during the late 1920's, & was the state's first All-America in football as the Tigers' quarterback. He later went into professional football, and still is listed with the all-time greats of the pro game, being chosen to the all-star eleven for several years running.

White was another who came from a small town in the state, Wellington, a whistle-stop located just outside Ft. Collins. Although he never played in high school, the Whizzer gained All-America honors as quarterback for the University of Colorado football team, and he guided the Buffs into their first bowl game against Rice in the Cotton Bowl in 1938. While was awarded a Rhodes Scholarship and studied at Oxford in England, and then later was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court after practicing law in his home state.

The selection committee had liberty to elect as many as five members to the Hall of Fame for this first year. However, each must receive at least three-fourths of the ballots from the 16-man voting group and this threesome were the only ones getting the required majority. The selection committee was made up of newsmen from throughout the state.

There will be voting each year, but only if individuals receive three-fourths of all ballots will they be included on the Hall of Fame list. Only three per year may be elected in the future, but nominations will be accepted on any number of candidates form the general public.

Some of the special guests for Friday's banquet will include Gov. John Love, Denver Mayor Tom Corrigan,, Eddie Egan of New York City, and Denver Chamber of Commerce president Ted Ackerman. The C of C is acting as sponsor of the project.

Master of ceremonies will be the always witty Ben Martin, head football coach at the Air Force Academy. Introducing Dempsey will be Eddie Bohn of Denver, a close friend of the former World Heavyweight champion and a member of the Colorado boxing commission.

Bully Van de Graaff, grid coach at Colorado College when Clark was beginning his career, will introduce the immortal Dutchman, who now lives near Detroit. Harry Carlson, retired director of athletics at Colorado University, will make the introductions for White.

NCAA Gym Finals Set For Friday

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Ticket sales indicate a capactiy crowd in Southern Illinois University's 10,000-seat arena for the NCAA Gymnastics finals beginning Friday.

The two-day affair will be climaxed Saturday by the national finals team competition between Washington and Penn State, which finished last year in a fourth-place tie.

Washington, a surprise victor last week over Iowa State in semifinals at Boulder, Colo., has scheduled an eight-member team for action.

The Lions have a 10-0 season record in dual meet activity and Washington is 8-0.

About 15 gymnasts from 34 universities seek individual titles in the meet's seven events. Point totals at the end of Friday's preliminaries will determine which six men in each event will be Saturday's finalists.

Twelve gymnasts who qualified from regionals are entered in six of the events for the special all-round trophy to be awarded Friday.

Penn State, however, could dominate the all-round quest. Steve Cohen and Mike Jacobson, high-point performers for the Lions in the semifinals, also are highly rated for the all-round honor.

Others are Ed Isabelle, another Penn State bidder and last year's all-round runner-up, and Michigan State's Jim Curzi, who finished third.

Iowa State and Michigan have the largest delegations in the individual competition 10 gymnasts. Michigan was third last year in team competition.

Rags-to-Riches Broncos Hit 20,000 in Sales

By FRANK PITMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — Rags-to-riches almost understates the startling resurgence of the Denver Broncos of the American Football League.

Today, advance season ticket sales will top 20,000, a figure undreamed of scarcely 45 days ago. That contrasts with 7,996 last year and 29,259 for all previous five years the Broncos have been operating here. Their FL record for the five years is 18 won, 49 lost, and three tied.

"This is just unbelievable," said Gerry Phipps, who with his brother, Allan Phipps, gained control of 92 per cent of the stock in Empire Sports, Inc., owners of the Broncos, in a dispute with other stockholders Feb. 15.

* * *

With the aid of a $1.8 million bank loan, the Phipps brothers bought out the 52 per cent interest of six other major stockholders who were considering offers to sell the Broncos franchise to some other city.

The Phipps brothers, members of a family long prominent in Colorado history, announced their determination to keep the club in Denver and matched their words with dollars.

Since then, support for the Broncos has snowballed.

N. G. (Nick) Petry, a general contractor and business competitor of the Phippses, took charge of the season ticket sale Feb. 20. He quarterbacked a drive that saw these major developments:

—More than 20 big businesses offered employes payroll deduction plans for buying season tickets.

—Seventeen banks and finance companies offered no-interest, no-charge loans to ticket buyers.

"I never dreamed it would develop as it has," said Gerry Phipps. "I am gratified to see that the great bulk of the sales came from the man in the street."

The sales campaign poured more than $500,000 into the Bronco treasury. Tickets for the seven AFL home games are scaled at $31.50 for adults along the sidelines, $21 for adults and $10.85 for students in the end zones.

The drive got an unexpected boost when the Broncos purchased the contract of Cookie Gilchrist, the AFL's top fullback, from champion Buffalo, and sent along Billy Joe, Denver fullback. Abner Haynes, a halfback, also has been obtained from Kansas City.

The current sales assure attendance in the 34,264 capacity stadium far ahead of last year's average of 16,894. The Broncos playing record the past two seasons has been 2-11-1.

The half-million dollars from the advance ticket sales plus $900,000 year from an NBC television contract makes the next Bronco season a financial success even before it opens.

Gilchrist Says He'd Rather Play for Raiders

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — All-league fullback Cookie Gilchrist, traded by the American Football League champion Buffalo Bills to the Denver Broncos, said Wednesday he would prefer to play for the Oakland Raiders.

The 250-pound runner said he plans to live in Oakland no matter where he plays.

"I like it here and I feel the opportunities are so much better," said Gilchrist, who was in the area for a professional football players' golf tournament.

"I'm looking for something in promotions, selling, an opportunity for a person to grow and develop," Gilchrist said in an interview.

"Look, I think Denver is a fine city and those are fine people," Gilchrist explained. "I have a preference for Oakland or for New York and if Coach Mac Speedie had talked to me before making the trade I would have told him so.

"If they have my contract, and we come to terms over it, I'll be his fullback," Gilchrist continued. "It's going to take a lot of money."

Before being traded for fullback Billy Joe, Gilchrist got around $28,000 from Buffalo. He once asked to be traded to Oakland and subsequently was temporarily kicked off the team for taking himself out of a game.

Ferrari Withdraws From Races in Approval Dispute

MODENA, Italy (AP) — Italy's famed Ferrari auto racing firm announced Wednesday night its withdrawal from all races counting toward the world manufacturers' championship.

Ferrari said it was protesting the International Sports Car Commission's refusal to approve Ferrari's 275-Le Mans model for racing.

The withdrawal applied to such races as the Le Mans 24-hour contest, but not to formula one Grand Prix races counting toward the world drivers' championship.

The manufacturers' championship races from which Ferrari withdrew are for two-seat sports cars and prototypes. Besides the Le Mans race, these include the 1,000-kilometer Nurburgring race in Germany and the 12-hour endurance race of Sebring, Fla.

Ferrari has had trouble getting the 275-Le Mans grand tourism car, a small sedan, ratified. Last year the Sports Commission turned it down because too few models had been produced. The commission usually grants ratification only after 100 or more cars of a given model have been produced and sold.

In Wednesday night's announcement, Ferrari said 147 of the 275-Le Mans car had been produced, but that the commission had again declined to ratify it, this time on grounds there was "a difference between the minimum weight of the car indicated on the technical form and the real weight."

When the Sports Commission first turned down the car last year, Ferrari said Italian members of the commission had not supported the request for ratification. As a result, Ferrari refused to race last season under the Italian colors.

Following the new rejection, Ferrari said, it was "abandoning the world manufacturers championship" and would no longer ask for ratifications from the Sports Commission.

The Ferrari statdment said the International Sports Commission had made "surprising homologations (ratifications) "of Italian models which Ferrari said were far from meeting all requirements of international regulations.

Denver Squares Mark With Exhibition Win

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — The Denver Bears evened their exhibition baseball record Wednesday at 2-2 with a 5-1 victory over Charlotte, N.C., of the Class AA Southern League.

The Bears wrapped up the triumph with six singles in the fifth inning that produced four runs.

Palmer Claims Extra-Inning Win From TJ's Spartans

By MORRIS FRASER
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

A pair of Terror players did just that Wednesday and the Tribe claimed their fourth straight victory, a 2-1 eight-inning affair over Thomas Jefferson.

Palmer had suffered from some unusual plays and an error as Jefferson kept the Tribe to its lowest single-game run production of the season. The first Spartan run scored on a throwing error by first baseman Alex Gonzales. Palmer left fielder Fred Romero was caught off first base by lefthanded hurler Ed Hansen just one pitch before a following batter smacked a triple which would have given Palmer a 2-1 lead after four innings.

But Gonzales and Romero made up for the early mistakes by combining for the winning run in the extra frame.

Gonzales, senior righthander, had not managed a hit in three previous games, but nailed a two-strike offering against the 360-foot mark in dead center field for a double, leading off the eighth.

After Ollie West walked with one out, Romero laced a single between third and shortstop to score Gonzales and turn the tide back to the Terrors.

Romero, however, was not to be denied one last moment of ironic history. Standing on second after Phil Johnson singled, he was called out for not wearing a batter's helmet while on base.

Gonzales committed Palmer's second error of the season when he threw to third trying to catch Jefferson's Bobby Wilson off base. The throw was wild and Wilson scored the go-ahead run.

Palmer tied the game in the fourth as Romero led off with a walk and was picked off immediately. Johnson, Palmer's heaviest hitter, whacked a long fly to center with fielder Billy Green could not reach. Johnson scored from third on Larry Williams' followup single to left.

The game, for the most part, was a pitchers' duel between Palmer's Tom Medlicott and two TJ moundsmen. Medlicott struck out five and walked four for his second win this year. He gave up three singles and lowered his earned run average to 0.93.

TJ hurlers Hansen and Pat Jarroll stymied Palmer batters most of the game, but the Terrors collected their five hits in the run-scoring innings. Hansen fanned seven and walked one in four innings as coach Mike Willett split mound duties in Jefferson's first game. Jarroll struck out three and walked two, giving up the winning run.

Palmer gets back to South Central League action Saturday, meeting Pueblo South in the first game of a doubleheader at Pueblo. Game time is 9:30 a.m. The Terrors stand 1-0 in league play, tied with Wasson, Central and South.

Holdout Allen Socks Three Hits in Victory

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Richie Allen was a happy holdout.

Not happy that the Philadelphia Phillies wouldn't give him what he thought he was worth but happy because he was sitting at home rather than running at spring training camp.

The National League's Rookie of the Year, who finally signed a compromise contract March 15, made the Phillies happy Wednesday, enjoying his best game of the exhibition baseball season in his team's 10-1 trouncing of Cincinnati. He rapped three hits, including his first homer, and drove in three runs.

Allen went into the game with a .130 batting average and four runs batted in, but that meager showing didn't have the 23-year-old third baseman upset.

"I'm glad now that I missed all that time here," he explained. "I feel so much stronger than I did last spring. I didn't say anything about it at the time, but I was weak when the season began last year.

"I don't know whether it was physical or mental tiredness, or both, but I had come down here about Feb. 15 to run around. When the season first started, I the heavy hitting by Tony Taynot getting hits. All I want to do is make sure I've got my swing."

At this time last year, Allen was hitting .300, had six homers and 17 RBI. During the regular season he batted .318, slugged 29 homers and knocked in 91 runs.

In the Phillies' victory against the Reds, Allen was joined in the heavy hitting by Tony Taylor and Tony Gonzalez, who also drove in three runs apiece. All 10 runs came off Jim Maloney.

A number of other pitchers fared somewhat better than Maloney.

Ken Johnson hurled five perfect innings, then allowed one run and three his in the sixth inning in Houston's 4-1 triumph that halted the Chicago White Sox' five-game winning streak.

Washington drubbed the New York Mets 6-0 with the Senators' Phil Ortega permitting just one hit — Ed Kranepool's leadoff single in the fourth — in seven innings. Ken McMullen drove a two-run homer in the sixth.

Jim Kaat scattered six hits in eight innings, pitched Minnesota to a 5-1 triumph over Baltimore. Harmon Killebrew hit his first spring homer, a three-run blast, in Minnesota's third inning.

Detroit downed Milwaukee 4-2 as Denny McLain held the Braves to three hits, including Felipe Alou's two-run homer, in seven innings.

Ed Bailey batted in three runs, two on a homer, powering San Francisco past Boston 6-3. Gaylord Perry went seven innings for the Giants, allowing two runs in his final inning.

The New York Yankees snapped their four-game losing streak, downing Kansas City 6-3 despite five errors, two by left fielder Mickey Mantle. Tony Kubek delivered the decisive blow, a three-run homer in the sixty.

Tommy Davis raised his average to .424 and Maury Wills to .488 with two hits each in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 7-3 decision over St. Louis. Ken Boyer knocked across two Cardinal runs with a single and a triple.

Arizona Gains Win Over Buffs

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona snapped a 1-1 tie with three runs in the bottom of the sixth and went on to score a 5-2 baseball victory over Colorado Wednesday.

Outfielder Scott Nielsen paced the Wildcat offense with a triple and two singles.

Colorado was led at the plate by Adrian Mohr, with a triple and single in three trips.

The two teams will complete a two-game series today.

NHL Stanley Cup Goes Up for Grabs Starting Tonight With Twin Bill

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Lord Stanley's coveted cup, hockey's most cherished piece of hardware, goes up for grabs starting tonight with the National Hockey League's top four clubs aiming at oldest trophy competed for by professional athletes in North America.

The Detroit Red Wings host the Chicago Black Hawks in the opening game of one semifinal series while defending Cup champion Toronto, winner of three straight playoffs, visits Montreal in the other opener.

Both series are best-of-7 struggles with the winners meeting in another best-of-7. The prize is worth about $1,500 per man to the winning team as well as possession of the Stanley Cup, first purchased in 1893 for $48.67.

Detroit and Montreal boast the two hottest scorers in the league. Red Wing center Norm Ullman led the league with 42 goals, closing with a spurt and finishing just four points behind scoring champion Stan Mikita of Chicago.

Montreal captain Jean Beliveau, last member of the Canadiens' dynasty that ruled the league when Montreal won a record five straight cups in the late fifties, closed with 13 goals in his last 13 games for a total of 20 this season.

Meanwhile, Montreal Coach Toe Blake was grateful for Beliveau's late spurt. "A fellow doesn't have to be a holler guy to lead his team," said Blake of his soft-spoken star. "He can do so just by the way he works and plays."

Chicago Coach Billy Reay was his All-Star left wing, Bobby Hull, who struggled through the final stages of the regular season hampered by injuries to both knees. Both Hull and Reay were disappointed by his pre-playoff practices.

"I felt I wasn't going too well," Hull said after Wednesday's workout. Reay said a decision on whether Hull would play in tonight's opener would not be made until his players' meeting today.

Imlach calls the $30,000 he invested in drafting Moore last June, his "playoff bonus." Dickie, hampered by injuries, managed just two goals in 38 games during the regular season.

Imlach Predicts Hard Series

MONTREAL (AP) — Toronto Coach Punch Imlach — still rankled by earlier charges that his club plays "dirty hockey" — predicted "a hard series, and make no mistake, we came to win."

The Toronto Maple Leafs, defending Stanley Cup playoff champions, had just arrived in Montreal Wednesday night for their first game in the best-of-7 semifinal series with Montreal Canadiens tonight.

The irate coach took issue with statements attributed to Stan Mikita, the Chicago Black Hawks' centre. The National Hockey League scoring champion had gained widespread publicity with his statement that the Leafs were the dirtiest team in the NHL.

"Since the SS gave such publicity to Mikita's statements, what I want to know now is if the referees are going to listen to the crowds in the playoffs, because of the stigma thrown on us by this guy," Imlach said.

The Toronto coach said the ensuing notoriety has caused adverse crowd reaction in every rink the Leafs have played in since that time.

"Sure we play tough hockey, but don't tell me we're any worse than a couple of other outfits in this league," Imlach said.

"We just don't want penalties called every time the crowd roars," Imlach added.

Earlier Wednesday, Coach Toe Blake of the Canadiens said he did not look for any change in the officiating for the series.

Questioned as to the status of Bob Pulford — sidelined with a groin injury for the Leafs' two final league games — Imlach confirmed the hard-working center will be in tonight's starting line-up.

"He's going to be in. There's no reason for him to be out. He practiced Wednesday, but we didn't ask him to go hard," Imlach said.

"There's nothing hampering any member of this club right now. Tuesday's practice (in the Detroit Olympia) was so lively the crowd actually applauded when it finished."

"Don't listen to all these complaints about me practicing them on the day of a game," Imlach said. "They will be on the ice today, but only for a 10 or 15-minute skate to ensure their skates are okay for game time and to loosen up any kinks they may have picked up."

In contrast, the Canadiens had a day off Monday at their Laurentian hideout and held a light workout Tuesday at the Forum. Wednesday they went through a 75-minute drill, concentrating on shooting and speed spurts. They returned immediately to the Laurentians until gametime tonight.

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP) — Jose Torres talks of fighting Cassius Clay, Joey Giardello and Floyd Patterson. Welterweight king Emile Griffith eyes Giardello's middleweight crown. But the next big fight coming up probably will be a return between Patterson and George Chuvalo.

"We hope to sign Patterson and Chuvalo in a week or so for May 10 or 17 at the Garden," said matchmaker Teddy Brenner today. "Patterson says he wants Chuvalo again and Chuvalo wants Patterson."

Patterson, the former heavyweight champion, whipped the husky Canadian champion in a slugfest at the Garden that touched off the current boxing boom. The 12-rounder drew a standing room crowd of 19,100 and $166,423 on Feb. 1.

Torres, who dethroned light heavyweight champion Willie Pastrano on a ninth round technical knockout and probably sent the onetime boxing master into retirement, won't be available again until June.

Boxing's latest glamor gladiator plans a month-long vacation in his native Puerto Rico and Mexico. Griffith is heading for a months holiday in his native Virgin Islands. The welterweight boss has been a busy fighter and he won't fight again until June.

Both champions bore few marks of their triumphs in the championship doubleheader that lured 18,112 fans and a record Garden gate of $239,556 Tuesday night.

Torres put Pastrano on the floor in the sixth round—the first time in his 13½-year career that the Will of the Wisp had been dropped—and gave him a fierce battering. Griffith decisively outpointed Cuban-born Jose Stable in 15 rounds.

The 28-year-old Torres said he would like to fight Muhammed Ali—heavyweight champion Cassius Clay—Giardello, the midleweight champion, and Patterson in that order.

"I feel I can knock them all out," said Torres Wednesday.

"Muhammad Ali makes mistakes. He's easy to hit on the jaw by a fast puncher and I am the fastest. If he can be hit on the jaw, he can be knocked out. We would make a lot of money.

"Giardello is a tough guy. But if you put a lot of pressure on him he will go.

"Patterson and I are friends. He would have to use psychology on himself to force himself to be mean. But I'll be mean, too. Patterson has been knocked out, and I think I can do it, too."

Griffith said that a fight for the middleweight title "is my dream. I have defended against all of the top men in my division. I don't duck anyone."

Asked if he would risk the welter crown against Texan Manuel Gonzalez, winner over the champ on a disputed decision in a non-title bout in Houston Jan. 27, Griffith replied:

"I'd be happy to fight him for the title. Like I said I don't duck anyone. But the matchmaking is handled by my managers. I just do the fighting."

Abel Says Wings Can Stop Hawks

By ROGER GOELZ

DETROIT (AP) — Coach Sid Abel figures Detroit has the manpower to stop the Chicago Black Hawks — with or without Bobby Hull — in tonight's opening Stanley Cup semifinal round game.

The Wings, winners of the 1964-65 regular season National Hockey League title, go into the game relaxed, confident and at full strength.

Hull, troubled by an ailing knee since February, has worked out with the Hawks here for two day in preparation for the Cup playoffs. But Reay isn't sure his crack wingman can go all out. And he says he won't run the risk of forcing "the most valuable player in the National Hockey League."

The Wings say they have the momentum to bring Detroit its first Stanley Cup since 1955.

Detroit-Chicago first round Cup matches have become somewhat of an annual affair. Tonight's game opens the third consecutive semifinal series between the two teams.

Detroit stopped the Hawks last year four games to three. In 1963, the Wings won four games to two.

In both years, however, Abel saw Detroit go against Toronto and lose the Stanley Cup to the Maple Leafs.

Abel plans on four lines against the Hawks. The four lines, plus standout performances from Norm Ullman, Ted Lindsay and rookie goalie Roger Crozier, are credited for the Wings' rush to the regular season title after a slow start.

Abel, Associated Press NHL Coach of the Year, is credited with luring the 39-year-old Lindsay out of retirement. The Detroit club rates Lindsay as a key booster of morale and a steadying influence on younger players.

76ers Bounce Royals

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "We simply outdefensed them, and outshot them . . . and, of course, we did have Wilt Chamberlain."

Coach Dolph Schayes of the Philadelphia 76ers was happily pondering his team's 119-112 victory over the Cincinnati Royals Wednesday night which wrapped up the Eastern Division semifinal playoffs three games to one and gave them a shot at the Boston Celtics in the finals.

There was no arguing Chamberlain spelled the difference. Consider: he scored 38 points, high for the night; had 26 rebounds, also high; blocked 10 Royal shots that seemed headed straight for the basket and handed off five assists.

Cincinnati just couldn't stop him. The three men who took turns trying to guard him committed a dozen fouls and Chamberlain, usually a poor shot at the free throw line, sank 10 of 16 tries.

"That was the difference right there," said Schayes.

But though Chamberlain was the standout, Schayes said it was a team effort all the way.

The boxscore attests to that. Hal Greer had 25 points, Chet Walker 20, Lucious Jackson 16.

"And our bench was superb when it counted," added Schayes. (John) Kerr dropped in two key baskets in the closing minutes and (Al) Bianchi and (Dave) Gambee were really tough on the defense."

Cincinnati didn't go down without fighting led by their great stars, Jerry Lucas, with 35 points, and Oscar Robertson, still favoring a sore right foot, with 24.

Ike Richman, one of the Philadelphia owners, said, "It was obvious that both teams were on edge, missing so many shots in the first half but both knew there was no tomorrow.

"We had to win here or else probably lose the series. We beat the royals two straight in Cincinnati and if we had to go back there we probably would have been killed."

It was, actually, the first victory at home for either of the two clubs in the series.

Chamberlain, admitting his sick pancreas "still aches me plenty," said he's looking forward to knocking off the Celtics, NBA champs for the past six years.

"We can do it," said Wilt.

Pro Golf's Top Players Prepare To End Domination of Unknowns

By KEN ALYTA

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Professional golf's big names were out in force today for the start of the $65,000 Greater Greensboro Open Tournament, hoping to return to normal a tour that has provided a series of surprises in 11 previous weeks.

Ten Players have won tournaments, with Doug Sanders, who put together back-to-back triumphs at Pensacola and Doral in Miami, Fla., last month, the only two-time winner.

The top stars of last year have had trouble winning. Billy Casper, winner of the Bob Hope Desert Classic in California, is the only member of last year's top 13 money winners to score this year. And only three of the top 39 of last year have won in '65.

Four men, George Archer, Rod Funseth, Bert Weaver and Dick Hart, have achieved their first tour victories this year and three winners, Hart, Paul Harney and Wes Ellis are primarily club professionals.

All of which underscores the problems the name players have been facing. Of course, fellows like Arnold Palmer, Tony Lema, Gary Player and Bobby Nichols haven't played the full tour because of the pressure of other maters.

But with the classic Augusta Masters coming up next week they all are here tightening their games and eying the GGO record purse which includes a $10,000 first prize. The four-day 72-hole tournament is being played over the 7,000-yard, par 71 Sedgefield Country Club course.

Sanders has locked up one of two remaining Masters invitations with his fine winter play, but the other berth will be determined on the basis of play here. A half-dozen players are in the running for it, with Jacky Cupit, Harold Kneece and Bert Weaver the top contenders.

The field also includes Julius Boros, who beat Sanders in a playoff when the latter was defending champion last year; Art Wall, Billy Maxwell, Dow Finsterwald and Mike Souchak.

Then there's Sam Snead. At 52, he's aiming for his eighth victory here since he won the initial Greensboro tournament in 1938. "I don't expect to win, but those boys better watch out," Sam warned with a gleam in his eye.

Funseth, a last-minute entry, won top money of $500 in Wednesday's pro - amateur warm-up. Funseth, without practice, shot a 67, four under par. Kel Nagle and Phil Rodgers tied for second with 68s for $400 each. Six more pros including Palmer and Casper, followed at 69 for $241 each.

At Cascade Mountain

Skiers Vie This Week For U.S. Alpine Title

CRYSTAL MOUNTAIN, Wash. (AP) — Skiers who carried 13 Olympic medals home last winter to France, Austria and the United States will vie this weekend in the fickle Cascade Mountain snows for U.S. national alpine championships and international trophies.

Last week the national collegiate championships served as a preview for the bigger show at this winter resort 76 miles southeast of Seattle. Swiftly-changing weather, from bright sun to near-blizzard, tested the waxing knowledge of skiers.

Many of the college stars have remained to bid for U.S. alpine titles, daring to hope their indoctrination last week will improve their chances as well against the invading alpinists of Europe.

Rick Chaffee, a Denver University sophomore from Rutland Vt., captured the slalom and alpine combined titles. Bill Marolt, Colorado University junior from Aspen, won the college downhill crown.

But the French, Swiss and Austrian teams have overwhelmed American skiers in competition at Vail, Colo., and Sun Valley, Idaho.

Marielle Goitschel of France was beaten in only one event in the two meets, placing fourth as Traudel Hecher of Austria won the downhill at Vail.

Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., tied Marielle in the giant slalom at Vail and was second in the slalom at Sun Valley for the best American performance.

Holders of silver medals are France's Marielle Goitschel and Leo LaCroix, Austria's Karl Schranz and Edith Zimmerman, and Miss Saubert and Billy Kidd of Stowe, Vt.

Heuga, competing despite painful heel bruises, took a third place for Colorado in the collegiate slalom. Kidd, a freshman at Colorado, was ineligible to compete with his school's varsity team.

Only Americans can win the U.S. titles but all contestants will vie for international trophies.

The Silver Skis, an annual downhill competition sponsored by the Seattle Post-Inteligencer, has been made a part of this meet. Silver Skis trophies also will be awarded winners in giant slalom and slalom, regardless of affiliation.

The downhill race will open the competition Friday. The double run of the slalom is scheduled Saturday and the giant slalom race will climax the 1965 national-international program Sunday.

Boros May Quit Winter Tour; Doesn't Like Cold

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Julius Boros, who went about defending hhis greater Greensboro Open golf title today, may have played his last winter tour.

The 45-year-old Connecticut native who twice has won the U.S. Open, dislikes cold weather. His record in a professional career dating back to 1949 bears out this. When he won here last April it marked the first time he ever had won a tournament prior to May 1.

"This cold weather and I just don't get along," he said after coming off the Sedgefield Country Club course with par 71 in Wednesday's pro-amateur tuneup. The skies were leaden and the temperature was in the mid 40s.

Boros continued, "Unless I change my mind, I think I have played my last cross-country tour. It's not too bad at Palm Springs, Phoenix and Tucson but the rest are very doubtful.

"I'm not knocking the other tournaments. It's just the weather that I don't like."

He said his scehdule this year will be about the same as last year, when he played in 24 of the 43 circuit tournaments. He commented, "I have no intentions of really going into retirement. I intend to play as long as I can, although I'll probably cut back a little at a time as I get older."

He added this observation, "I think we play on better courses in the summer — certainly they are in better shape — and I think this helps the older players. I think you will find that when summertime comes and the more experienced players come out en masse you will see that the kids will have a much tougher time of it."

He suggested that the PGA would do well to limit its major sanctioned events to about 30 tournaments. "I still think there ought to be a tournament somewhere every week," he asserted, however.

Boros has had physical problems, as well, in recent years. "I've had bursitis in my shoulder, elbow and hand. I've had occasional trouble with my back and a number of other minor things go wrong," he pointed out.

Brundage Visits Site Of 1968 Olympics

Brundage talked with President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz about Mexico's preparations for the 1968 Olympic games here and said he was "highly pleased" from what he saw in his short visit.

Hoeft Accuses Braves of Throwing Away '64 Title

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Former Milwaukee southpaw Billy Hoeft said Wednesday the Braves didn't want to win the National League pennant last year because the team was moving to Atlanta.

Braves Manager Bobby Bragen, told of the accusation, replied: "Really, his accusations are so silly they don't deserve to be dignified by a denial."

"How do you move a team that wins a pennant?" said Hoeft, now with the Detroit Tigers. "They just didn't want to win the pennant."

Hoeft, a native of Oshkosh, Wis., was cut loose by the Braves at the end of the season. Milwaukee finished fifth last year, five games out of first place.

Hoeft, referring to Bragen, said, "It was demoralizing the way he made line-up changes. Our guys never knew when they were playing. And when they did play, they never knew where they'd hit in the line-up or where they'd play in the field.

"We had to know how to play 13 positions," Hoeft said. "If you were in a slump, Bragen kept playing you. But once you started hitting, he took you out.

"The guys got teed off because he did things like putting Lee Maye on third base and Hank Aaron on second. All we needed was to have Aaron spiked."

Hoeft also criticized Bragan's starting of rookie pitchers Clay Carroll and Dan Schneider in a Labor Day doubleheader against the Chicago Cubs.

"Fortunately, we won both games but neither pitcher lasted more than two or three innings," said Hoeft. "Why would Bragan do something like that? We weren't too far out of first place and still had a month to go."

Informed of Hoeft's charges, Bragan said: "It looks like he's been reading Warren Spahn's copy. Spahn's been saying the same thing all spring."

"I don't see Hoeft's logic at all," Bragan said. "If we were going to Atlanta this year, I'd love to go as a champion instead of a fifth-place ball club."

Canon City Nets Twin Bill Win Over Walsenburg

Canon City's baseball team opened its 1965 season with a doubleheader win over St. Mary's of Walsenburg Tuesday afternoon as the Tigers recorded the twin bill victory, 6-2 and 2-0.

Dan Scavarda picked up the opening victory for Canon City as the right-hander gave up two runs on two hits and struck out 10 St. Mary's batsmen. There were four home runs in the seven-inning game with Canon City collecting three including Drew Cronk's two homers in the second and seventh frames while Dave Eslick homered in the seventh.

The Canon City team was paced by Dee Betts pitching and stick power to topple St. Mary's in the second five-inning contest. Betts pitched a two-hitter and homered in the fifth stanza.

Scores Fall In ABC Tourney

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — There was a sharp slump in scoring in the American Bowling Congress Tournament Wednesday and for the first time since the meet opened a week ago there were no changes among leaders in any divisions.

Faustich Liquors, Lafayette, Ind., rolled the best regular team division score, 2,745, but was far off the divisional leader, Schmidt Beer of St. Paul, which rolled 2,942 Monday.

Farmer's Hybrid, Hornick, Iowa, topped booster teams with 2,616, but Young Insurance of Reeseville, Wis., leads with 2,757.

Roger Tessman of Milwaukee rolled the best singles series, 608. Dick Ude of Lincoln, Neb., leads the singles with 689.

Ray Clark and Lew Diehl of Riverton, Wyo., rolled 1,181 in the doubles, but were far short of the tandem leaders, Al Eckhoff and Les Sandidge of Springfield, Ill., who have 1,230.

Gary Gervais of Minneapolis rolled the best all-events series, 1,763. Bob Rehder of St. Paul leads in the nine-game division with 1,861.

Memorial Park Opens Racing In Colorado

BRUSH, Colo. (AP) — Colorado's pari-mutuel racing season that this year covers all or part of eight months begins Saturday with a 10-race program for thoroughbreds at Memorial Park.

The mutuels windows won't slam shut for good until Nov. 6 when the Colorado Springs greyhound track ends its meeting.

There will be horse racing at Brush for at least four more Saturday with the likelihood additional racing days will be offered.

The Inaugural Handicap, a five-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds, will highlight the opening card. The 36th annual Colorado Derby will be run May 1.

Former Collegiate Golfer Now Star on Ladies' Tour

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A bright newcomer to the ranks of women's professional golf is a pert brunette who once played on a college team—against boys—and sometimes went by the name Sam.

But her real name is Sue Maxwell, and she learned her golf on a rough and ready course called Bogey Hills, a pitch and putt layout on her parents' small acreage in Oklahoma City.

"We didn't have greens," Sue says. "We just cut the grass short and put tin cans in the ground." One of the holes had to be played over the house, a hazard the 22-year-old former Oklahoma amateur champion isn't likely to encounter on the pro tour.

Sue went to Oklahoma City University on a golf scholarship and played on the school's golf team until her senior year.

"It was real embarrassing playing on a golf team with boys," she recalls.

"The coach would send my name as Sam or some such and sometimes when the other coaches found I was a girl they refused to play.

"I'll never forget this boy at Wichita University. He had me down five holes real quick.

"When I finally won a hole, he had a fit and when I won three in a row I thought he was going out of his mind."

Sue, small, pretty and freckled through the suntan acquired on golf courses, won $442.50 in her first professional tournament, tying for sixth at the Muskogee Women's Open in 1964. She was tied for second with a four-over-par 74 the first day, slipped to a 78 the second day, but came back with a 74—after a bad start — the final day.

Leading money winner Mickey Wright, who finished fourth in her first professional try 12 years ago, said, "I was very impressed with Sue." Sue was just four strokes behind the runner-up as Miss Wright won by nine strokes.

So was one of the leading sporting goods manufacturers which contracts with top pros as representatives. They signed Sue to a contract right after the Muskogee tournament.

Sue was Oklahoma women's amateur champion in 1963 and turned pro just a few weeks before the Muskogee tournament, when she took a teaching job at Tulsa's swank Southern Hills Country Club.

During her part of a year as a pro in 1964, she picked up $3,848 and finished 19th among the women. Her best finish was third in the Phoenix Thunderbird Ladies Open. She competed in 19 events and averaged 76.0 in 67 rounds.

Experts Say AAU Meet Should Prove Top Show

By LOU BLACK

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A crowd of experts claim that the NATIONAL AAU indoor men's swimming meet that starts today could be "the greatest anywhere since the Tokyo Olympics."

They eagerly are awaiting the firing of the opening shot. They have a good case.

The fact is that the three-day meet in Yale's 25-yard pool has attracted winners of 13 of 21 gold medals at Tokyo last October.

All in all, there are 23 Olympians from six nations competing for 16 crowns, two today, six Friday and eight Saturday. The Tokyo veterans include 16 Americans, led by Don Schollander, winner of four gold medals; two Australians, two Mexicans, and one each from South Africa, Argentina and Canada.

There's always excitement in every event, but one of the meet's climactic moments is expected Friday when Schollander, the 1964 Male Athlete of the Year, returns to championship swimming for the first time since the Olympics.

The 18-year-old Yale freshman from Lake Oswego, Ore., is entered in two events that day, defense of his 200-yard freestyle title and a member of a 400-yard freestyle relay team.

He is passing up his 500-yard freestyle crown, but will make a third and final meet appearance Saturday in the 400-yard medley relay.

Meanwhile, Olympic star Roy Saari loosens up his muscles today in defense of his 1,650-yard freestyle crown, one of two opening day events. He is scheduled to face Schollander in the 200-yard sprint Friday.

The other race today is the 400-yard individual medley. Dick Roth, Atherton, Calif., schoolboy, and 1964 champion, is out because of tendonitis.

Saari, winner of three gold medals in the NCAA meet at Ames, Iowa last week, holds the American and meet short course record in the 1,650-yard grind — 16:49.3, and is a solid favorite to repeat for a fourth year in a row.

Qualifying trials are being held each afternoon and the finals at night.

All Have Needs as Baseball Openers Near

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — With the start of the 1965 baseball season just two weeks away, the 20 major league managers are taking inventory, matching strengths against weaknesses for possible eleventh-hour trades.

The St. Louis Cardinals, World Series winners, and the perennial American League champion New York Yankees are pre-season favorites to meet in the Series again next October. But even they face problems. Both clubs lack for example, left-handed bullpen strength and are thin in catching.

Following is a thumbnail analysis of the more acute needs of the clubs, along with some observations:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Baltimore

Observation: Manager Hank Bauer is concerned with the condition of Wally Bunker's pitching arm but pleased with the progress of southpaw Steve Barber, a 1964 flop.

Boston

Needs: Improvement around second base. An established first baseman. A comeback by right-hander Bill Monbouquette and another first-rate starter.

Observation: The team's double play combination was the poorest in the league last year and there also is a big question mark at first base. Slugger Dick Stuart, traded to Philadelphia, is bound to be missed. The pitching collapsed last year.

Chicago

Needs: More punch, especially in outfield, where Floyd Robinson is the only established player. Protection at first and behind the plate in support of injury-prone Bill Skowron and John Romano.

Observation: The White Sox have the best pitching and one of the most astute managers in Al Lopez. He is experimenting with rookies Ken Berry in center and Tommie Agee in left.

Cleveland

Observation: The Indians are the most improved club in the league. The addition of Rocky Colavito and Chuck Hinton adds right-handed punch. Ralph Terry should strengthen the pitching.

Detroit

Needs: Starters to help Mickey Lolich and Dave Wickersham. Help in the bullpen. Replacement for retired center fielder Bill Bruton. Improvement at shortstop.

Observation: It is the same cast as last year with possible addition of rookie outfielders Jim Northrop and Willie Horton and pitcher Burce Brubaker. Bill Freehan is the second best catcher in the league, behind New York's Elston Howard. The outfield should be strong with Al Kaline Don Demeter and Gates Brown, plus the two rookies.

Kansas City

Needs: Deeper pitching, especially in the front line. More punch in the outfield and behind the plate.

Observation: The loss of Colavito's bat will be felt. The infield is the team's strongest department.

Los Angeles

Needs: An established third baseman, another solid outfielder and help for aging Joe Adcock at first base.

Observation: Dean Chance probably is the best pitcher in baseball and the bullpen is in good hands in Bob Lee. Shortstop Jim Fregosi and second baseman Bobby Knoop could form the best double play combination in the league.

Minnesota

Observation: Poor defense plagued the Twins last year. The team has as much power as any in the league but had trouble last two years scoring a runner from third.

New York

Needs: Help in the bullpen and another catcher to back up Elston Howard.

Observation: As in the past, the team is in trouble should something happen to either Mickey Mantle or Whitey Ford. It has the best front-line squad in baseball but the bench is below par.

Washington

Needs: Help on the mound, behind the plate, third base and at first, should Bob Chance's balky knee fail to hold up.

Observation: May have the top pitching staff in the league. Excellent defense and good speed.

Houston

Needs: More power. Walter Bond and Rusty Staub only ones capable of hitting long ball. Improved catching.

Los Angeles

Observation: Addition of lefty Claude Osteen helps fine pitching staff. Team may be involved in most one-run games since the advent of the lively ball.

Milwaukee

Needs: Improvement of young pitchers, another left-handed hitter and a left-handed relief pitcher. Comebacks by Eddie Mathews and Frank Bolling. Fast recovery of Hank Aaron from ankle operation.

Observation: The Braves have the most power in the league but the pitching staff lacks a leader with the departure of Warren Spahn.

New York

Needs: Help everywhere except at first, second and shortstop. The pitching is fair but not enough to offset the weak hitting.

Observation: It looks like another 10th-place finish.

Philadelphia

Pittsburgh

Observation: If Roberto Clemente, recovering from malaria, is out any length of time, the club may never recover.

St. Louis

Needs: A catcher to spell Tim McCarver and another strong relief pitcher as protection in case knuckleballer Barney Schultz fails to repeat his 1964 miracle.

San Francisco

Interest Up In Florida Derby Race

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Saturday's running of the Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park, with 10 or 11 probable starters, will be the 14th in this series but the 1926 at old Tampa Downs.

The first Florida Derby in modern times — Hernando De Soto may have had one or more around 430 years ago when he arrived on these shores with a large shipment of horses and men — went to Torcher, who ran the 1⅛ miles in 1:57 1-5. The purse was $5,000 in added money.

Hialeah revived the Florida Derby in 1926, with $10,000 in added money, but dropped the name after 1936 and since has called its feature for 3-year-olds the Flamingo Stakes.

Gulfstreak revived the Florida Derby in 1952 with $15,000 in added money. Sky Ship was the winner, and his share was $17,550.

Interest in the race boomed the following winter when James Donn Sr., then Gulfstream president and now chairman of the board, put up $100,000 in added money — the first horse race in 7. DAA, to be so endowed.

Illustrious names are among Florida Derby winners, Nashua, Needles, Gen. Duke, Tim Tam, Carry Back, Candy Spots and Northern Dancer. Four of them went on to win the Kentucky Derby, six the Preakness and two the Belmont Stakes.

Native Charger, winner of the recent Flamingo, probably will be a slight choice Saturday over Sparkling Johnny, Hail to All, Maribeau and Gallant Lad, the latter a supplemental nominee for $5,000.

TrainerJ. H. (Casey) Hayes paid that sum Wednesday to make the son of Gallant Man eligible. Gallant Lad is owned by C. T. Chenery of New York and Doswell, Va., who also paid $5,000 to make the filly, Cicada, eligible in 1962. Cicada lost by a nose after a torrid stretch duel with Ridan but earned $20,000 for her second-place finish.

With 11 starters, Saturday's winner will earn $81,800 from a gross of $121,800, with $20,000 to second, $10,000 to third, $7,000 to fourth and $3,000 to fifth. Thus if Gallant Lad finishes fourth or better Chenery will get his money back, and more.

Rustic Katt Has Chance To Become Minnesota Ace

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Big Jim Kaat, once characterized by a national sports magazine as the "Hiram Hayshaker of Baseball" because of his rawboned, rustic appearance, may be on the threshold of replacing Camilo Pascual as the ace of the Minnesota Twins' pitching staff.

Kaat hurled eight innings — longest stint yet this spring by a Twins pitcher — as the Twins defeated Baltimore 5-1 Wednesday.

The lanky Michigan native, who spent the past winter working as a sportscaster for a Shakopee, Minn., radio station, allowed only six hits, struck out five and walked none. Baltimore's score was a fourth-inning home run by Brooks Robinson, the 1964 American League Most Valuable Player.

In 16 innings since the 6-foot-4 southpaw won his holdout battle with Calvin Griffith to get a pay raise to around $25,000, Kaat has permitted 10 hits and three earned runs for a 1.69 ERA. He has walked one and struck out nine.

The spring performance just might win him the opening-day pitching assignment against the New York Yankees a week from Monday. That exalted position has been reserved for Pascual for years.

Manager Sam Mele isn't saying who will pitch the opener, but Kaat's spring showing and superior condition may give him the nod.

"Kaat looks great," Mele said Wednesday. "I'd say he's far ahead of Pascual in conditioning at this point."

Kaat said he wanted to go nine innings Wednesday (he was relieved by Johnny Klippstein in the ninth), but "why rush my arm?"

"The arm feels strong and I'm reaching good body condition," said Kaat, who led the Twins staff with 17 victories in 1964.

Also bringing a smile to Mele's face was Harmon Killebrew.

The big swatter belted his first home run of the spring for three runs in the third inning after he had singled home a run in the first.

"It's always nice to get the first one, just to show that you haven't forgotten how," mild-mannered Killebrew said.

Johnson May Retire From Active Role in Car Racing

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Junior Johnson may be retiring from the driving part of auto racing, but he doesn't plan to be a full-time chicken farmer.

"I don't want to get completely out of racing," said the 34-year-old Ronda, N.C., driver, who announced Wednesday he plans to retire as a stock car jockey.

"Racing's been my life," he said. "I just want to be around race cars. Maybe be a pit chief for another car. I just want to get out of the racing end of it."

Johnson said he had about lost interest in the driving part. "I'd like to quit . . . and this is going to be my last year."

Johnson, a veteran of 15 years of racing, told of his decision to quit as drizzling rains prevented qualifying for Sunday's Atlanta 500 at Atlanta International Raceway. Weather permitting, the first 16 positions will be setled today.

Eight more positions for the $76,000 race will be determined Friday and the remainder of the field will be decided in Saturday's consolation race. A total of 44 cars will start the race.

Johnson, who is a chicken farmer when he isn't racing, began his track career in 1950 and has captured major racing titles on three of the four big tracks — Charlotte, Daytona and Atlanta. His big victory in Atlanta was the Dixie 400 in 1963.

He said he is getting too old to take the chances he used to take. "I don't feel that I can go as hard today as I could a year ago, or a year before that," he said.

Meanwhile, a truck bringing the car of South Carolina driver Tiny Lund to the race track was linvolved in an accident near Athens, Ga. Two members of Lund's pit crew were taken to a hospital and Lund's 1964 Ford was damaged, although the extent was undetermined.

Film Seen After Game Rained Out

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — An exhibition game between the Los Angeles Angels and the Seattle Rainiers was rained out Wednesday night but no one seemed to mind except Jim Piersall.

The canceled game gave them a chance to view "Fear Strikes Out," a nationally televised movie of the life of Angel outfielder Piersall.

The 35-year-old Piersall, however, indicated he would have preferred that the Angels play baseball instead.

"You know, I was thinking of bringing a portable television set to the park," said Piersall. "But then I got to thinking about the needling I'd get and felt thankful that we had a night game scheduled."

The unnatural result was a prime topic of jest among the Angels.

The story of Piersall's 1952 mental breakdown was previously enacted on television in a "Climax" drama.

Piersall said his mail from people with the same illness has been heart-warming. "But Im' no doctor. I can't help them.

"I never dreamed this could happen. It seems that all I've ever seen on television are early 1930 movies."

King, Leaders Meet to Plan Boycott Move

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the Executive Board of his Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) met here Wednesday to work out details of King's proposed economic boycott of Alabama.

King said the controversial proposal — which has been condemned by some other Negro leaders — would be discussed publicly at a news conference Friday at the close of a three-day meeting.

King talked to newsmen for five minutes while seated in a car at Friendship Airport. He said a meeting Tuesday between civil rights leaders and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace was "a good first step" but that Wallace made no promises to the group and "did not commit himself."

"We can't say whether the meeting was fruitful until we see what he does and if he is willing to act on the proposals advanced to him yesterday," King said.

Other SCLC leaders on hand included King's father and brother, both ministers; the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, Atlanta; the Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, Birmingham; the Rev. C. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla., and John Lewis, head of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC).

Looking at Hollywood

TALE OF JEWEL ROBBERY AT SEAT TO BE FILMED

HOLLYWOOD — William Goetz found the perfect story for his first Seven Arts picture, "Assault on the Queen," by Jack Finney. The screenplay is being written by Rod Serling. Richard Fleischer, presently doing "Fantastic Voyage," directs. Goetz wants Frank Sinatra to star. It's quite a yarn. Ray Stark is talking with the Cunard people about doing some of the scenes aboard one of the queens — either Mary or Elizabeth. It concerns a gang of thieves who get an old submarine, stop the ship, board her and rob the passengers in the grand ballroom. They'll location in the Bahamas and mid-Atlantic.

Shirley Booth, after her first her first romp in theater-in-the-round still prefers the proscenium: "It is more satisfying for an actor to have people out front so you can see the whites of their eyes. I hate to destroy the ilusion—I like to be in my dressing room before the audience bolts up the aisle for intermission. Remember Belasco's advice? Actors should be seen only on stage." She thinks lady stars today leave too litttle to the imagination: "There's no mystery about them and they all want to know what's wrong."

Shirley has another month's vacation before starting her fifth year of Hazel. It's in her contract that she has two summer months to spend at Cape Cod: "I take care of myself." When she started the series she did not think she'd be able to sustain her interest: "But I look forward to going to work each morning. I like the regimentation."

Gypsy Rose Lee came home from the supermarket to find fire engines barring the entrance to her home. "What are you doing here?" she asked. When they told her they were trying to find Gypsy Rose Lee's house, she said, "Follow me." A bottle of weed spray had exploded and started the blaze which her servant had put out by the time the firemen arrived. Three neighbors had sounded the alarm. "I almost invited the boys to stay awhile," she said. "They were the handsomest fellows I've seen around in ages."

Joe Cotton found much picture activity all over Europe. They are even starting up again in Rome. He was offered a cowboy picture in Spain: "That's not so funny. I've made many Texas westerns, but never one in Texas." He and Pat took an Italian boat from Athens to Istanbul ending in Naples, and the first thing he did when he got home was to read up on the Corinth canal. A builder himself (he likes to construct stone walls, walks and indoor swiming pools), Joe couldn't get over that canal: "The longest construction job in history. Nero started it in 67 A.D., and another engineer finished it in 1893. It's 4 miles long, carved out of solid rock and goes straight up 250 feet. The boats are built to go through it." Cotten didn't want to get off that Italian ship: "The food was great. You got to feeling it was your private yacht."

If you don't want Shirley Temple to come see you, don't invite her. She took Nikita Khrushchev's invitation seriously, but he said nyet. The pictures of Shirley from over there are delightful. She'd never been to Europe before. Imagine with all that fame and loot. They're running her old pictures on TV so she has milions of new fans who are seeing her in person. She'll come back an uncrowned queen.

Gloria Stewart, back from Acapulco, says the only exercise she got was duck hunting: "I just lay in the sun and simmered." She and Jim are cracking out with a big black-tie party next Saturday for Missy Bolton, Peggy's 23-year-old daughter, who'll marry a 27-year-old Italian, Pier Luigi Robiglio, whom she met while attending school in Italy. Gloria says it will be a mixture of young, middle-aged, and older.

Marshall Thompson leaves for Florida in mid-April to do some scubba diving in Ivan Tors' picture "Around the World Under Shirley Eaton, Brian Kell and David McCallum. Marshall directed four Flipper shows down the Sea with Lloyd Bridges there; says they have a beautiful studio. He also says Brian Kelly will be a big star: "He's better looking off screen than on."

Bob Crane earns between $75,000 and $100,000 a year with his radio show Monday through Friday — is on the air 20 hours a week. But he really wants to act. You've seen him as the young doctor next door on Donna Reed's show. Now he's going into a comedy series, Hogan's Heroes, which airs Friday nights starting in September. He thinks he can do both.

Heaven forbid

Carol Channing's annual bash for Jack Benny and George Burns in New York proved gents prefer blondes. At the Rainbow Grill were Janet Leigh, Anita Colby, Sally Ann Howes, Walter Matthau's wife, Carol, and Hello Dolly herself.

Fran Stark cracked her shoulder in Sun Valley, came home, put her arm in a sling, and four days later took off for a two-week trip to New York. Lucky it wasn't her leg or she wouldn't be able to dance all night.

Western Europe Celebrates 'April Fool'

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP) — Western Europe celebrated April Fools' Day today with traditional hoaxes. The British Broadcasting Corporation persuaded scores of television fans that it could transmit smells.

The BBC brought in a genuine professor from London University to demonstrae the new "smellovision."

He fed coffee beans and then onions into a complicated array of fake equipment, explaining that their scents would break down into molecules and be transmitted through the screen.

"For best resuls," he said, "stand six feet away from your set and sniff."

He asked successful sniffers to report results by noon, the traditional deadline for April Fool jokes.

Such is the power of television that sniffers soon were telephoning to report that the scents had come across. Some claimed the onions made their eyes water.

An elaborate joke in Stockholm threw thousands of homes into confusion. Printed leaflets, purportedly from the Swedish capital's gas and water company, told them the water would be cut off.

Housewives were told to fill bathtubs and all available cans with water to last them while "certain adjustments" were made to the water system.

After a torrent of calls from angry customers the company issued an official denial, putting the blame on some unknown joker.

The Copenhagen newspaper Politken reported with a straight face that the Danish Parliament had been thrown into an uproar by a government bill requiring all dogs to be painted white. The aim, it said, was road safety since white dogs are easier to see at night.

Italy celebrated April Fish (Pesce d'Aprile) Day. Kids got chocolate fish as a reward for hoaxing their parents.

Nobody knows for sure how all the fooling started. The Encyclopedia Britannica says scholars have long disputed the custom's origins, though it probably is a survival from pagan celebrations of the spring equinox.

Rapid Boost In TV Color Sets Forecast

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — By 1971 there will be 40 million color TV sets in American homes (compared with today's 3 million) and by 1975 almost every TV home will be equipped with at least two sets (around 20 per cent of our homes are so equipped now).

These are the predictions of Rodney Erickson, vice president of a research organization (American Research Bureau) in a speech to members of the television industry this week.

In 10 years, Erickson said, "the color set will become the family — or adult — set, and the other sets will be for the kids or in the bedrooms, kitchens and even in the back of the car."

If he has his projection sights accurately set, this means that within 10 years the American family will split to various rooms in the house — even the garage — to view the program of their individual choice.

When television was young it was hailed as a medium which drew the family together. Later it was said that although the family was physically together, this resulted in little if any conversation — just rapt concentration on the set in a semidarkened room.

Southwestern Settlers Are Being Cautioned

NEW YORK (UPI) — The fabled advice, "Go West," has been amended in recent years to "Go Southwest," if you can judge by the advertisements of land developers.

True, the Southwest is a land of growth—rapid growth—and of vast potential. It is a land hungering for new cities, new ideas, new people. Good land at good prices with easy terms is a fact in the Southwest and demand for land is growing. The experts expect that land costs will continue the upward trend of the past half century, and the rise could be accentuated in Southwest growth areas. But should everyone buy?

Whether or not a family would be wise to relocate in the Southwest, either in the near future, or for retirement depends, of course, entirely upon individual circumstances. It requires, in any case, careful thought—a study of job opportunities for those still in their working years, consideration of climate (a few vacation trips at different seasons would certainly be in order), a little soul searching, especially for retirees, on what it means to pull up roots.

Whether to buy land for investment, also is a highly individual decision, requiring serious thought and investigation. Local authorities are a good source for information and checking in areas where you are interested and an o.k. from your lawyer is a must before signing any papers.

Joseph Timan, former New York real estate lawyer who went west to retire in 1959 and, instead, founded Horizon Land Corp., Tucson, Arizona, now a giant among the Southwest land developers, has this to say about buying land in the Southwest:

"The most important consideration is that only land in a good location in a growing area will increase in value. Worthless land has no value today, and will be worth no more tomorrow.

"Good land is land in proven growth areas where people want to live—and land with the potential to provide the type of living they expect. This is the only kind of land capable of providing dramatic return on investment."

To prospective land purchasers Timan offers some suggestions as insurance that they will end up with good land:

—Know the seller. Make sure you buy only from a reputable developer. When buying sight unseen get a guarantee that the facts are as represented. Horizon, Timan said, feels its method of marketing is an especially good one, since it involves a face-to-face buyer-seller relationship, made possible by a network of local brokers in 31 major Eastern and Midwestern cities.

—The legitimate developer, Timan said, will make it easy and economical for a prospective purchaser to visit the land he is buying. He urges buyers to take advantage of this. Good land is land convenient — Check location carefully. to larger cities and towns in growth areas.

—Find out about roads, water and utilities. Are homes already there and are people living in them now? That's one way to make sure improvements are available in the development. You should know, also, what services, shops and community and recreational facilities are there or definitely planned for the near future.

—Look for a lot in a "planned community," those created by architects, engineers and city planners and which provide new residents with a viable mixture of residential, commercial and industrial facilities.

—Make sure advertised golf and country clubs are in the development, not 40 miles away over rutted mountain roads, or that picturesque rivers are not just dry gulches.

—Be sure that you can get title insurance. This will be important when you wish to build your home or resell your land.

—Be sure the purchase of a lot does not commit you to build only a certain type of structure — a home you can neither afford or want.

Somebody Is Using Forged Key to Loot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somebody — and police are mighty curious to know who — is using a forged key to loot parking meters in downtown Washington.

Police said the thefts began shortly after President Johnson's inauguration on Jan. 20. Since then, they said, more than 300 meters have been illegally emptied of an undetermined number of dimes.

The meters are not broken into, police say. They are opened with a key, only six of which are legally in service.

Committee Gives Green Light to Succession Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Rules Committee gave a reguctant green light Wednesday to a Senate-passed constitutional amendment on presidential succession. The action came after members assailed it as unwise, unworkable and a possible tool for a coup.

The vote to clear the bill for a vote in the House was 6 to 4, with Democrats voting for and Republicans against. But criticism of the bill at a public hearing came from both sides.

Rep. William M. Colmer, D-Miss., said the proposed new machinery for replacing an ailing or incapacitated president could lend itself to a "conspiracy" in which the vice president might seize office.

Any such possibility was discounted by the bill's managers. They said all possible safeguards had been written into yhe measure.

It appeared that the rules group, despite the bipartisan barrage of attacks by members on the measure, would clear it for a vote in the House. However, the intensity of the objections raised some doubt about the outlook for House approval int he present form.

The measure seeks to fill a void in the existing constitutional process. It would allow the vice president to take over temporarily as acting president during a period of "inability" by the president, and would provide machinery for the president to reclaim the job when he was able.

It also would allow the president to fill a vacancy in the office of vice president, subject to ratification by majority vote of House and Senate.

Candidate for Mayor Stages St. Louis Sit-in

By JERRY CURRY

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Maurice R. Zumwalt, decked out in a pair of brown pajamas, turned a sit-in into a lie-in at the Board of Election Commissioners office.

Zumwalt, the Republican nominee for mayor in a traditionally Democratic city, wants the election board and the Board of Police Commissioners to station policemen at all of the city's 595 voting places during the April 6 municipal election.

"I'll stay," said Zumwalt, 62, "until the election or until the two boards assure me officers will be stationed at the polls to insure an honest vote," or until "I'm physically ejected."

Zumwalt walked into the Board of Election Commissioners office at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday with a suit case containing a change of clothing, shaving gear and a toothbrush.

Milburn Shaw, chairman of the GOP City Central Committee, will keep Zumwalt company sporadically.

Two cots with sleeping bags, a television set, a radio and an ice box were set up in the lobby of the building for Zumwalt and Shaw.

Two red-coated waiters from a downtown restaurant served Zumwalt and Shaw a steak dinner Wednesday night and he ordered eggs, ham and wheat cakes with black coffee for breakfast today.

Zumwalt, a storm door manufacturer, is facing Democratic nominee A. J. Cervantes in the April 6 election. Cervantes beat incumbent Mayor Raymond Tucker in the Democratic primary election.

For the first time in years, officers were not placed at all voting places during the March 9 primary election. A roving squad of policemen handled the election watching chores and no incidents were reported.

But, Zumwalt said: "Many people will not vote unless police are at the polling places. I believe we are in the right to demand police protection."

He wants a joint meeting of the police and election boards to discuss Republican charges of alleged vote fraud and intimidation in some wards during the primary.

Zumwalt also wants the election board president, John T. Wiley Jr., and Police Board President Edward L. Dowd to disqualify themselves at such a hearing.

"One of the men is an attorney for a Democratic ward committeeman and the other is a brother of a Democratic committeeman," Zumwalt said.

Woman Found Guilty of Killing Youth

A jury of 11 men and one woman deliberated four hours and 10 minutes before returning its verdict.

Judge John Draper sentenced Mrs. Marlin, 44, to 11 months and 29 days in jail and fined her $10.

Mrs. Marlin had been indicted on first degree murder charges in the death of Charles Ray Neal, 20, of Lenoir City, Tenn., a youth she had found in bed with her oldest daughter on the icy morning of Jan. 16.

A first degree murder conviction could have meant death in the state's electric chair. The sentence levied against her Wednesday, by law, could be suspended by Judge Draper.

In opening arguments Wednesday, Asst. Atty. Gen. John Hollins outlined the previous testimony of all the prosecution witnesses. This included the testimony of Mrs. Marlin's daughter, Carolyn, 22, who had been lying, fully clothed, beneath the covers of her bed with the sleeping, underwear-clad Neal when her mother came upon the scene.

Carolyn had testified that Neal and his Middle Tennessee State University roommate, Paul Smith, 20, had become snowbound in Nashville after double-dating with her and her roommate.

She told the court that she had attempted to wake her mother, asleep alone in the Marlin house in front of the small cottage occupied by the girls.

Unable to gain permission for the boys to stay, she said, Smith and Neal went to sleep while she and roommate, Cynthia McClearin, 19, talked most of the night.

Asked if she had been intimate with Neal or any other boy, Carolyn testified she had not. She answered in the affirmative when asked if she had recently undergone a medical examination to confirm this.

Investigating officers testified there was no evidence of misconduct between Carolyn and young Neal.

During the trial Mrs. Marlin testified she poked Neal several times with the butt of the gun.

"I proceeded to wake the boy up," she said. "I started banging on him with the back end of the gun. He sat up and then started back down.

"I took a step backward. The gun hit something, or bumped into something and went off," she testified.

IMPRISONED BY ZIPPER

CIG Reports Best Results In 1964

Operating results in 1964 were the best in the history of Colorado Interstate Gas Company, President W. E. Mueller told stockholders in the company's annual report issued this week.

"Primarily as the result of record sales of natural gas and manufactured products, consolidated revenues for 1964 were $132,614,545, an increase of $6,960,526 over the previous record in 1963," he reported.

He also noted that for the first time in CIG's history, consolidated net income passed the ten-million dollar mark, totaling $10,014,020 in 1964. This was an increase of $115,017 over 1963 consolidated net income of $9,899,003, the prior record.

After provision for preferred dividends, net income per share of common stock reached an all - time peak of $2.19, compared with $2.17 in 1963.

The Colorado Interstate president noted that pipeline operations in 1964 were highlighted by natural gas sales which totaled more than 341 billion cubic feet, an increase of more than 46 billion cubic feet over sales in 1963.

The 1964 gas sales figure also topped by 16 billion cubic feet the company's previous all-time record set in 1961.

Manufacturing operations made an improved and substantial contribution to consolidated operating results, Mueller said. This phase of activity embraces operations of the Marsh Instrument Co., Skokie, Ill., and of the Columbus Bolt & Forging Co., Columbus, Ohio, divisions of Colorado Oil and Gas Corporation, wholly owned subsidiary of CIG.

Manufactured product sales were up 12 per cent to $25,950,507 in 1964 and at year-end the order backlog of both divisions was at a new high, Mueller stated.

Petroleum operations of the Colorado Oil Company and the Derby Refining Company made a smaller contribution to operating results in 1964 than in the previous year.

"This was caused by the unsatisfactory marketing conditions for refined products in the Mid - Continent area," Mueller reported.

Operation of the Wycon Chemical Company's nitrogen fertilizer plant near Cheyenne, Wyo., is expected to contribute to Colorado Interstate's profitability and growth in 1965, he stated.

The Wycon company is operated as a subsidiary of Colorado Oil and Gas Corporation and has an annual production capacity of approximately 20,000 tons of anhydrous ammonia and 36,500 tons of ammonium nitrate.

"The Wycon plant is ideally situated to serve its primary market area which includes those portions of Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska where the demand for anhydrous ammonia and ammonium nitrate has grown substantially in recent years," Mueller stated.

Naval Airmen Learn How to Land in Water

The "Para-Drag" device simulates the effect of an airman being dragged through the water by a parachute in high wind. Fliers will now get practice in freeing themselves from parachutes while in the water, especially during high wind conditions.

With the device, the student is yanked from a platform into the pool and hauled through the water. Through these practice sessions under the watchful eyes of pool lifeguards, naval airmen will learn the fine techniques of freeing themselves from the harness quickly, inflating their Mae West life jackets and inflating and boarding rubber rafts.

Bandleader Jones Reported Improved

Jones, 53, was stricken March 23 at Lake Tahoe, Nev., and transferred to a hospital in Santa Monica, where his condition first was reported as serious. Hospital spokesmen said he improved steadily until Tuesday night, took a turn for the worse and then began improving again.

Red Diplomacy, Church Ideology Just Won't Mix

By RUSSELL KIRK

That curious orgganization ed the World Council of Churches, which claims to represent more than 200 churches in 80 countries, recently told the United States Government what to do about Viet Nam. Resistance is futile, this council's Commission on International Affairs declared.

"Justice will be more fully served and world order under law better advanced," the authors of this statement continued, "by process of peaceful change and peaceful settlement." States of Southeast Asia not involved in the struggle ought to mediate and arrange a settlement, according to Sir Kenneth Grubb and Dr. O. Frederick Nolde, of the World Council.

This lofty declaration seems wonderfully fatuous; and the policy recommended would amount to total surrender of Southeast Asia to the tender mercies of the Communists. It would involve, incidentally, the extinction or persecution of all Christians in that part of the world.

If the Communists of Viet Nam desired "peaceful change," "peaceful settlment," and mediation by "neutralist" statesmen, they could have obtained these advantages long ago, when the Communists were relatively weak. Now that the Communist forces of Viet Nam and Laos are winning, and their Red Chinese allies are more powerful than before, they desire and expect total victory; they will receive the sentimental pleas of organizations like the World Council of Churches with crocodile tears and hyena laughter.

Supposing the World Council officials to be perfectly sincere, their attitude is far removed from this real world of ours; it is an attitude far more "futile" than American and South Viet Namese resistance to the Communists. For it is the height of absurdity to appeal to Communists on allegedly Christian principles. The Communists wish to extirpate Christianity, not to come to terms with the churches.

Christian morality is meant for the ordering of the human person — not for the conduct of foreign policy. For great states are not moral entities, and do not possess personal consciences. Nations, as such, do not "love" or "hate." And if one treats great powers as if they were merely individual people, with personal souls and minds, one falls into catastrophic error.

When this commentator spoke on foreign policy, recently, at Villanova University, a well-meaning gentleman in the audience suggested that we ought to conduct our foreign relations on principles of Christian love and charity — turning the other cheek, for instance. Your servant replied that such a course could only produce diplomatic and military defeat, exposing all Americans to the worst consequences of folly.

An eminent Christian layman and scholar, Professor Herbert Butterfield, takes up these matters in a little book which I commend to everybody, "Christianity, Diplomacy, and War." As Dr. Butterfield points out, to "moralize" diplomacy is utterly impractical, and may lead to greater violence and intolerance. For you and I live in the City of This Earth, not in the City of God; and so we must, until Judgment Day.

Standards for Tire Grading Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to set federal standards for tire grading and labeling was proposed today by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

It would ban outright the sale of tires rated as unsafe and establish minimum safety and performance standards for all tires.

Marine Corps Wife Outranks Husband

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As of this morning, any wise cracks Marine Corps Gunnery Sgt. William D. Bell makes about his wife's appearance could be considered insubordination.

Then the Marine Corps decided the female Sgt. Bell should be a warrant officer.

As of 10 a.m. today she outranks her husband.

By LEON DENNEN

NEW YORK (NEA) — Red China, in search of Marxist-Leninist allies against Russia, is now courting "revolutionary" splinter groups in the United States—outfits like the one that plotted to blow up the Statue of Liberty.

Judged by Peking's propaganda, Mao Tse-tung even hopes for the emergence of a pro-Chinese party in the United States based on the Negro population as the "vanguard of the American working class."

Even the Russian press was usually restrained in comments on the recent assassination of Malcolm X, dissident Black Moslem leader. But according to Red China's leading People's Daily the slain man was a "martyr" whose death showed that "in dealing with imperialist oppressors violence must be met with violence."

So far Mao has been conspicuously unsuccessful in his efforts to inspire the creation of an organization to oppose the pro-Russian Communist Party of the United States.

Few Negres regard the Red Chinese dictatorship as an improvement on the rule in Selma. This was said bluntly in a message to Mao Tse-tung that the Congress for Racial Equality (CORE) sent in 1963 after a Peking rally in support for the American Negroes in their struggle against discrimination.

"While CORE often is critical of actions or inactions of the federal government, we reject the view that the United States of America has an imperialist policy of racial discrimination," the message informed Mao.

"We are for freedom and democracy for all, including the Chinese people. CORE believes that with its methods success can be achieved without slave labor camps and mass exodus of people from their homes which have occurred in China."

But Mao's future hopes, as Chinese propaganda indicates, are not based on Negro leaders like Dr. Martin Luther King, Roy Wilkins of the NAACP or CORE's James Farmer.

The allies he seeks in the United States are "revolutionary" outfits like the Progressive Labor Movement and the Revolutionary Action Movment.

Several leaders of the Progressive Labor Movement were arrested in New York recently on contempt charges for refusal to answer questions in grand jury investigation into a possible conspiracy to incite to riot during last summer's Harlem disorders. William Epton, PLM leader in Harlem, is awaiting trial on a charge of criminal anarchy.

The mastermind of the Revolutionary Action Movement is said to be Robert F. William, a native of North Carolina now working for Communist Cuba a China. He is believed to have directed from Havana, where he now resides, the plot to bomb the Statue of Liberty, the Liberty Bell and Washington Monument.

Another obscure American group which, according to Moscow, promotes Mao Tse-tung's policy of revolutionary brinkmanship is known as Hammer and Steel.

It is a measure of Moscow's and Peking's ignorance of American reality that this miniscule group figured prominently in an exchange of "open letters" between Russia and China.

As one of Moscow's letters, said, "In the United States" Chinese "support is rendered to the subversive activities of the left-wing opportunit group Hammer-and Steel which sets itself the main task of fighting against the Communist Party of the United States.

Perhaps Mao is not so naive as to assume that groups like PLM, RAM or Hammer and Steel will have much influence on Negro and white Americans. But they can foment disorder, chaos and commit acts of violence which is all he can hope for at the present.

Sherlock Holmes Proves Success On Broadway

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA) — The tall, angular, attractive man with the sonorous voice turned suddenly to the gentleman standing next to him at the cocktail party and said. "You're color blind, aren't you?"

The man, astounded, replied, "How did you know?"

The tall man explained, "Elementary. I have been talking to you for a while, and you are obviously a gentleman of culture and taste. But that orange tie does not go with the red vest you are wearing. Hence, you must be color blind."

A few weeks later, our tall, angular hero was being served in a resturant by a waiter he immediately classified as a man discharged from the U.S. Marines just three months earlier.

"What makes you say that?" asked the waiter, with the manner of one who has caught someone spying.

"Peeking out from under your sleeve," said our hero, "is a portio nof a tattoo of the Marine Corps insignia. You have obviously had a Marine haircut, and it has grown to the point where it is just beginning to turn over. I estimate that would take three months."

In other words, yes, Fritz Weaver has found his life changed by playing Sherlock Holmes in the Broadway musical, "Baker Street."

"Everyone is a fan of Holmes," Weaver said, "and everyone is a critic. I got a letter from an irate Holmesian who said, 'It is quite clear that Holmes never smiled. You smile at least 15 times in the show.' I wrote her back and told her I could document in Conan Doyle's stories, place after place where Holmes grimaced, laughed, guffawed smiled coldly.

"Everone is so certain he knows just exactly what Holmes was like. The truth is that Doyle made Holmes do what suited the story. He was a linguist in one, jiu-jitsu expert in another, and so on. Holmes lived in an unspecialized age when pure brain work was his most powerful weapon."

Weaver, a native of Pittsburgh and former scholarship student at the University of Chicago, made his Broadway debut 10 years ago in "The Chalk Garden."

Since then he has worked constantly in a variety of roles, on Broadway, in television & films (notably "Fail-Safe"). He made his musical debut in the short-lived "All American," then played a summer as Phineas Fogg in a Jones Beach (N.Y.) musical production of "Around the World in 80 Days."

"I tried to get hazard pay for that show," Fritz smiled. "Every night Robert Clary and I would go up in that baloon and look down 65 feet to the ocean. If there was a wind, we were buffeted about quite a bit. People used to tell me the damp night air was death on singers, but not being a singer that never bothered me."

"Baker Street," a lavish production with awesome sets and a thrilling chase scene through the alleys and sewers of London's seamy areas, also has hazards.

In one scene Weaver and Martin Gabel, as Moriarty, fall from the cliffs of Dover. "We are about eight feet up, and we are blinded by the lights when we go over. There is a postage-sized mattress for us to land on, and eight brawny men to catch us. One night they weren't there on cue. We grabbed everything we could on the way down, including each other, but we were both bruised.

"And last night, as I was intently studying a bullet with true Holmes concentration, it went phloomp and squirted out of my hand and into the footlights. I'm sure something like that would never have happened to Holmes

Kidney Transplant Patient Recovering

DENVER (UPI)—Fred Clark Jr. of Geuda Springs, Kan., was reported in satisfactory condition at University of Colorado Medical Center today following a six-hour kidney transplant operation Tuesday.

Doctors said the transplanted kidney, taken from the youth's father, Fred Clark Sr., started to function almost immediately. The father is a farmer.

Young Clark's kidneys had ceased to function, and doctors said he would have died had the operation not been performed.

Reporter Says He Can Write About Witches

By WARD CANNEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — The other week, as regular readers may recall, we got into a consideration of witchcraft and had a terrible time of trying to get out.

It was our premise that being a wtich was far superior to being a person because people cannot become invisible or make things happen by sheer will power. But after several assaults on the topic, we somehow managed to prove that being a person was actually better.

Now, we are not going to get involved in this question again. Talking to yourself is bad enough. But being a dull conversationalist at it is intolerable.

We only mention the matter because we have received a rather dismaying letter about it from a reader.

Unfortunately, it is impossible to reproduce the letter exactly because you would need a magnifying glass to read it. In fact, the mailman who delivered it is probably home in bed with a severe case of eyestrain.

Consequently, you must use your imagination and try to visualize the handwriting at approximately one-half the size of the following.

Dear Mr. Ward:

I am a wrist watch repair man by trade but am very interested in your column.

The reason I am writing to you like this is because my wife is a witch and has made me into a very small person.

She is also a mind reader, rat, and drives me into the ground even though I made her a witch watch for her birthday.

I think you are very smart. But it seems to me that you have never known a real witch, witchever way you feel about them.

Yours truly,
Samuel P. Little

Well, it is quite true that we have never known a real witch.

On the other hand, we have made the acquaintance through this column of a number of people like Samuel P. Little. They have something to say, go to a great deal of painstaking effort to say it with wit, grace and style—and then do not sign their true names.

Just why that is so we cannot imagine.

The English language is still in the public domain. Wit, grace and style are not covered by the patent laws. If a Writer's Permit is required for people who have something to say, we have not heard of it.

We will admit that is all quite hard to believe. The same name always seem to appear on the television credits, the magazine stories and the book covers. And in the face of that chorus, it is very difficult for a solo voice to be heard.

But that, it seems to us, is no reason for choosing to be invisbile—unless you are married to a witch who can make things happen by sheer will power.

So, beginning right now, this column will occasionally m a k e room for people who have some thing to say—in essay, verse or paragraph—as long as they can say it well and sign their true names and addresses.

Now, as this is a personal crusade against the specter of anonymity and in favor of sincereity, we think itg would be improper to pay any money for entries we accept.

That figure may be somewhat outrageous. But we have a deep conviction about this plan, a n d do not feel that we can in good conscience offer any less.

Stage, Video Acting Are 'Different'

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA) — Robert Reed has discovered the difference between acting on Broadway and in television, both of which he is currently doing.

As costar in CBS-TV's The Defenders, Bob has been trained not to slam a door behind him as he speaks, not to make noise with props and not always to look directly at his fellow actors. (That's known as cheating for the camera.)

As one of the stars in the hit Broadway comedy Barefoot in the Park," Reed has discovered he can do all the above.

I have wanted to do a play desperately," he says, but I didn't know if I could. So I was nervous the first few weeks. I also had everything planned so that I wouldn't be tired. I would be home and in bed by midnight, so I could be on the set of The Defenders rested and early.

But I find after the performance. I can't go to sleep until about 2 o'clock. So I nap through our lunch break and during the afternoon."

Reed, a tall, blue-eyed, sensitive young man, thinks maybe he will head for California, where he used to live, after his television series and play call it quits. I prefer working here in New York, but I like living in California and I value my private life over my work."

In the four years The Defenders has been in production, Reed says he has changed from a juvenile to an old juvenile. The other day E. G. Marshall and I were figuring out the number of lines we have said over and over in the series. My least favorite is What do I do now, Dad?"

Bob and Marshall are very good friends, but Reed had only an enigmatic comment to offer when asked about E. G.'s recent appearance on the Les Crane Show to accept an award. When Marshall was thanking the show people responsible for the show he said, it would be gross culpable negligence on my part if I failed to mention the name of Herbert Brodin (the show's executive producer) without whose help it was all possible."

Was Marshall serious in his slap at Brodkin, kidding or was it a fluff, people are wondering. Your guess is as good as mine," Reed smiled.

Poor Robert Vaughn. The suave, capable star of NBC-TV's The Man From U.N.C.L.E. like all the rest of us, has his un-suave moments.

Recently he was resting in his MGM dressing room between takes on the show. There was a knock at his door and a publicist Hepburn wants to talk to you."

Vaughn shuddered as he remembered the incident. My idols in this business are Ingrid Bergman, Katharine Hepburn and Garbo. When I heard this line, I thought, That's a pretty poor joke.' So I called out, Send Katie in.'

And in walked Katharine Hepburn, saying Spencer Tracy thinks you are the best young actor in town and he told me to tell you so if I was ever here at MGM.' Then she turned and was gone. I was totally unprepared for that and stood there like an idiot. I didn't even get a chance to tell her I love her."

Beginning in May, Vaughn will be flexing his acting muscles as Hamlet in a Los Angeles production.

The last time I played Hamlet was six years ago when Los Angeles State College opened a new theater. The same criticism was leveled at me as Richard Burton, when he played the part on Broadway. The critics said it looked like my Hamlet would wind up safely on the throne, and no one would ever get him. I think I can correct that this time."

Welcome Mat Is Out for Yanks Through World

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite well-organized anti-U.S. demonstrations, the "man on the street" in foreign countries likes Americans, according to the leader of a unique around-the-world expedition.

He is Andrew J. Charles, 44-year-old Dayton, Ohio, businessman who headed a group of 105 Americans traveling in 45 trailers on a fantastic 34,000-mile journey through 31 countries in Asia, the Middle East, Europe and behind the Iron Curtain.

"Traveling by trailer," said Charles, "makes it possible to get closer to the local population and learn of their feelings better than in any other way.

"We found that Americans are the darlings of the world. Wherever we went—even countries not officially friendly to the U.S.—we found the warmest of welcomes."

One example was Cambodia. Even though that country had recently rejected U.S. aid, when the caravan arrived at the border the Americans found Cambodian customs officials waiting at a long table covered with flowers, food and cold drinks to welcome the travelers.

The people who made the trip belong to the Caravanners Club, which has about 10,000 members in all parts of the United States.

The 80 adults and 25 children in the group began the journey in the summer of 1963 when the Caravanners, many of whom are retired or semi-retired, left their homes with their cars and trailers and drove to Los Angeles. There the trailers were put aboard a freighter for Singapore, where they were met by their owners on Oct. 24.

The Caravanners pushed their "American Town on Wheels" through Malaysia, then through Thailand with a side trip to Cambodia. They rode through village and city on roads ranging from modern superhighways to elephant trails in jungles.

The caravan traveled to Calcutta, India, by boat, arriving in January, 1964. The next three months were spent traveling in the breadth of the Indian subcontinent.

The Caravanners traveled in comparative luxury in trailers averaging 22 feet long, each containing a kitchen, bath, pressurized water system, electricity, gas, and refrigerator. They purchased food from local markets and also carried their own supplies.

From Asia the group crossed the roof of the world, through the legendary Khyber Pass into Afghanistan, where they had an opportunity to compare Russian and American foreign aid in direct competition.

"We're doing a better job," said Charles. "Both the Americans and the Russians are building roads there. Those built by the Russians ripple with bumps like bent spaghetti, while ours hold their smooth surface."

The caravan rolled through the Middle East on up through Turkey, across the heartland Europe and into the Iron Curtain countries.

Crossing the Russian border, each caravan was thoroughly searched but the Russian people were more friendly. In Minsk, one young Russian couple braved a pelting rain to visit a trailer and spent most of the night asking avidly about life in America. The next day they returned with gifts.

The highlight of the trip behind the Iron Curtain was a week-long stay in the shadow of the Kremlin—105 Americans in their own trailers, parked a stone's throw from Lenin's tomb.

The caravan left Russia after penetrating 1,200 miles behind the Iron Curtain, rolled across Scandinavia and Western Europe until arrival at Cabo Da Roca, Portugal, where the trailers were placed aboard ship for the return to the United States, more than a year after the beginning of the Odyssey.

New Leicaflex Discussed by Photo Reporter

By BART KINCH

The Leitz Company recently announced the arrival of the long-awaited Leicaflex. At that time we mentioned some general aspects of the camera and its main features.

Now we would like to go into a little more detail; be a little more specific about some of the characteristics of this new addition to the single lens reflex field.

Let's begin with dimensions. The new Leicaflex is 5.9 inches long, 2.2 inches wide and 3.7 inches high—about the same size as a Leica M3, but a bit thicker.

This reporter was most favorably impressed with the brightness of the viewing system. This system consists of four elements: a 45-degree mirror; a fresnel screen and a condenser lens; a pentaprism; and a two-element eyepiece lens.

The patented cam lever mirror return was specifically designed to avoid any camera shake and has the added feature of being comparatively noiseless for this type of camera.

In the center of the viewing screen is a focusing spot made up of more than 13,000 microprisms that exaggerate out of focus images, blurring them completely, while the rest of the image is sharp. A twist of the lens in the right direction and the image becomes clear over the entire screen area.

The extreme brightness of this viewing screen and the corner sharpness should make it comparatively easy to focus under adverse lighting conditions.

The viewfinder magnification varies with the lens used. For example with a 35mm lens the magnification is 0.6x. With a 50mm lens, 0.9x; with a 90mm lens, 1.5x and with a 135mm lens, 2.3c.

The camera comes equipped with a cadmium sulphide (CdS) built-in exposure meter that is mechanically cross-coupled with the shutter speed selector and the automatic aperture controls. The meter's sensitivity ranges from 0.19 to 1,500 candle-per-square-foot, and will accommodate film speeds ranging from ASA 8 to ASA 6,500.

The camera uses the same focal plane shutter as other Leica cameras but the speeds range up to 1-2,000 second—twice as fast as the rangefinder models.

Because of the increased speed of the shutter, it was possible to synch electronic flash units at 1-100 second. Speed settings for conventional flash bulbs vary with the particular bulb used. For example, settings from 1 second to 1-30 second may be used with M2 lamps.

The 5s, and 25s and M3s from 1 second to 1-250 second, while the midget AG-1 lamps may be used between 1 second and 1-60 second.

The advance lever is the single stroke type and must be moved a full 120 degrees to complete the advance of the film, cock the shutter and move the film counter to the next frame.

There is a built-in self timer to enable the photographer to set his camera on a tripod and get into the picture himself. The delay between tripping the shutter release an the actual opening of the shutter is 10 seconds.

Well, that's it and it's all yours for only $613.50 — including carrying case and the 50mm f-2 Summicron-R lens.

Custodian of Church Faces Morals Charge

DENVER (UPI)—Police said today they were holding Frank Clarence Potts, 53, a church custodian, for allegedly hiding and taking indecent liberties with three 13-year-old girls.

The girls were from Colorado State Children's Home. Police said Potts reportedly hid them in the basement of Calvary Temple at night and permitted them to walk the streets in the daytime.

Potts, police said, was released from Colorado State Hospital in Pueblo in 1960, two years after being committed to the institution in a similar molestation case involving a 13-year-old Golden, Colo., girl. He was ruled insane at the time.

Police said the girls told them the custodian paid them a total of $24. They told their story when they returned to the children's home last Saturday. Potts was jailed Tuesday.

British Housewife Shops in France

LONDON (AP) — Once or twice a month Mrs. Peter Eton pays $9.80 for a round-trip plane ticket from Britain to France and takes a five-hour shopping trip across the English Channel.

"I simply love fresh bread and vegetables," said the 36-year-old housewife, "and going to France is the real way to get them."

"I don't go through this routine because the food is cheaper in France. In some cases it is, but the quality is always better," she said.

"The real point is that I have a jolly good time without rush-hour worries, drudgery, boring train journeys and off-hand from British shop assistants."

Mrs. Eton lives five miles from Lydd Airport. An air ferry runs from there to Le Touquet, the French seaside resort 50 miles away. Britain and France don't require passports for one-day round trips between Channel ports.

27,000 Homeless In Chilean Quake

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—Officials here said today the earthquake which killed 252 persons in central Chile Sunday caused damage estimated at $58 million and left 27,000 persons homeless.

The government housing corporation said at least 4,500 dwellings will have to be built to house the quake refugees.

President Eduardo Frei, after a tour of the disaster area, said Chile will rely mainly on its own efforts to repair quake damage.

"We will rebuild with our own efforts," Frei said. "We will not await foreign aid, but if it comes it will be well received.

"We have to find the means of reconstruction in our own midst. Chile can't go abroad every four years and say, 'Our nation has been razed.'"

Britain Reports Payment Deficit

LONDON (AP) — Britain suffered a deficit of $2.086 billion in its balance of payments with other countries in 1964, the treasury reported today.

By the end of the year the nation's gold and hard currency reserves had fallen the equivalent of $341.6 million, and the treasury had borrowed a billion dollars from the International Monetary Fund and $6.04.8 million from overseas central banks.

Quality May Sprout in TV, FCC Chief Says

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — E. William Henry, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), predicted today that growing competition will cause a few oases of quality to sprout in the wasteland of television programming.

He also looked forward hopefully to a time when broadcasters will be "content with making a living out of television, instead of a killing."

Henry's forecasts were coupled with a frank acknowledgement that TV programming has shown little overall improvement.

The most important step forward in recent years, he said, was the enactment of legislation requiring all new TV sets to be equipped to receive ultra-high frequency (UHF) channels as well as the 12 very-high frequency (VHF) channels now received on ordinary sets.

"This legislation now makes possible a real expansion in the overall number of stations, which means growing competition and increasing variety," Henry said. "There are 93 commercial UHF stations on the air today, and the FCC has 82 applications pending for new stations."

As more and more stations come on the air, Henry said, advertisers will have a wider choice of outlets.

"And I'm convinced that some advertisers, given a choice, will prefer to sponsor high quality programs for selective audiences, rather than join the scramble for maximum ratings that now dominates television programming decisions."

He said advertisers are well aware that most present rating systems make no distinction between a bobby-soxer and a millionaire. They simply count the number of TV sets tuned to a particular program, without bothering to ascertain whether the viewer is a potential customer for the sponsor's product, or a bored youngster killing time.

Too frequently, the FCC chairman said, this obsession with sheet numbers results in the cancellation of excellent programs which attract audiences that are largge by any reasonable standard, but not quite large enough to meet the maximum rating test.

"I have never suggested that television should concentrate on 'cultural' or 'high-brow' programs to the exclusion of those with mass audience appeal," he said. "On the contrary, I expect broadcasters to program for the masses most of the time. All I ask is that the minority who want something better than horse opera or soap opera be taken into account some of the time.

"When a network cancels a program with 20 million viewers, on the ground that its rating has slipped, there could be a serious question whether it is living up to its responsibility to serve ALL segments of the public."

"There've been some changes for the better . . . and some for the worse," he said in an interview. "But no one should be surprised or discouraged that progress is slow. Deserts are not made to bloom overnight. The walls that restrict creativity in American television will not fall before a few blasts of the trumpet."

German Skier Found Guilty in Court

CHUR, Switzerland (UPI)—An appellate court today found German skier Willy Bogner guilty of manslaughter by negligence in the avalanche death last year of a Colorado ski ace and a German ski chamiion. Bogner received a suspended two month jail sentence.

Bud Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo., and German Barbi Henneberger were killed in the avalanche.

Prosecuting attorney Willy Padrutt had charged that Bogner, 23, was responsible for leading a group of 14 skiers into the Saluver Valley near St. Moritz during the filming of a ski movie. The defense said it will appeal the verdict.

Laos to Shoot Down Any Future Rebels

VIENTIANE (AP) — Reacting with unprecedented severity, Prince Souvanna Phouma's government ordered today that three colonels who led the military revolt in Thakhek be shot in front of their men if captured.

"This measure will be applied to any officer who in the future attempts to foment an uprising," a statement from the neutralist premier's office warned.

The statement named army Cols. Kamsy Sayarath and Siphraseuth Saycocie and police Lt. Col. Pheun Chayasan as leaders of the three-day rebellion.

Thakhek, a town of 5,000 on the Mekong River, 160 miles southeast of Vientiane, was recaptured Tuesday without a fight by 100 government paratroopers.

Informed sources said they understood Lt. Col. Pheum had crossed into Thailand while the other two colonels had taken to the jungle with remnants of their troops.

Government troops also arrived at the American Grover Jones Construction Co. camp at Nam Thone, 40 miles north of Thakhek, and work was expected to resume on the Thakhek-Paksane road Thursday.

The camp had been threatened by a rebel force of 160 men.

The government statement attributed the mutiny to the opposition of certain officers to being transferred to other posts. It made no reference to reports that the rebels sought the return of Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the right-wing army commander who fled to Bangkok after an attempted coup failed earlier.

The government statement said 1,000 troops were involved in the revolt, but independent observers estimated the number at closer to 600.

BI—LINGUAL SERVICES

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A church, which uses both German and English in its worship services, has marked its 75th anniversary here. The St. Paul's United Church of Christ was organized in 1890 by Dallas residents of German extraction. It was originally known as the St. Paul's German Evangelical Church. During the 1st World War, the congregation conducted services only in English to avoid public displeasure. From 1919 to 1936 the church held services in German one Sunday and in English the next. Today German is still used for some services.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fyler took advantage of spring vacation and Mrs. Fyler visited her daughter and family, the Bob Solomons at Pueblo. Fyler visited at the home of their son and family, the Gerald Fylers in Canon City, and helped build a garage on the younger Fylers' property.

Marilyn Moreland can think of better ways to spend her vacation! She suffered painful second degree burns on her hip, leg and ankle when a bucket of scalding water overturned accidentally. She won't be able to attend school this week, though she's recovering nicely.

Tom and Bob Gilley of Canon City were visitors here this weekend. Tom Gilley was called to Denver to take his physical prior to Army induction.

No one will regret the passing of March '65, as it's been tempestuous to put it mildly, with minus zero temperatures, bitter winds, frequent snow and mud galore! However a heavy snow pack gives promise of sufficient runoff for favorable spring grazing.

Miss Barbara Warling entertained schoolmates at her home over spring vacation and Miss Carolyn Brady of Woodland Park spent several days as a houseguest.

Trisha Fry of Woodland Park and Karen Imboden visited beauty schools in Colorado Springs Saturday as they both plan to enroll in one after graduating from Woodland Park High.

Former Demo Plans To Appeal Exam

DENVER (UPI)—Ruben Gurule, 38, a former Democrat who switched parties and got a state job, plans to appeal results of a test with the State Civil Service Commission.

Gurule was beaten in the examination for the job of "community juvenile delinquency co-ordinator," a post in the State Institutions Department, by Morton Wyatt of Lamar, a former state senator.

He tied with Gerald Lewis Agee, 29, of Fort Morgan, a district supervisor for the State Juvenile Parole Office.

Gurule said he did not feel that the examining board graded him in conformity with the others, and he would appeal to the Civil Service Commission.

Gurule said Wyatt had "limited experience in community organization work and youth work, and a high school education." He said the test itself was "an insult to education and the field of youth work."

SPEC—TACULAR IDEA

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Searcy Bracewell, attorney and former state senator, was scheduled to read a speech at a meeting here when he discovered he had left his glasses at home.

Without them he couldn't see a word of the speech and there wasn't time to go home after them. But resourceful Bracewell had a solution. He went into a nearby ten-cent store and tried on the open-stock spectacles until he found a pair he could read with. He bought them and hurried back to the meeting.

LISBON — Fish and game laws will be changed in Portugal.

Movie Mogul Films Story Of the Bible

By ROBERT SAFFRON

ROME (NEA) — Hollywood used to be known as Mockville, town of fantasy, and the rest of the world was Realville, but now the differences have become so blurred that real life is just like the movies.

Dino de Laurentiis, 44, producer of the $15 million epic, "The Bible," is perfect typecasting for the new, self-made international movie mogul: stocky, well-groomed, soft-spoken but with armor plated confidence; a protruding cleft chin and tinted, heavy black-rimmed glasses.

And his office is the perfect set for a $2 or $3 million Technicolor production. It is shaped like an L, the furniture anonymously modern, leather-covered.

De Laurentiiis sat in the fading afternoon light, tilting back in a leather and aluminum swivel chair, a cigarette dangling from his lips. The wall and he were lit by horizontal stripes reflected through the Venetian blinds—a favorite film lighting gimmick of the '40s.

He spoke Italian which was translated by an attractive English girl; but when she didn't make his point exactly, he corrected her quickly — still in Italian.

"The Bible," he said, had been developing in his mind for "many years." And he had John Huston to direct it because only Huston, of all the directors considered, had agreed on the need to stick close to the original source material.

"The Bible itself is so fantastic there is no need to invent stories. When you have a story that tells the creation of the world, the first love, the first hate, the first murder, you must be faithful to the text. It is sufficient.

"But a story like this must be made with humility."

It must also be made with much courage and business acumen. Preparations for the filming took three years; and this was, he said, the first time any independent producer had dared to gamble $15 million on one film.

(The money was lent to him, they say in Rome, by an anonymus Swiss syndicate.)

The logistics of "The Bible" are staggering. The bottom half of the Tower of Babel was built and filmed on De Laurentiis' 750-acre lot south of Rome; the top half was matched in Egypt where 4,000 natives performed as Babylonians. The ruined city of Sodom was recreated of plastic over 25 acres on the desolate slopes of still-active Mt. Etna in Sicily.

For the Noah sequence, five separate arks were constructed three exterior, one interior and one miniature (for the Deluge). Cost: $1 million. The exterior yet into which the animals are herded two by two is 200 feet long and 50 feet wide. It took 300 workmen 12 weeks to build. Cost: $300,000.

The interior set of the ark, showing the animals on their voyage, is 150 feet long and 68 feet high, possibly one of the largest sets ever built. It consists of three levels made of rough logs reinforced with steel to hold pairs of 200 different species, from snakes to hippos and camels. There are 1,000 birds.

De Laurentiis hired the entire menagerie of a German circus. Two of the animal trainers double as Noah's sons to keep the beasts from eating each other.

All the hired hands admit that Dino knows his movie business. A Neapolitan, he began as a bit player in Rome at 17. At 20, he produced his first film. He has since created more than 100 movies: respectable epics such as "War and Peace" and "Ulysses"; realistic works of art such as "Bitter Rice," "La Strada" and "Nights of Cabiria."

De Laurentiis Productions is actually a one-man operation—no stockholders, no board of directors. He labors mightily 12 hours a day and makes most decisions, big and little by himself, using a few trusted aides and relatives as sounding boards.

"I don't need big names," he said. "Stars come and go. The Bible is my star. This picture will run for years and years."

But Swiss banks, although name - hiding numbers, don't like to hide big losses, like $15 million. So, it may be assumed that all of De Laurentiis' capital, his huge studio building, his entire future as a movie-maker are riding on this one horse, jockeyed by John Huston. It has to win when it opens in New York in November.

"What if this picture fails?" he was asked.

"It cannot fail," he said firmly.

"But what if it does?"

He raised both his arms straight up over his head impatiently. "It is in the hands of God."

NEW CITRUS HOME

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) The Florida Citrus Industry will soon move into a new building which resembles a hugh salad bowl turned upside down. The poured–concrete building, built in geodesic design., encircles 23,000 square feet, is 170 feet in diameter and will be 55 feet high. Tobe completed at a cost of $210,000 the building will house the Florida Citrus Museum, the citrus hall of fame and be the site for the Florida Citrus Showcase.

By Ele and Walt Dulaney

"I'm shy! I'm so self-conscious that I always have the uncomforatable feeling that everyone is staring at me. Whenever I have to give an oral report in school, I start to worry weeks before the assignment is due. And I get all nervous and my knees shake even at the thought of getting in front of the class and having all those pairs of eyes on me!"

We hear this lament disturbingly often from young people. Some of them experience only occasional bouts of self-con - sciousness. Others, however, live with it daily and suffer painfully. They are constantly on guard for fear of saying or doing the wrong thing at the wrong time. They are so busy worrying about the impression they are making that they forget to have a good time.

Do you realize that self-consciousness is actually a very selfish trait? These folks are so concerned with themselves that they become quite insensitive to others.

For example, the self - conscious person never listens to others. He is thinking, "What will I say next: I have to say something good so he won't think I'm dumb!" In fact, some folks become insensitive that they use others as mirrors, merely to reflect whether they are being accepted or rejected.

The self - conscious person needs to realize that he is not always the center of attraction. He just imagines that everyone is watching his every movement, waiting to pounce on him and criticize him at first wrong-doing.

He needs to understand, too, that mistakes are necessary. It is part of the learning - growing process. The blunders he makes will only keep him from friendships if he permits them to do so.

If he learns to laugh off his errors and to accept them, instead of retreating into embarrassed isolation, he will find that others will appreciate him more. For how can others be comfortable with him, if he isn't comfortable and secure with himself?

Now, you may not have a shy bone in your body. But if you have a friend who has this particular problem, and is trying to overcome it, why not give him a helping hand?

How? Simply let him know that you like him and that his friendship means a lot to you. Encourage him to do things, especially when he's reluctant to do them. And most important, set a good example. If you can laugh at your mistakes and brush them off with good humor, he'll probably follow suit. Give it a try.

(A Bell - MClure Syndicate Feature

Ex-Sparring Partner Convicted of Forgery

DENVER (UPI)—Foneda Cox, 35, a sparring partner of former world heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston, was convicted of forgery late Tuesday in Denver District Court.

Cox was accused of forgery in fraudulently obtaining 500 Colorado auto safety inspection stickers from the Motor Vehicle Division office here last Nov. 25.

Authorities said he used the name of Joseph Gash, a licensed safety inspection center manager, to get the stickers for $50. He later sold the stickers at a profit to an unlicensed inspection station.

The jury deliberated 30 minutes before returning the verdict. Dist. Judge Edward J. Keating denied a request that Cox be released on bond pending the outcome of a motion for a new trial.

The boxer, who did not take the stand, could be sentenced to up to 10 years in state prison.

Carroll Baker Worst, Harvard Lampoon Says

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The Harvard Lampoon has announced its annual Hollywood awards and selected Carroll Baker as the worst actress of the year "for all the films she made" in 1964.

In addition, the student humor magazine bestowed its "Roscoe" award upon Miss Baker for displaying "that certain unskilled clumsy quality that has marked Hollywood since early days."

Films sharing top honors for "Worst movie of the year": "The Greatest Story Ever Told," "The Carpetbaggers," and "Station Six Sahara."

Guffey News

By Mrs. George A. West, Phone 689-2558

Canon City schools started their week of spring vacation last Friday afternoon, but they also had Thursday as a day for no school when that area received 15 inches of snow by Thursday morning. The Guffey area only had about three or four inches of new snow at that time, but it is not very often that Canon City receives more snow than we do. We received about three inches more snow Sunday night and there are quite a few places in the roads which have deep ruts in the mud already which seem to promise to be worse before getting better.

Mrs. Don Ankrum and baby son returned home this weekend after being in a Canon City hospital for a week.

Mrs. Louise Hyde and Mrs. Erma West were in Canon City last Friday afternoon on business and shopping.

There were three birthdays in the past few days which we know of. Thursday, March 25, was Erma West's birthday. March 27 was Becky Ownbey's birthday, which she celebrated at a birthday dinner at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Irene Ownbeys, in Canon City. Becky was four years old and is the daughter of the Maurice Ownbeys. George Gary West's birthday was March 29 and was honored by some friends at CSU for the occasion.

Mrs. Lorraine Sadler returned to Guffey this weekend after spending several days in Canon City with a friend.

The Lee Trotts were in Canon City Tuesday taking care of some business.

The Home Extension Clubs for all this area met at Divide, Friday, March 26, for their combined meeting. The subject for this meeting was, "Personal Appearance." It was presented by Mrs. Ann Jackson, clothing specialist from CSU in Fort Collins. Pine Cone Club members who attended this combined meeting were Mrs. Cy Warner and Mrs. Richardson from Cripple Creek.

Farmers Club met at the 4-Mile Hall last Friday evening, but there were just a small numbers of the members in attendance. Nominations for club officers were held and the election will be next month. Bob Campbell was nominated as president, Willard Seymour as vice-president; and Mrs. Don White as secretary-treasurer. After the business meeting refreshments of cookies, jello, coffee and punch were served by Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Seymour.

Mrs. Bob Campbell and girls returned home Saturday noon after spending the past week visiting Mrs. Coon in Denver. The Bill Davidsons spent the week-end at their place in Guffey.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) —A pair of casual bandits donned attendants' caps and waited on several customers after tying and gaging attendant Roy Travis of a suburban filling station. LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Francis J. Rodgers, 2, of Sayre, Pa., accused of threatening to assassinate President Johnson, elected Tuesday to face prosecution in Los Angeles federal court.

At a removal hearing before a U.S. commissioner, Rodgers, a merchant seaman, said he would face the charge in Los Angeles rather than return to Pennsylvania wehre he allegedly made the threat.

Denver's Law Man Linked To Smaldones

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Mayor Tom Currigan said Tuesday the "remote relationship" of attorney Alfred Capra to former gambling figures had nothing to do with his qualifications as Denver's new manager of safety.

Currigan said from Washington by telephone this relationship had nothing to do with Capra's integrity, or qualifications to be Denver's chief law enforcement officer.

The manager of safety heads the police department, sheriff's office, fire department and has licensing responsibilities under Denver's city-county form of government.

Capra's brother, Albert Frank, married a sister of the Smaldones in 1928. Capra said the brother, now 56, was considered to be the family "black sheep."

The brother was reported by police to have been hooked up with the Smaldones in gambling and bootlegging during the 1960s. But Capra said he had been "straight as a spike since 1953."

Currigan, who is attending President Johnson's mayors conference, said he had full confidence in Capra's ability and honesty.

"I'm prepared to stick with him," the mayor said.

HELPED THE WIDOW

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — A certificate of patent was issued more than five years after the death of an employe who suggested an improved method of manufacturing fence-end cups.

Mrs. Maxie Smart received the certificate on behalf of Edwin A. Nelson, who died in 1959 at the age of 40 after a heart attack.

Nelson's invention was in connection with the employe suggestion plan of the U.S. Steel and Wire Division. The drawing on notebook paper was developed by the Cyclone Fence firm's engineers.

NEW PRODUCTS BRING NEWHAZARDS

The Occupational Health, Research, and Training Facility in Cincinnati has scientific detectives just as important to us as the FBI. These men go into action whenever confronted with the sudden appearance of an unfamiliar disease. At present they are on the trail of the cause of a chronic chest disease among soft coal miners in West Virginia.

These workers are bothered with a chornic cough and difficulty in breathing. Symptoms are severe enough to interfere with working capacity and may shorten life. The ailment is baffling and may be unrelated to their occupation. It could stem from air poiiution & a thorough investigation of the miners and nonminers of 2 communities is being made. This public health group also is investigating ways to improve the safety of uranium mining. The incidence of lung cancer is high among these men.

According to the Medical Tribune, most new disease are manifested by a skin rash. A few years ago, a group of Atlanta teen-agers broke out with a severe dermatitis of the face. They attended a party where Haitian swizzle sticks were given out as favors. The device consisted of a bamboo stick topped with a voodoo doll head. The latter was a cashew nut with jequirity nuts for eyes. The shell of the cashew nut had to be broken to insert the eyes. This released its toxic oil which is closely related to poison ivy. Jequirity nuts also are poisonous. The sticks were withdrawn immediately from the market.

An outbreak of asthma and dermatitis among longshoremen was traced to castor bean dust, which is used as a fertilizer. Changes in the manufacturing process solved this problem.

The prevention of occupational hazards is a movement that began 50 years ago. Between 1912 and 1962, accidental work deaths were reduced 67 per cent. The worker is safer on the job than away from it. It is a never-ending task because advanced technology creates new health hazards.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addresed envelope accompanies request.

CATARACTS AND OCCUPATION

C. K. writes: Is cataract more likely to occur in people who have used their eyes in close work for many years? Would laborers be less likely than office workers to develop this condition?

REPLY

No. Cataract usually is an aging process that occurs regardless of whether the person does manual labor or clerical work.

TONSIL DEBRIS

Mrs. A. writes: Is it possible for food particles to settle in pockets around the tonsils and cause a disagreeable odor?

REPLY

Yes, especially when the surface of the tonsil looks like a sponge and the pockets are filled with decaying food, dried saliva, or infected material.

SHRINKING MASS

Mrs. B. writes: If a lump in the breast gets smaller, is this a sign it is not malignant?

REPLY

No, but this change lessens the chance that the swelling is cancerous. Malignant tumors may enlarge when inflamed and get smaller as infection or irritation subsides.

SAME THING

J. M. writes: Is there a difference between hemorrhoids and piles?

REPLY

No. The word piles comes from the Latin pila, meaning ball, and refers to the protrusion of the enlarged, blood-filled hemorrhoidal vein.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Statics now show that one out of every four of us will develop cancer before we die! So we are all vitally interested in any possibly remedy. That's why this dental surgeon at Little Rock asked me about the controversial new anti-cancer substance called Krebiozen. Scrapbook this case and tomorrow's follow-up.

By GEORGE W. CRANE Ph. D., M. D.

"Dr. Crane," one of the dental surgeons began, "I have a medical question.

"Since you are from Chicago where the controversy has been raging about the anti-cancer substanced called Krebiozen, what is your candid opinion of it?

"For one of my patients is dying of cancer. His pysicians all give him no more than 3 or 4 weeks to live.

"Do you think Krebiozen might help him? And what is the theory behind it?"

Karin Walsh, one of the astute editors of our Chicago SUN TIMES, was presiding at a meeting of high school editors where I was to give the banquet address.

And Karin gave me my first report on Krebiozen.

It had been used as a final attempt to stop the terrific pain of a friend of Karin's mother, who was dying of cancer and whose pain could not be controlled by our standard medical drugs or morphine.

"Dr. Crane," Karin said, "Dr. Andrew C. Ivy graciously sent some Krebiozen to this elderly woman's doctor and she was pain-free within about 48 hours.

"Although she passed away about a month later, at least her final four weeks with her family were free from agony. She smiled and was happy."

With that prelude, I have since contacted Dr. Ivy, who was my professor of physiology at our Northwestern University Medical School.

Remember, our American Medical Association recommended Dr. Ivy to our State Department as the greatest medical scientist in the U.S.A., back in the late 1940s!

So Dr. Ivy was sent to Germany to represent American medicine at the Nuremberg trial of German medics who had been accused of using human beings as guinea pigs for medical experimentation during the Hitler regime.

Dr. Ivy, since 1917, has been urging scientists to look upon cancer as an evidence of the breakdown in our natural immunity to cancer which most of us have in childhood.

Most diabetics also develop that ailment in middle age, although many younger diabetics are to be found.

But the typical diabetic is diagnosed after the age of 40, with sugar in his urine.

At the age of 25, he was perfectly health and normal. So why should his body lack enough insluin at the age of 40 or 50?

Well, his 100 per cent daily production of insulin has waned, so the diabetic "borrows" an extra supply of insulin from an outside source to be injected under his skin and thus bring his inner quota back up to 100 per cent.

Cancer may thus be regarded as a similar reduction at middle age in our earlier natural immunity to malignant tumor growths!

"So," says Dr. Ivy, "why not borrow the immunity of some other healthy animal and inject it till we bring the cancer patient's reduced resistance back up to the 100 per cent level?" (More tomorrow).

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Committee Kills Proposal for Betting at Fairs

DENVER (AP) — A Senate committee has killed legislation to allow race track betting at the Colorado State Fair and county fairs.

The key vote in the Senate Institutions Committee was 4-3 on a motion to table the bill indefinitely.

Two House measures are involved: One authorizing parimutuel wagering at fairs and the other reducing the state's normal share of the revenue from race meets held in conjunction with fairs.

Pueblo legislators backed the bills in both the House and Senate in hopes of stimulating attendance and producing revenue at the State Fair.

But they encountered, in the committee, a strong feeling that gambling should not be encouraged at state and county fairs.

Sen. Ed Lamm, R-Grand Junction, said some persons who follow racing "are not the kind of people who have a good influence on children. Gambling tends to bring in a bad element," he contended.

The track that would be used for racing at the Pueblo fair," he said, "is close to dormitories and dining hall used by 4-H Club youth."

Sen. Richard Hobbs, D-Pueblo, argued that the racing program would be run almost entirely separate from other parts of the fair — midway and exhibits. He said each would attract its own group of supporters.

Hobbs said Pueblo businessmen and fair officials want racing to help give a boost to the fair.

BIG THIRST

NEW YORK (UPI) — It takes a lot of bottles to slake America's thirst. It takes, in fact, about 9 billion bottles a year, according to the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute.

Beer accounts for almost half of this bottle parade, with soft drink and wine and liquor bottles accounting for almost equal shares of the rest. But even this bottle countdown isn't an accurate count of America's thirst because returnable beer and soda pop bottles make between 20 and 30 trips each, GCMI explained.

INSTANT ROAD—Flexible aluminum road rolls off a large cylinder mounted on the back of an Army truck. It then passes beneath the truck's wheels and, presto, a ribbon of road is left behind. It opens the way to nearly normal travel in areas of uneven terrain, swamp and sand.

Four Young Men Launch New Bank of Their Own

By RICHARD L. GRAVES

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — In a supposedly security-conscious era, why would a young man abandon bright prospects of authority, prestige and income to make his own way in highly competitive commercial banking?

Ask the four young managers of the new Hamden National Bank — each under 30 years of age — why they would cut loose from virtualy assured futures as executives with one of the world's largest banks.

The answers boil down to "independence."

"You might say our desire is really to carry out the role of executive at a young age," said Donald P. Calcagnini, 29, chairman and president of the new bank. He and John D. Kelley, 28, vice president and cashier, were the prime movers in getting the new bank established.

It opens Wednesday in a temporary location.

"In both of us there was a strong desire to work for ourselves," said Kelley.

Calcagnini and Kelley hatched the idea of starting their own financial institution while both were in the elite executive training program at the Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's second largest.

"At first we talked about organizing an investment firm," said Calcagnini. "We also discussed starting a finance company in Suffolk County, N.Y."

"Then we said: 'Let's use our experience. We're trained commercial bankers.' "

So they recruited two Chase Manhattan colleagues, Douglas S. Lasher, 29, now vice president, and Allan R. Damsky, 29, now assistant vice president.

Despite their lack of years, they give every indication of having absorbed a lot of banking know-how from their university and professional training. Calcagnini has a masters degree in finance from the University of Pennsylvania in addition to a bachelor's degree from Notre Dame.

All are family men — 11 children among them. The families are as committed to the bank's success as the managers.

"If this had flopped," said Calcagnini wryly, "Nineteen people would have gone off the bridge."

The process of organizing a bank is complicated and often frustrating.

The young bankers settled on Hamden after months of study. With a population of 46,000, it was one of the highest per capita and disposable income levels in the country. Almost as important was the fact the town had no bank of its own, though it has branches of institutions based in nearby New Haven.

The managers organized a board of directors from among Hamden businessmen, then floated a stock issue to finance the new bank.

"Our stock was oversubscribed," said Calcagnini. That means demand for stock in the new venture exceeded supply.

At first, youth presented something of a liability. Age tends to be equated with wisdom.

"Our first step to meet that problem was to put together a board of leading respected people of this community, a mature board of directors," said Calcagnini.

Under construction now is their building, third step in housing the infant bank. The young men started in a trailer, then moved to a store across the street from the Hamden court house.

"The new building will be a contemporary structure designed to project youth and aggressiveness," said Calcagnini.

Did they ever think along the way that perhaps they were in over their heads?

Calcagnini answered: "There were many obstacles. But we had our minds made up and we got over them. We were convinced we could accomplish it. We never thought that we couldn't do it. If we had ever started thinking negatively, at any point, we would not have made it."

Importing of Model T Could Be Expensive

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) —Fred Stugard drove his 1915 Model T off the Queen Elizabeth Tuesday and ran into a tax roadblock.

The customs men told him: "You can't bring her in unless you pay taxes — 25 per cent sales tax, 15 per cent, import tax, 15 per cent import surcharge."

"Not so," said the customs officer. "An article must be 100 years old before it is classed as antique and the Tin Lizzie wasn't even invented then."

An argument on the Model T's value followed.

Stugard said he paid $2,800 for the car. But he didn't see why he should pay tax on all that when it was sold 50 years ago for only $375.

A valuation expert was called from London. But before he arrived a solution was found — Stugard didn't have to pay a penny.

"I've been based in Britain some time and they were taking me as a resident," he said.

"But when they examined my passport more closely they found that with holidays on the Continent taken into account I've spent less than 12 months here in the past two years.

"That means I haven't established residence and they've let the Lizzie in tax-free on a year's visitor's permit."
